Coal Deadlock To Be Taken to Roosevelt Today

Lewis Blames Mine Tie-up on Labor Department's Failure To Back Up Union

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—Negotiators for Appalachian coal operators and C. I. O. union miners will meet President Roosevelt in the White House at noon tomorrow in an effort to settle their two-month dispute over a new labor contract and thus reopen the idle mines of the 26-State bituminous area.

The invitation was extended tonight by Secretary of Labor Perkins.

She acted soon after John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers and of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, made public a letter to Dr. John R. Steelman, Labor Department conciliator, blaming the Roosevelt Administration—specifically her own department—for the long shutdown.

Strikes Out at Operators

At the same time she announced the negotiators' acceptance of the White House invitation, the Secretary struck out at the operators.

She asserted that in refusing to continue operations, pending negotiations, under the old contract, which expired March 31, they had been guilty of a "violation of the principle, of the ethics, of collective bargaining."

"Among the things which are generally accepted," she said, "is that every effort should be made to continue operations."

She said the union on four occasions had offered to continue nine operations during negotiations.

She likewise remarked that there was "hunger" in mining towns.

The failure of the negotiations turned some 460,000 miners to idleness.

Miss Perkins emphasized that the President's role would be that of "a mediator." She will sit in, and it was understood she would confer beforehand with Mr. Roosevelt.

Lewis had said earlier in a blunt letter to Dr. Steelman:

"Failure of the Roosevelt Administration to approve or sustain the mine workers' offer to keep the industry in operation caused many coal operators to believe that they had carte blanche to disembowel the mine workers, union if they could. In consequence, your (Labor) Department must accept responsibility for its own administrative blunder.

Government Will Act

Secretary Perkins did not comment directly on Lewis' letter. She said, however, that if an agreement was not reached quickly to reopen the closed mines, the Government would be forced to take "a practical course to get the coal moving."

Unless an agreement was signed quickly, she added, the Government must make "one, two, three recommendations."

She did not specify what those might be, but added at that point that a "practical course" might be adopted for supplying coal to in-

Maritime Board Rejects CIO Demands

Refuses to Permit Government Masters To Pick Own Crews

Threatened with a West Coast shipping strike, the Maritime Commission yesterday flatly turned down C. I. O. demands for union hiring of personnel on Government-owned ships.

In a memorandum to Harry Bridges, Pacific C. I. O. director, Commission Chairman Emory S. Land said he would not direct the masters of four Government vessels, soon to operate on a Seattle-Orient run, to use their own judgment in selecting crews. The refusal was a rejection of a demand made by Bridges and a C. I. O. delegation last Friday that the seamen be recruited from union hiring halls.

In answer, Bridges' delegation yesterday issued a statement declaring that "the only result of the commission's present position and interpretation of the law will be to force a showdown and will ultimately involve the entire Pacific Coast."

Bridges Supports Lundeberg

Recently Harry Lundeberg, A. F. L. West Coast maritime leader, threatened a strike unless the Government hired seamen from union halls. Bridges' demands supported Lundeberg, although the two have been bitter enemies for more than a year.

The commission also turned down a second "question" of Bridges, asking whether it would support the Wallgren bill, which would prescribe union hiring for commission ships. Land said that the commission could not indicate its position on pending legislation without first clearing through the Budget Bureau and the Congressional committee which referred the legislation to it.

Bridges' statement said that his Maritime Federation of the Pacific Coast had been flatly rejected by the commission in "every attempt to settle this matter peacefully."

Mother and Child Hurt in Accident Going to Hospital

A Brentwood, Md., mother and her 4-year-old son were injured here last night when the ambulance taking them to a Washington hospital crashed with an auto at Rhode Island avenue and North Capitol street.

Mrs. Mabel Elizabeth Peake, 34, of 3711 Campbell street, Brentwood, suffered severe head injuries and was taken to Sibley Hospital. Her son, Kenneth, was brought to Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, where the ambulance had been carrying him for an abscess operation. Physicians, however, were unable to operate because of the head injuries the child had suffered in the collision.

The ambulance was driven by Jesse R. Brotherton, 39, of the Brentwood Volunteer Rescue Squad; the car, by Arthur E. Middleton, 68, of 25 Bryant street northeast.

Custody of Margaret, 8, and Alexandra, 2, was granted Mrs. Hagner.

Dairy Books Subpenaed In Milk Fight

Westerners Defend Cream Imports; Embassy-Fairfax Workers Testify

By James D. Secrest.

Members of the House subcommittee on public health clashed heatedly yesterday as witnesses disclosed alleged "bootlegging" activities of the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy over a period of several years. At the same time records of the dairy were seized under subpena of the sub-committee.

Western members of the subcommittee went to defense of the dairy, which reputedly had been buying cream and selling it for fluid consumption in violation of the District milk act, and joined in a severe cross-examination of the witnesses, former employes of the dairy.

Chairman Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, and Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, flared into an angry exchange after Shafer had insinuated that J. Edward Burroughs, sub-committee counsel, was gathering evidence under direction of Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal.

Import Bill Filed

Other developments as the inquiry resumed:

Independent producers and members of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association clashed as Clarence V. Dye, of Frederick, an independent shipper, took the stand.

Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, introduced a bill to amend the District milk act to permit importation of milk and cream that has been certified by State or county health authorities.

Chairman Bates announced that spokesmen for consumers will be given an opportunity to testify before the inquiry ends.

Cream From Melted Butter

The intra-committee clash occurred after Owen Keyes, accountant formerly employed by Embassy-Fairfax, testified the dairy purchased cream from Western sources and sold it for fluid consumption and melted unsalted, sweetened butter and mixed it with skimmed milk to make cream.

Shafer developed the fact Keyes had first told his story to an assistant of the corporation counsel and that he had been employed since May 1 by the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

"I would like to know who is conducting this investigation," Shafer exploded. "Is it our attorney or the corporation counsel? It looks to me like this is a pure and unadulterated attempt to smear a certain dairy. Is our attorney going to be a tool of the corporation counsel?"

Shafer Rebuked

Chairman Bates, his face a bit white, turned quietly to Shafer and reminded him he had made a speech on the House floor recently complaining that the sub-committee was doing nothing.

"If you had been more attentive," he added, "you would have known that an appropriation already had been obtained. Nobody is trying to smear anybody, and at the same

Lauer to Leave New York Bench, Investigator Says

Albany, N. Y., May 8 (U.P.).—Chairman Benjamin Feinberg of the Senat Judiciary Committee announced tonight that Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Lauer, of New York City, will resign about June 15.

The committee had been considering information presented by United States Attorney John T. Cahill, of New York, regarding Lauer's alleged "participation" in smuggling activities. Lauer's wife was sentenced to a Federal jail term on smuggling charges.

Charley Ross Found Again; Jury Rules He's the Real One

By the Associated Press.

Phoenix, Ariz., May 8.—After hearing brief, uncontested testimony, a Superior Court jury decided in eight minutes today that Gustav Blair, 69-year-old Phoenix carpenter, is Charley Ross, whose kidnaping in Germantown, Pa., 65 years ago shocked the Nation.

Blair filed the civil action to establish his identity. He named as defendants Walter L. Ross, Sophia Ross, Marian K. Ross and Anne C. Ross, all of Germantown, other children of Christian K. Ross, father of the kidnaped child.

Charley, then 4, and Walter Ross were kidnaped from the grounds of their parents' home in July, 1874. Walter was released, but the two kidnapers demanded $20,000 for Charley's return. His father offered to pay, but not without delivery of the boy, and the child never was returned.

Blair testified he had determined by family traits, likeness and other means that he is the missing Charley Brewster Ross. Lincoln C. Miller, Phoenix, whose family reared Blair, testified his (Miller's) father had told him Blair was the kidnaped child. Miller added he had guarded the 4-year-old child in a cave.

Duke Asks Check on War Propaganda in Dramatic Radio Appeal From Verdun; Broadcast Withheld in Britain and Canada

By the Associated Press.

Verdun, France, May 8.—The Duke of Windsor broke the silence of his 2½-year exile tonight with a dramatic radio appeal to "all political leaders" to rise above "purely national interests" to avoid war.

His words carried, it was understood, the approval of his brother, George VI of England.

Before the Duke spoke from this famous World War battle sector, a responsible source said he had exchanged radio communications with his brother, the King, who was aboard the Empress of Australia en route to America on a good-will tour.

King George was understood to have given his personal sanction for the peace broadcast, although the Duke in his speech made it plain he spoke for no one but himself and "without the previous knowledge of any government."

He urged national leaders to bury their "jealousies and suspicions" to negotiate by "mutual concessions in which conflicting claims can be adjusted."

The speech had aroused a widespread impression that the Duke

Release Idle Bank Hoard, Hopkins Urges

Secretary, Outlining Recovery Plans, Says Spending Must Go On

Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, holding his first press conference yesterday in several weeks, outlined the following Administration program for business recovery:

Continuation of the spending policy, as outlined by President Roosevelt in his annual and budget messages to Congress last January, for at least another 12 months.

Stimulation of the use of the unprecedentedly huge hoard of idle bank funds in every way possible.

Looking thin but better after a ten-week "rest cure" from an influenza attack of last winter, the former Works Progress Administration head remarked that it was "extremely important during the next 12 months" that the spending policy be continued.

"That is one phase," he said. "The other is that we shall do everything we can to stimulate the use of private funds. Government spending won't do the whole trick."

He accused the United States Chamber of Commerce of "defeatism" because of the resolutions it adopted condemning Administration policies and laws at its annual meeting here last week.

"I don't think for a moment," he declared, "that the resolutions rep-

Senate Votes $338,000,000 Farm Relief

Action Taken in Face Of Treasury Warning To Check Deficits

By Robert C. Albright.

In the face of a Treasury warning that deficit appropriations have gone far enough, the Senate yesterday without a record vote approved an unbudgeted $338,000,000 for farm parity price payments and surplus removal.

The Senate action almost coincided with a statement by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau that farm bill increases "disturb me greatly."

Morgenthau received the press following luncheon at the White House and his assertion that increases over budget estimates should be accompanied by taxes to finance them was understood to reflect the views of the President.

"Taxation More Difficult"

The Treasury chief said the Senate action "makes the problem of taxation more difficult" and he significantly added that "it will be up to Congress to find revenues to meet the added expenditures." In response to a question, he said he felt the time had come to start tapering off the Government's high deficits.

While the Morgenthau press conference was in progress, the Senate approved without a dissenting vote $225,000,000 to build farm prices to-

40 Children Saved In Hospital Fire

Baltimore, May 8 (A.P.).—Forty crippled children were carried on stretchers to safety after fire broke out in the administration building of the Children's Hospital School today.

Twenty-five nurses aided doctors in removing the children, many of whom were infantile paralysis victims. They were returned to the hospital after firemen extinguished the blaze, which spread from an incinerator to the roof.

Europe Normal, Says Son James

New York, May 8 (A.P.).—James Roosevelt, the President's eldest son and motion picture company executive returning today on the liner Queen Mary from Europe, said that the Continent "seemed fairly normal and not in danger of war."

He added he did not want to say anything other than "the obvious thing, because Mr. Samuel Goldwyn, of the film company, has asked me not to."

British Get Nazi Alloy Through U.S.

Monopoly Group Told of Struggle For New Metal Vital for Planes

A tale of international struggle over patent rights to a new metal alloy said to be of great military importance was unfolded yesterday before the Temporary National Economic Committee.

Asserting that beryllium-nickel had been used in German airplane manufacture with "tremendous success," Andrew J. Gahagan, president of the Beryllium Corporation, of Temple, Pa., described to the committee his efforts to obtain production rights in this country—efforts which he said ultimately involved a test of strength between a German firm and unofficial representatives of the British government.

Net result of his testimony was development of the fact that the British had forced a change in his arrangements with German producers so Great Britain now is obtaining the German-developed product for her own planes through purchases from the American company.

Necessary in Aviation

The future of aviation depends on development of beryllium nickel, Gahagan said, because materials now used are not strong enough for planes designed to travel 500 or more miles an hour.

Gahagan said that nine years ago he discovered Germans were far ahead of the United States in development of the metal. German patents, held by the Siemans-Halske Co., of Berlin, had been filed in this country.

Siemans-Halske, however, had not prosecuted the patents in the United States because they feared the Patent Office here would discriminate against foreign inventors, testified Dr. F. H. Hirschland, president of the Metal & Thermit Co., of New York. Dr. Hirschland said he had reassigned the patents to Siemans-Halske in 1933.

Divided World Supply

Gahagan declared that for more than three years he had attempted to obtain production rights, which were held tight under the Siemans-Halske patents. Finally, he said, he went to Germany, and met Dr. William Rohn, head of the beryllium division of Siemans-Halske, and a former member of the German army general staff.

As the culmination of his efforts to obtain American production rights, Gahagan said he entered into cross-licensing agreements with Siemans-Halske, by which, in effect, he and Rohn "divided the world" in respect to beryllium production.

Under the contract, the German firm was to have exclusive production rights for Europe while Gahagan's Beryllium Corp. would control the alloy for the entire Western Hemisphere.

British Force Change

On a subsequent trip to Europe, however, Gahagan said he met Chairman Jameson, of Vickers-Armstrong, Ltd., British munitions firm. Gahagan said Jameson declared beryllium would be the most important metal in the next war, particularly important to England be-

Commons Votes $150,000,000 for Military Training

London, May 9 (A.P.).—The House of Commons approved a resolution appropriating approximately $150,000,000 for military training, concluding a 14½ hour session at 5:15 a. m.

It was the longest Parliamentary session in two years, and there was a 6½-hour debate during which the labor opposition complained it was denied information on how the money would be spent.

Pius May Ask Five-Power Danzig Parley

Britain Expresses Willingness to Mediate Nazi-Polish Dispute

Special Cable to The Post.

London, May 8.—Diplomatic circles believed tonight that Pope Pius XII is proposing a five-power conference to settle the German Polish dispute.

This report, bolstered by disclosure that Mgr. William Godfrey, apostolic delegate to the United Kingdom, had called on Viscount Halifax during the week-end, came on the heels of these developments:

Information reached London that Reichsfuehrer Hitler had increased his demands on Poland to include Polish adherence to the anti-Comintern pact, and abandonment of her alliances with Britain and France.

Anglo-Soviet negotiations were renewed with the delivery of British proposals that Moscow declare its willingness to give eastern European countries any assistance they may ask if attacked by Germany or Italy, and to accept a British-French pledge that Russian action would not be necessary until French and British armies were actually in the field.

Announcement that Great Britain is willing, if invited, to extend its "good offices" in mediating the Danzig question.

Reports that Soviet Russia has offered military guarantees identical with the Anglo-French pledges given Rumania and Greece, to all nations along its western frontier.

Indications of possible Vatican intercession in behalf of peace first appeared last Friday when it became known that the Nuncio to Berlin had conferred at length with Hitler at Berchtesgaden.

Subsequently, representatives of the Holy See have conferred with French Foreign Minister Bonnet, and, it is believed, with Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano. Mgr. Godfrey is understood to have out-

Navy Funds Voted

By the overwhelming vote of 296 to 58, the House passed the naval appropriation bill yesterday, approving a record peacetime outlay of $773,420,241 for expanding the Navy next year.

Funds for constructing two 45,000-ton battleships, to be the largest in the world, 21 other warships and 500 planes are included in the bill, which also provides a chain of strategically located bases and money for routine maintenance of the naval establishment. With $58,300,000 made available in contract authorization, the unprecedented total of $831,720,000 will be available for the Navy beginning July 1.

3 Mid-Pacific Bases

Under an amendment written into the measure before passage, $2,947,000 was added for air bases on the Mid-Pacific islands of Midway, Johnston and Palmyra. Funds for new air bases in Alaska, Puerto Rico, Hawaii and continental United States already were contained in the bill.

Meanwhile, Secretary of War Woodring announced plans for speeding up the Army's air training program so as to double its active pilot force in two years. To train 5,000 pilots in two years, increase the number of active fliers from 2,375 to 4,663, and start building up a reserve force, the course at the Air Corps Training Center will be cut from a year to six months. Preliminary instruction will be given at nine civilian schools.

Wake Base Dropped

The Pacific air base amendment was sponsored by the Appropriations Committee, after President Roosevelt was understood to have sent word he wanted the "outposts" started now. In recommending the funds, however, the committee compromised with proponents of the bases in dropping similar plans at Wake Island.

Wake lies west of the 180th meridian, which Republicans consider should be "our first line of defense" in the Pacific. The other three are east of the line. Congress authorized bases on all four islands earlier this session, and funds for all were asked by the President.

House Votes Fund To Make Navy Safes Spy-Proof

Navy secrets will be well guarded against the safe-cracking efforts of international spies, if the Senate approves of an appropriation voted by the House yesterday.

Funds provided in the Navy supply bill will permit old-type steel safes at Navy yards and operating bases to be enclosed in electrically shielded cabinets equipped with time locks, which would summon the Marines if tampered with, officials said.

18 Die as Plane Falls in Heart Of Guayaquil, Fires Buildings

By the Associated Press.

Guayaquil, Ecuador, May 8.—A military airplane crashed in downtown Guayaquil today, taking the lives of at least 18 persons in the crash and fire that started from an explosion of the plane's gasoline tanks.

Piloted by Capt. Cristobal and Warrant Officer Galo Espinoza, the plane suddenly plunged to the city streets.

Fire spread quickly from the exploding gasoline tanks and destroyed four houses before it could be controlled.

The two aviators were burned to death in their plane. A mechanic was slightly hurt.

First rescue efforts resulted in the extraction of 16 charred bodies from ruins of the houses. Authorities feared other dead and injured would be discovered.

Dr. Jose Vicente Trujillo, an Ecuadorean delegate to the recent Washington boundary conference with Peru, saved himself by jumping from an office balcony of one of the burning buildings. Other prominent lawyers in the building followed his lead.

The aviators were en route from Quito to the local airport. Their plane fell as they were executing maneuvers over the city.

FANTASY AT CONEY ISLAND

Did Roosevelt and Hitler actually meet last year off the Azores islands?

An eminent journalist named Art Krock has started a story that the President tried to make a date with Adolf in midocean.

But dat .e White House just smiles a gentle, Mona Lisa sort of a denial. It don't say nuthin'. It just keeps rollin'.

. . . resemblance? Here are the facts.

It was a date. But not at the Azores. At first Hitler didn't want to come at all.

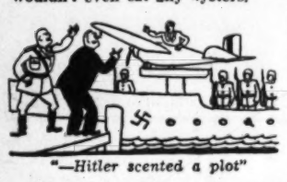
"Some one might plug me," he said simply.

For the same reason, oddly enough, Goebbels urged him to go. But the first meeting, off Chincoteague island, was a flop.

* * * *

Hitler suspected a kidnaping plot, and sat in his plane on the catapult of the German destroyer offshore, refusing to land, ready to be catapulted back toward Germany at the first false move.

Roosevelt just stood there and yelled at him to come ashore. I get it from the same guys who told Krock, practically. The Fuehrer wouldn't even eat any oysters.



"—Hitler scented a plot"

The next meeting, off Galapagos, was also a bust.

It turned out Hitler was no fisherman; never been fishing in his life . . . He spent a night aboard Roosevelt's cruiser, and was entertained with a movie. It happened to be a Chaplin movie (Steve Early chose it) and Hitler returned to Munich next morning. First, though, he asked if radio reception of his speeches was O. K.

Even that long ago, however, Hitler confided to FDR his hope (confirmed this week by "news dispatches" from Berlin) to induce Russia to join the anti-bolshevik (anti-comintern) front. "Das ist logik, no?" he said.

By this time Goebbels had demonstrated that Hitler's doubles could orate and run the country as competently as Adolf himself. So this spring he met Roosevelt and Mussolini again, this time off Coney Island.

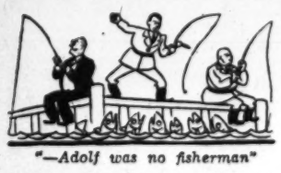
They were to have gone ashore and held the conference in the Fun House, but someone told Hitler he might run into a non-Aryan on the boardwalk.

* * * *

Hitler charged that a German kibitzer at a pinochle game in St. Louis had suffered a black eye, and demanded reparations . . .

He demanded that half the beer sold at American ball parks and race tracks be imported from Germany.

He accused Americans of mistreating Aryan Indians by making them wait in front of barber shops.



"—Adolf was no fisherman"

His keen knowledge of American affairs amazed Roosevelt.

"Ah, you've been boning up!" said FDR. "Naughty, naughty!"

Adolf demanded that one alderman in very American city council be a member of the Bund.

That (as Mr. Krock will remember) was the week-end when Hitler made five three-hour speeches.

* * * *

There were other conferences on other islands: Helgoland, the Isle of Man, Blennerhasset, St. Helena. Some were attended by Hitler, some by his doubles. Mussolini often came, too, but usually got tired of listening to Hitler and went motorboating. Occasionally Art Krock would drop in, off a passing yacht.

The story began to get around the seven seas that Roosevelt and Hitler were cooking up something. Once, after a cup of hot chocolate Hitler confided that he had only 114 planes at the time of the Munich crisis, and kept flying them round and round.

* * * *

Eventually the negotiations boiled down to one demand: Hitler would stop rattling Goering's sword if Chaplin would leave his mustache off in his next movie, about a dictator . . . That's where (Krock doesn't know this) the negotiations stand right now. Roosevelt claims he can't force Chaplin to leave off his mustache, and Chaplin says "Let Hitler shave off his own mustache."

Maybe they'll meet at the Azores this summer; perhaps Art Krock can bring 'em together. Probably this story will be denied. I anticipate the denials. All I can do is deny the denials. It might be a good idea to lure Hitler out of Germany, at that.

These meetings, of course, occurred only in a Pickwickian sense.

Labor Board Opposes All AFL Changes

Denies Bias on Unions; Suggests Consideration Of Four Fundamentals

By the Associated Press.

The National Labor Relations Board, denying charges of partisanship toward any union or prejudice against any employer, took exception yesterday to all proposed amendments to the Wagner act, but suggested consideration be given four fundmaental changes.

In a 40,000-word report to the House Labor Committee, the board opposed suggestions of the American Federation of Labor and half a dozen members of Congress for basic revisions of the law. These proposals ranged from abolition of the three-man board to outlawing of strikes

Further Study Proposed

The four propositions which the board said merited "further consideration in the light of facts which may be produced" were:

The question of giving employers the right to petition for an election to determine their employes' bargaining agent.

Congressional definition of board procedure for determining which bargaining unit is best qualified to represent employes.

Curtailment of the board's power to invalidate contracts between an employer and a union.

A requirement that hearings on board complaints start 10 or 15 days, instead of five, after the complaint is filed.

Court Victories Cited

Analyzing seven House bills calling for revision of the Wagner act or changes in administrative procedure, the board cited statistics and court decisions to deny prejudice against the American Federation of Labor or employers as a class.

The board estimated that 42 per cent of cases adjusted without formal hearings were settled in favor of employers and that the Supreme Court had upheld the board in 77.8 per cent of its cases, as contrasted with a 64 per cent average for Federal administrative agencies.

"Does this unusually successful court record indicate undue bias against employers?" the board asked.

Denying also that it had favored the C. I. O over the A. F. of L., the board insisted that cases from both unions have been handled identically.

Against Board Increase

The report was particulrly critical of suggestions by Representative Anderson (Democrat), of Missouri, and others that employers be granted more leeway in expressing opinions regarding unionization of workers.

Passage of Anderson's bill, the board said, would make the Wagner act an "innocuous instrument."

In opposition to proposals for increasing size of the labor board, the report quoted a letter from Chief Justice Hughes in 1937 saying that an increase in the number of Supreme Court Justices would not promote the court's efficiency.

The grant of unlimited rights to employers to petition for collective bargaining elections, the report continued, would "seriously prejudice the guarantee of employes' self-organization.

Critic Held Superficial

"By initiating a proceeding when a labor organization had just started an organizational campaign in his plant," it explained, "an employer could force a vote at a time when the labor organization was sure to lose an election."

The board took issue with the contention of Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, that the Wagner act should be amended to "equalize" rights of employers and employes.

"It is true that the act imposes obligations only upon employers, rather than employes," the report said, "but to attribute 'one-sidedness' to the act for that reason is patently superficial and unrealistic. No sound basis exists for the argument that the act must be 'equalized.'"

A. F. L. Insists on Bias

Resuming testimony before the Senate Labor Committee, Joseph A. Padway, counsel for the American Federation of Labor, asserted that Edwin S. Smith, Labor Board member, was "committed to a policy of destruction of all A. F. L. unions."

Padway rejected an indirect suggestion by Chairman Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, that restoration of unity in the labor movement might make amendment of the labor act less desirable from the viewpoint of the A. F. L.

"These amendments should be adopted regardless of the division in labor," Padway asserted, referring to changes put forward by the A. F. L.

Thomas said he had been "harshly criticized" for seeking postponement of hearings on labor amendments pending A. F. L.-C. I. O. peace negotiations, but that after nearly four weeks of hearings "a major portion of our time has been spent on the controversy between the A. F. L. and the C. I. O."

Pay Law to Revive Apprenticeships, L. S. Hawkins Says

America is facing a revival of the apprenticeship system in industry, L. S. Hawkins, chief of the trade and industrial service of the United States Office of Education, told members of the Washington Vocational Association last night at a meeting in the Roosevelt High School.

The chief reason, he explained, was the new wages and hours law which exempts apprentices from statutory wage minimums. Another reason, he added, was the minimums imposed upon industry by collective bargaining agreements.

Members of the House cheered yesterday as Chairman Mansfield (Democrat), Texas, of the House Rivers and Harbors Committee returned to the floor after an absence of several weeks because of illness.

MANSFIELD

The 78-year-old veteran legislator, who has gotten around in a wheelchair for nearly two decades, drew the applause of Republicans as well as Democrats as he rolled from the cloak room onto the floor near the Speaker's stand.

Another Texan and chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Representative Sumners, was recuperating in a local hospital from a minor operation last week. Physicians said Sumners probably would leave the hospital in a week or ten days.

The Senate unanimously confirmed yesterday the nomination of Harcourt A. Morgan for another term as a director of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Morgan will serve until May 18, 1948. He has been chairman of the TVA since President Roosevelt removed A. E. Morgan from the board of directors last year.

The Senate also confirmed the nomination of Daniel C. Roper, former Secretary of Commerce, to be minister to Canada.

Representative Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, introduced a bill proposing a five-year super-highway program, providing for 64 routes and many alternatives. The measure authorizes a bond issue of $5,000,000,000 and calls for completion of the program in five years.

Statements made to Representative Wheat (Republican), Illinois, that school children were being taught to swear allegiance to Adolf Hitler in German-operated camps in Illinois will be placed before the Dies committee for investigation.

The statements were contained in a letter Wheat received from Robert P. Shonkwiler, attorney of Monticello, Ill., and a former State's attorney for Piatt County.

Shonkwiler said William B. Soules, a Boy Scout director of Decator, Ill., in an address at Monticello, "described how young children were taught to swear allegiance to Hitler and the German government."

A bill forbidding advertising of any alcoholic beverage by radio broadcasting was introduced by Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee. Doughton introduced the bill by request.

resent the point of view of the great mass of businessmen of America."

Only about 150 of the 1,500 delegates were present at the concluding general session which adopted the resolutions, he declared. "I assume," he added, "that half a dozen people drafted them."

He said he could not understand "the state of mind of people who take a defeatist attitude that the private economic system cannot be made to work." He insisted that it could be made to work.

Although he said he had not read the chamber resolutions, he remarked that, judging from newspaper reports and editorial comments, "you would assume that some of them (the chamber speakers) did not even believe in our economic system."

"They certainly spread a lot of gloom around this town," he declared. "They revealed an awful lot of pessimism, and since I don't belong to that school of thought, I found it (the newspaper accounts) pretty dull reading."

"Pessimism Not Warranted"

The pessimism, he said, "is not warranted." He then rattled off a number of figures showing how much better business had been this year than last.

Industrial production, he pointed out, was 24 per cent greater in the first quarter of 1939 than in the same period of 1938. National income paid out in the first three months of this year was at the rate of $66,000,000,000 annually as compared with $62,000,000,000 last year. The dollar volume of retail store sales was 5 per cent higher.

Construction Increased

He pointed out that construction in the first 1939 quarter was 43 per cent ahead of last year, and that "private residential construction"—not including Federal housing activity—was up 83 per cent, the highest level since 1929.

"I don't mean for a moment," he explained, "that I regard the present situation as satisfactory. Because employment has increased substantially does not mean that it has increased enough."

Rise in Business Predicted

He said he had every reason to believe that "during the balance of the year there is going to be a steady and modest rise in business."

He refused to discuss the question of business "appeasement" or to suggest a substitute word for "appeasement" more satisfactory to the Administration. Efforts by newspapermen to get him to talk about taxes failed.

Hopkins ventured the opinion that too much importance should not be attached to the speeches and resolutions of the U. S. chamber. Some of the resolutions, he said, indicated a "fundamental disagreement" with the Administration on certain points.

An example, he said, was the resolution demanding repeal of the wage-hour law. The chamber also demanded revision of the tax structure, lowering of surtax rates, drastic modification of the Wagner labor act, curtailment of spending, "freezing" the public debt at the present $45,000,000,000 "authorized" level, repeal of the silver purchase act and the power to issue $3,000,000,000 in greenbacks, abandonment of the cotton subsidy plan, and other changes.

Referring to the booing which Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, received at one of the chamber State dinners when he defended the President, Hopkins said he did not think this reflected a "very objective attitude." He added:

"We should not get emotional about economic problems."

Hopkins was scheduled to speak at the chamber meeting on "What the Government Can Do to Help Business." He was unable to speak, he said, because of illness. He plans, if possible, to address the National Retail Federation on May 22.

Rome, May 8.—New surprises in store for the democracies, hinted at today by Virginio Gayda, were taken to mean that the lesser powers, whose geographical position or political regime has brought them within the shadow of the axis, would also be asked to sign up in a system designed as a counterpoise to the democratic nonaggression bloc.

Hungary and Yugoslavia are the most obvious possibilities, particularly in view of recent exchanges of visits, and the approaching visit to Rome of Prince Paul of Yugoslavia.

Appellate Court Assails Broad SEC Subpenas

Upholds Bank Record Examination in Appeal Of Bank of America

The Court of Appeals yesterday condemned broad subpenas issued by the Securities and Exchange Commission as "unreasonable" and unenforceable, but upheld the right of the SEC to examine bank records in the Treasury provided it treated them as confidential, so far as possible.

Chief Justice Groner discussed the SEC's authority in his opinion on the appeal of the Bank of America National Trust and Savings Association, of San Francisco, from a District court decision against it. The bank sued there to prevent the SEC from making public confidential records of its operations which the SEC obtained from the Comptroller of the Currency.

The SEC wanted the records for use in an investigation of Transamerica Corporation, largest stockholder in the Bank of America, which was charged with exaggerating the worth of its bank stock holdings in offering its own stock to the public.

The bank also asked that certain subpenas for its records be quashed.

Both Sides Claim Victory

Both the SEC and the Bank of America claimed the decision as a victory.

The bank complained that to publish its private records in connection with the charges against Transamerica would do its standing irreparable harm, pointing out that the SEC thought the charges so serious that it intimated that criminal prosecutions might result.

The Chief Justice agreed with the SEC that the act which established it authorized the SEC "in its discretion to make investigations and to make public its findings," but added "there is nothing in the act which authorizes publicity in advance of hearings. . . . It is not difficult to see that such a power might easily be made an instrument of oppression."

Unquestionably, the Chief Justice said, the SEC was entitled to use confidentially the Treasury records.

All Records Sought

The subpenas commanded the bank to bring before the SEC in Washington "all loan and discount records, collateral records, appraisal records, charged off loan and discount records, loan approval records and any other books of account" together with "all supporting data and correspondence" covering some 200 loans over a period of 10 years. Another subpena asked similar data for 10 years on some $35,000,000 of the bank's assets.

Chief Justice Groner said of these summonses, "It is perfectly clear, we think, that compliance with these demands will, for all practical purposes, close the bank and it is equally clear that by transferring the place of hearing from Washington to San Francisco, the commission may carry on its investigation without unduly and unreasonably hampering the bank in its business. . . . Congress never intended that the power (of the SEC to issue subpenas) should be exercised to bring from one side of the country to the other the principal officers of a bank and the books and records covering a period of 10 years. . . . We are of the opinion that these subpenas are unreasonable."

SEC to Proceed

"The decision of the Court of Appeals fully sustains and justifies the position taken by the commission from the outset," said Chester T. Lane, SEC general counsel last night.

Bank Officials Pleased

San Francisco, May 8.—Bank of America officials hailed as "a great victory" the Washington Appellate Court verdict today restraining the Securities Commission from transcontinental subpena of bank officials and confidential records.

Royal Danes Tour Capitol, Dine With Hulls

Chat With Justices Reed and Butler, Go To Naval Academy

The Capitol, Supreme Court and Library of Congress—together with the Senate cloak room and justices' offices—were highspots on the sightseeing itinerary of Crown Prince Frederick and Princess Ingrid of Denmark, yesterday.

Currently Washington's premier tourists, the royal couple left the Shoreham promptly at 10:30 a. m. to begin a pre-arranged and meticulously timed tour. The schedule was followed faithfully.

When they paused longer than usual in one spot, examining some Danish books in the Congressional Library, the prince and his comely wife were hurried along by an aide and they finished the tour promptly at noon to return uptown for luncheon with Secretary and Mrs. Hull.

Gaze at Capitol Dome

At the Capitol the royal tourists gazed at the lofty dome unnoticed by other sightseers who listened to the droning of a guide, apparently unaware of their presence.

After inspecting the House chamber and cloakroom they walked over to the Senate where Princess Ingrid displayed particular interest in the scurrying pages, distributing legislative literature. The couple was met by Col. Edwin Halsey, secretary of the Senate.

In the Congressional Library, the prince and princess paused over the Gutenberg Bible, Queen Victoria's letter of condolence to Mrs. Abraham Lincoln on the Emancipator's assassination, and minutely examined a 1602 "Account of Denmark" and other Danish and Icelandic historical volumes, which had once been part of the Czar of Russia's library.

Chat With Justice Butler

Riding upward in the library elevator to the gallery, Prince Frederik leaned back against the walls of the elevator and braced his hands against the waist-high railing, apparently tired by his thoroughgoing tour. Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian, served as guide.

Whisked over to the Supreme Court in their police-escorted limousine, the Danish heirs paid a visit to Associate Justice Butler in his chambers and chatted about his native State of Massachusetts, extensively Scandinavian populated.

The couple also talked with Associate Justice Reed before ending the sightseeing trip at noon to return to their hotel to prepare for luncheon with Secretary of State and Mrs. Hull at the Carlton.

See Naval Academy

Following the luncheon, the prince, wearing the uniform of a captain commander in the Danish navy, left by motor for a visit to the Naval Academy.

He was accompanied by Otto Wadsted, Danish Minister; Lieut. Col. W. C. Crane and Commander Lloyd J. Wiltse, his American military and naval aides, and members of the royal retinue.

The prince and princess dined privately at the Danish Legation last night.

John Bassett Moore Condemns President Naming Aggressors

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee ended its lengthy public hearings on proposed changes in the neutrality law yesterday with publication of a letter from John Bassett Moore, former State Department official, condemning proposals that the President be given power to name and boycott an aggressor nation.

The hearings were the first phase of the neutrality discussion. The committee next will meet in executive session to determine which of the several pending neutrality amendments it will recommend to the Senate for passage.

Meanwhile Representative Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, proposed that Congress stay in session all year to keep America "out of threatened foreign entanglements."

The Moore letter was presented by Senator Johnson (Republican), California, to whom it was written on April 7. It said that giving the President authority to name an aggressor "would at once make us an autocracy."

The committee also heard James T. Shotwell, professor of international law at Columbia University, urge approval of the plan which Moore opposed.

Somoza Backs Nicaragua Canal In House and Senate Speeches

By the Associated Press.

President Somoza of Nicaragua urged Congress yesterday to authorize construction of an interoceanic canal across his country, and then listened to a debate in the House which resulted in approval of a record peacetime naval appropriation.

The Central American chief executive told both branches of Congress in separate addresses that construction of a Nicaraguan canal would be a valuable contribution to the security of all the Western Hemisphere.

Gen. Somoza was interrupted by applause where he praised the Monroe Doctrine and President Roosevelt's "good neighbor" policy. He addressed the Senate first.

"It is a fact—and I do not need to emphasize it," he said there, "the prudent, wise and sagacious 'good neighbor' policy, inaugurated and maintained with such success by your illustrious President, Franklin D. Roosevelt, has given a vigorous impulse to the movement for Pan-American reapprochement.

Aids Rapprochement

"This policy has been a powerful factor in uniting the minds of the whole continent in one sole spiritual and moral entity. The Latin-American republics are now approaching the United States cordially, with greater confidence, in an attitude of spontaneous co-operation, and with the same sentiments of friendship that they feel toward their other sister republics."

Regarding the canal, he said: "Because of her geographical position, and the fortunate configuration of her territory, Nicaragua, in spite of her size, will be called upon to be a complimentary factor, indispensable to any plan or combination of forces for the security and defense of this continent. Her territory offers a convenient route for the construction of an interoceanic canal."

Can't Be Isolated

Addressing the House, he said: "No action, policy or doctrine of the American peoples could be in the past—nor can be in the future—absolutely individualistic or isolating. In this sense, the substance of your Monroe Doctrine is the binding of the security of the United States to that of the other American nations. It is true that you proclaimed this doctrine for your on protection, but it is also true that it has rendered meritorious service to your neighbors of the south."

Girl, 16, Married To Man, 56, After Mother's Wedding

A 16-year-old girl became the bride of a 56-year-old man at Clarendon, Va., yesterday as her mother was also married in a double wedding ceremony.

The mother, Mrs. Hattie Leizear, 37, a widow, was married to Howard Harknis, 39, at the home of the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell, pastor of the Clarendon Baptist Church. When the rite was performed, Sarah Catherine Leizear, 16, and Sampson Beavers, 56, who had witnessed the first marriage, said they too had had a license to be wed. So they were. The brides and bridegrooms are all from Laurel, Md.

The four had applied for marriage licenses last Saturday, with the mother giving the necessary consent for her daughter's marriage. They were married within an hour of receiving their licenses at Clarendon Courthouse yesterday.

WPA Sound, Says Cleveland G. O. P. Mayor

Permanent Federal Relief Agency Urged Before House Group

The Republican reform mayor of one of the Nation's largest cities told a House sub-committee yesterday that the WPA had been responsible for "a successful, beneficial and sound expenditure of Federal money."

Pleading for permanent Federal machinery to care for relief needs, Mayor Harold H. Burton of Cleveland joined chief executives of New York, Chicago and Boston in a vigorous defense of WPA projects in particular and the principle of work relief in general.

The National Government, said Mayor Burton, is the only agency with "sufficient flexible" financial resources to be able to meet the emergency of a sudden increase in unemployment, such as occurred a year ago.

Cessation "Unthinkable"

Fiorello H. LaGuardia, fiery Mayor of New York and chairman of the United States Conference of Mayors, told the sub-committee that cessation of work relief was "unthinkable."

"You can't discontinue it," said the high-pitched voice that a few years ago was heard on the Republican side of the aisle in the House of Representatives. "You can't drop the two or three million people now being cared for."

Declaring that "there isn't a city in the country that can disburse more in relief money than it is now doing, LaGuardia said that members of Congress from States "that are paying the lowest are shouting the loudest" against WPA.

Dole a Step Backward

When Representative Ludlow (Democrat), of Indiana, inquired if he could visualize when the WPA might be liquidated, LaGuardia replied, "If I could do that, you fellows wouldn't be looking around for a Presidential candidate."

Establishment of a dole for the employable unemployed would be "a step backward," said the Mayor, as he urged that the WPA be expanded until full benefits are realized from the social security law, about nine years more. With the social security program and the wage-hour act well under way, the Mayor envisaged elimination of relief in favor of a public works agency for "emergencies."

Heading a delegation of 18, the Mayor of New York submitted to President Roosevelt a report recommending development of "an adequate long-time national program dealing with unemployment."

Chicago Held Penniless

Chicago has "reached the bottom of the till," the House sub-committee was told by Mayor Edward J. Kelly.

A. F. L. Seeks Return of Textile Unions

Seceding C. I. O. Units Convene Here; Claim Backing of 200,000

The way was paved yesterday for an attempt by the American Federation of Labor to recapture a large slice of the textile industry's organizd labor from the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

A faction of the United Textile Workers, representing seceding C. I. O. unions seeking renewed affiliation with the A. F. of L., began a three-day national convention here, which will terminate Wednesday when A. F. of L. President William Green grants a new Federation charter to the returning unions.

Francis J. Gorman, Textile Workers president, claimed he could lead up to 200,000 workers back into the Federation, and said he could swing into the realignment with the Green forces 150 U. T. W. locals scattered through New England and the South.

The convention promptly passed three resolutions, designed to cement the new accord with the Federation, criticizing C. I. O. organizing tactics, and declaring a defense against any further inroads by the C. I. O.

One resolution praised the return of the unions "to their proper place in the labor movement." Another charged C. I. O. leaders with faking affiliation certificates in an effort to "destroy the U. T. W. and seize control of it for their personal benefit."

Another resolution repudiated the Textile Workers organizing committee, and asked immediate legal action restraining that group from holding any convention in the name of the U. T. W. The T. W. O. C. will hold a convention in Philadelphia next Monday.

Gorman and the A. F. of L. were thanked by the convention "for saving the international union from the attacks of its enemies and disloyal officials."

Puerto Rico's Economic Ills Traced to New Deal Laws

New Deal laws—particularly the wage-hour law, the reciprocal trade treaty program, and the Jones-Costigan sugar quota restrictions—were partly blamed yesterday by Governor Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico for a critical situation on that densely populated island.

The Interior Department announced that Winship, before returning to the island, had informed Secretary Ickes of an unprecedented farming experiment designed to help feed the idle portion of the population, estimated at 750,000 persons, or nearly 42 per cent of the total.

Under the direction of the Commissioner of Agriculture, food crops will be grown on lands loaned by sugar companies and other landholders including the Puerto Rico Reconstruction Administration.

More than 2,000 acres already are under cultivation. Winship expects 50,000 acres to be made available.

Unemployment on the island—the densest agricultural area in the world with the exception of the island of Java—is the heaviest in its history. Moreover, the department said, the people are faced with a food shortage.

The wage hour law, it is said, has virtually wrecked the industrial life of the island. In consequence, one of the changes in the law approved recently by the House Labor Committee would permit establishment of differentials for Puerto Rico. Although differentials could not be fixed high enough to give the island a competitive advantage over the mainland, expectation is that this would alleviate the damage to island industries.

The trade agreement with Cuba, it is said, nipped in the bud a thriving Puerto Rican fresh pineapple industry. The Puerto Rican fresh pineapple growers, it is explained, could not compete with the Cubans after the tariff had been reduced on the latter.

Likewise, the British trade agreement cut in half the tariff on cocoanuts from British islands like Jamaica and the Bahamas. This was a blow to Puerto Rico.

Police Balk Suicide of 'Poison Widow'

Took Disinfectant; Panic Seizes Score Held In 'Murder Syndicate'

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, May 8.—Quick action by detectives and hospital physicians apparently saved the life tonight of an alleged "arsenic widow" following spectacular suicide attempts with gun and poison while held as a suspect in investigation of a mass murder syndicate.

Mrs. Antonio Giacobbe, 50, was sped to Hahnemann Hospital after drinking what later was found to be disinfectant. It was at first believed she had taken arsenic and the draught might prove fatal. After stomach pump treatment and a chemical analysis of the poison, it was announced she would recover.

Although still ill and weak, she was returned to City Hall for further questioning as an alleged "customer" of the murder-for-insurance ring that has been blamed for more than 100 deaths in the last 10 years.

With the shadow of Pennsylvania's electric chair lengthening over members of perhaps the most merciless group of mass murderers in American criminal annals, Mrs. Giacobbe's act was another demonstration of the panic that has seized defendants already in custody.

Mrs. Giacobbe, whose husband died of "diabetes" in 1933, had been questioned at City Hall and then taken to her home.

Gahagan added he was surprised to learn that Jameson, a director of the Bank of England as well as chairman of Vickers, also was a stockholder in the Beryllium Corporation.

German Denies Story

On going to Germany, Gahagan said he entered into conference with Rohn, of Siemans-Halske, and representatives of the British interests.

By threatening Siemans-Halske with confiscation of German patents held in England, the British were able to obtain alteration of the contract, said Gahagan.

Dr. F. A. Kertess, American representative of the German firm, which has taken over the beryllium rights of Siemans-Halske, told the committee—in contrast to Gahagan's testimony—that German use of beryllium in airplanes has been "completely discontinued." He said there had been "no production" of the metal in Germany for the last eight months.

Testimony was introduced that in 1935 Kertess had written Dr. C. B. Sawyer, of the Brush Beryllium Co., of Cleveland, a competitor of Gahagan's firm, suggesting "co-operation" with Gahagan and expressing hope of "extensive profits to all concerned." Kertess insisted on the stand that he was referring merely to the benefits of mutual research.

Dr. H. F. Hensel, of the P. R. Mallory Co., of Indianapolis, testified that his firm purchased beryllium exclusively from Gahagan in order—even at higher than the competitive price—to protect the interests of Mallory's English branch.

Books Subpenaed In Dairy Inquiry

time we're not going to cover up for anybody."

Burroughs pointed out that one of the specific directions of the resolution which authorized the inquiry was that it should investigate importation of unlicensed cream by District distributors.

At the time Keyes appeared at his office, Burroughs said, he was unemployed.

Clover Called Subterfuge

Seal subsequently explained that when Keyes went to him he found that the witness' story had no bearing on the case pending in Police Court and so he sent him to Burroughs.

Keyes testified it was his understanding that Embassy-Fairfax had established the Clover Dairy in Mount Rainier "to have a depot to handle outside cream and switch it into the Embassy dairy." The cream, he said, came from unlicensed sources and was all transferred to either Embassy or Fairfax plant.

The cream was obtained from dairies in Lafayette, Ind., Grand Rapids, Mich., and other western cities, he said, and hauled to Washington or vicinity first by train and later by truck and trailer.

Shipping Described

Ted Tobin, of Kalamazoo, Mich., arrested in the seizure of 2,400 gallons of cream at the Embassy plant early in March, Keyes, said, operated two trucks to transport between 100 and 200 ten-gallon cans of cream weekly.

Transfers of the cream from the Michigan trucks to Embassy trucks or trucks hired by Embassy, he said, were made at various points, and such points were changed frequently. Unloading at the Clover Dairy, he said, usually was done at night and behind locked garage doors.

Asked by Burroughs whether he was familiar with utilization of unsalted butter by the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, Keyes said it was melted and mixed with skimmed milk to form cream. Between 1,000 and 2,000 pounds of butter were bought each week, he stated, and "as high as 10,000 pounds" a month was converted into cream.

"Isn't it a common practice for the dairies to melt butter into cream?" asked Shafer.

"Not that I know of," said Keyes. "This was the only case I heard of in nine years in the business."

"Freshening" Charged

Sefton Darr, attorney for Embassy-Fairfax, brought out in cross-examination that Clover Dairy has a permit to import cream for ice cream manufacturing. Asked about condition of imported cream after a truck had broken down in transit, Keyes said it was "bad" and he "understood" a neutralizer was used to freshen it.

Edmund T. Dovell, 3443 Fourteenth street northwest, enlivened the hearing with a recital of activities over two years in hauling allegedly illegal cream from nearby points to the Embassy-Fairfax dairy.

Using a truck in which milk cans were concealed by empty egg crates, Dovell said, he was first employed by Archibald Fletcher, sales manager of the dairy, to transport a load of cream from the Alexandria Dairy Corporation plant.

Took Roundabout Route

Instead of coming directly to Washington, the witness said, he was "convoyed" by Fletcher via Leesburg, Point of Rocks and Takoma Park into the Embassy plant.

Thereafter he made more direct trips from Alexandria, from Hollywood Inn, a Maryland roadhouse, and other nearby points. In all he made about 150 trips, he said, carrying an average of 100 10-gallon cans each time.

At one time, while he was loading up his truck with empty egg crates, he said, a District Health Department inspector stood by talking with Fletcher.

"He just ignored me," Dovell said in answer to a question.

Daniel H. Hawthorne, a district chief engineer of the dairy, testified he had seen trucks arrive at the Clover plant "without permits."

"Milk Barons" Alleged

The sub-committee got into a discussion of the complicated system by which farmers are paid for their milk when Dye took the stand. Claiming to speak for 32 independent producers, he charged that "bootlegging" of cream had "been brought about" by the Maryland-Virginia Association's practices and the Health Department's scoring system.

The practice of paying some producers more for their milk than others, through an apportionment of base and surplus milk, Dye charged, has resulted in creation of "milk barons" and "an upper 400" in dairy production.

Today, upon the conclusion of Dye's testimony, Burroughs will call a policeman who allegedly trailed a truck of cream from Lafayette, Ind., to the Embassy plant early in March. Burroughs said he would go into a "slugging" that reputedly occurred during the seizure of 2,400 gallons of cream and the arrest of a half dozen persons.

Circus Adjective Performer Finds Old Words Passe

Ahead of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey combined circus that unloads at 2 p. m. Sunday at Benning siding for a three-day visit, the circus "story man," Frank Braden, arrived yesterday without a colossal" or a "stupendous" in all the carloads of menagerie he was out to sell the ticket-buying public.

"We're getting clean away from that stuff," said Braden. We never have catered to any 'colossal' or 'stupendous' talk.

"The opening spectacle, the most beautiful and artistic pageant ever seen in America, the rave of critics, marks a new epoch in the circus; an entirely new and different and breath-takingly lovely lovely circus. . . .

"I've got too many adjectives in that," he said.

Bill Transfers Credit Unions to Insurance Office

Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, yesterday introduced a bill to place the supervision of District credit unions under the superintendent of insurance. Bills are now pending to transfer them to the Farm Credit Administration.

Capper's bill was introduced at the request of the District Credit Union League, he said.

"They claim that credit unions, which make small loans at rates of 1 per cent a month or less, including all charges," Senator Capper said, "are the only organizations which have done anything to remedy the loan-shark evil, and therefore are entitled to consideration in the framing of laws relating to their supervision."

Behind these reductions of from $100 to $300 on Packard cars, is a four-year story of accomplishment . . .

. . . a four-year plan of extensive plant rearrangement, of a multi-million-dollar investment for equipment and expansion, so that manufacturing costs could be reduced, and the savings passed on to you.

Because of the completion of its four-year plan, and because the Packard Company also enjoys an unusual and fortunate financial position—with no loans, no mortgaged overhead, no interest charges of any kind to increase the cost of the cars—Packard can now make this promise for the future:

NO OTHER AUTOMOBILE SHALL OFFER YOU AS MUCH FOR YOUR MONEY AS A PACKARD!

AND UP, delivered in Detroit, State taxes extra.

Prices $100 to $300 lower

Price reductions range from $100 on some models up to $300 on others! So no matter what model you fancy, you'll save at least $100!

4 out of 5

IT IS SAFE TO SAY that $888 has never before bought so much automobile.

For these cars have not been cheapened. Nothing has been left off. Nothing has been taken out. Not a single detail has been changed.

And this is also true of the Packard 120 and Super-8, whose prices have likewise been reduced—from $100 to $300.

Go to your nearest Packard dealer today. See the really breath-taking values he has to offer you. Drive a Packard through the heaviest traffic, over the worst roads, put it to every kind of test you can think of.

See if you don't decide, before this day ends, to get the value, the excellence, the prestige that Packard, and only Packard, can give you.

ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE

THE FINEST PACKARDS EVER BUILT—The cars whose prices are so greatly reduced are the same spirited, mechanically great 1939 Packards that have thrilled and delighted "the man who owns one." Never in 40 years of fine-car building has Packard received such a torrent of enthusiastic letters from new owners.

A lot more car for your money!

Christians Neglect Bible, Says Dr. Betts

Tells Civic Leaders Only 10 Per Cent Read Book Systematically

Christians' own neglect of the Holy Bible was scored yesterday by Dr. Rome A. Betts, associate secretary of the American Bible Society, addressing a "Bible Month" luncheon on the roof of the Washington Hotel.

He told a group representative of local business and official life that in his visits to churches of 25 denominations he had found "about 10 per cent of the churchmen were reading their Bibles systematically."

Discussing the local work of the society, Dr. Edgar C. Powers, of Baltimore, secretary of the National Capital district of the society, lauded Maj. Brown, Fire Chief Porter, Dr. W. L. Darby and others for cooperation in Bible distribution. He praised the similar efforts of Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, hospital worker of the Federation of Churches.

Dr. George C. Dilworth, leader of the Atlantic division of the society, also spoke.

Seated at the speakers' table, in addition to Dr. Charles E. Resser, Dr. Dilworth, Dr. Powers and Dr. Betts, was Page McK. Etchison, president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association, and vice president of the Washington Bible Society. Dr. E. S. Bookmyer, head of the Philadelphia unit of the Bible society, arranged the luncheon.

Dr. Darby, executive secretary of the church federation; Maj. Brown and Chief Porter were among prominent guests, as were Judge Eugene Black of the Board of Tax Appeals; Gratz C. Dunkum, president of the Board of Education; Edwin C. Graham, president of the Hamilton National Bank, and Chaplain H. A. Rinard of the United States Army.

Other guests were W. W. Everett, manager of Woodward & Lothrop's; Roy W. Prince, chief engineer of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; Walter Bastian, former president of the Methodist Union; Dr. Charles G. Abbott, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution; C. S. McConnell, president of the Sons of the Revolution, and Capt. Dudley N. Carpenter, retired, United States Army.

Also present were the Rev. Samuel M. Croft, of the Congressional Library; Ernest H. Van Fossan, member of the Board of Tax Appeals; Dr. Raymond Seegar, George Washington University; Col. William O. Tufts, Col. W. W. Kirby, Maj. Gen. Amos Fries, Paul E. Cromelin, Wade H. Ellis, Malcolm D. Lamborne, superintendent of Lewis Memorial M. P. Sunday school; West Hamilton, member of the Board of Education; Walter T. Lawton, H. Lawrence Choate and the Rev. Harry V. Porter, pastor of Westminster Memorial Presbyterian Church.

Arrangements are being made by a committee led by Senator Radcliffe, of Maryland, for a "statesmen's dinner" here on May 22 as a feature of "Bible Month."

Ruhland Places Elimination 6th In Health Rules

Elimination of waste from the body is just as important as the eating of proper foods, Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health Officer, said yesterday.

He placed correct elimination sixth in the rules on health he is now calling attention to daily.

Poisons produced by waste in the body, Dr. Ruhland declared, cause pimples, headaches, backaches, mental dullness, irritability, general ill health, and—in children—diarrhea and convulsions.

Axis Ready To Negotiate, Europe Told

Milan Pact Seen As Friendly Brake On Nazi Aspirations

By the Associated Press.

Rome, May 8.—The Fascist press hinted today that Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini now are prepared to negotiate Europe's "open problems."

Virginio Gayda, authoritative editor of Il Giornale d'Italia and often a spokesman for the foreign office, indicated the readiness of the Rome-Berlin axis to negotiate was a result of the projected pact of Milan, agreed upon over the week-end between German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop and Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano.

The new German-Italian military and political alliance was pictured by Gayda as a counterbalance to the British-French front. Gayda hinted that after achieving a balance by the weight of their combined military, economic and political resoures, Germany and Italy now were ready to negotiate.

Problems Not Named

Europe's "open problems" were not enumerated by Gayda, but he did suggest that they included Danzig and the Polish Corridor and Italy's claims against France.

Italy's army chieftains met tonight with Premier Mussolini to discuss military matters in the light of the agreement with Germany.

Those present included two heroes of the Ethiopian War, Marshal Pietro Badoglio, chief of general staff of all armed forces, and Marshal Rodolfo Graziani, and Gen. Alberto Pariani, chief of staff of the army and undersecretary of war, and 12 generals.

(International News Service reported that an official communique on the defense council meeting declared:

("The subjects which were discussed included measures already taken and measures which are to be taken for the rapid preparation of the general staff and acceleration of the rate at which the organization of the army at the frontiers is being perfected.

("Measures were taken to put the army in a state of entire readiness and the Duce gave final directions for certain measures that are still to be adopted."

(The communique was presumed to indicate that the Italian army is to be reinforced at the frontiers.—Editor's note.)

Gayda warned that the "peaceableness" of the axis policy at this time must not be taken as a sign Europe's "open problems" could be shelved, but that on the contrary they should be settled without delay if future trouble were to be averted.

Brake on Reich

Foreign diplomats joined the Fascist press in interpreting the Milan pact in its immediate aspect as a friendly brake on German aspirations in Eastern Europe, and thus they saw tension diminished over Danzig.

Text of Windsor's Speech

By the Associated Press.

Verdun, France, May 8.—Following is the text of the radio address of the Duke of Windsor today at the battlefield of Verdun:

I am speaking tonight from Verdun, where I have been spending a few days visiting one of the greatest battlefields of the last war. Upon this and other battlefields throughout the world millions of men suffered and died. As I talk to you from this historic spot am deeply conscious of the presence of the great company of the dead, and I am convinced that could they make their voices heard they would be with me in what I am about to say.

For two and one-half years I have deliberately kept out of public affairs and I still propose to do so. I speak for no one but myself, without the previous knowledge of any government. I speak simply as a soldier of the last war whose most earnest prayer it is that such cruel and destructive madness shall never again overtake mankind.

I break my self-imposed silence now only because of the manifest danger that we may all be drawing nearer to a repetition of the grim events which happened a quarter of a century ago. The grave anxieties of the time in which we live compels me to raise my voice in expression of the universal longing to be delivered from the fears that beset us, and to return to normal conditions.

You and I know that peace is a matter far too vital for our happiness to be treated as a political question. We also know that in modern warfare the victory will lie only with the powers of evil. Anarchy and chaos are the inevitable results with consequent misery for us all.

I cannot claim for myself the expert knowledge of a statesman, but I have at least had the good fortune to travel the world and therefore to study human nature. These valuable experiences have left me with the profound conviction that there is no land whose people want war. This I believe to be as true of the German nation as of the British nation to which I belong, as it is of you in America and the French nation on whose friendly soil I now reside.

International understanding does not always spring up spontaneously of itself. There are times when it has to be deliberately sought and negotiated, and political tension is apt to weaken that spirit of mutual concession in which conflicting claims can be best adjusted. The problems that concern us at the moment are only the reproductions on a larger scale of the jealousies and suspicions of everyday life. In our personal contacts we strive to live in harmony with our fellowmen. Otherwise modern civilization could never have come into existence. Are we now going to destroy that civilization by failing to do internationally what we have learned to do individually?

In their public utterances the heads of all governments are at one in declaring that war would be disastrous to the well-being of their people. Whatever political disagreements may have arisen in the past the supreme importance of averting war will, I feel confident, impel all those in power to renew their endeavors to bring about a peaceful settlement.

Among the measures that I feel might well be adopted to this end is the disparagement of all that harmful propaganda which, from whatever source it comes, tends to poison the minds of the people of the world.

I personally deplore for example the use of such terms as "encirclement" and "aggression." They can only arouse just those dangerous passions that it should be the aim of us all to subdue.

It is in a larger spirit than that of personal or purely national interests that peace should be pursued. The statesmen who set themselves to restore international security and confidence must act as good citizens of the world and not only as good Frenchmen, Italians, Germans, Americans or Britons. The benefit to their own nation must be sought through the benefit of the wider community of which we are all members.

In the name of those who fell in the last war I urge all political leaders to be resolute in the discharge of this mission. I appeal to them in the name of the living, whose existence and happiness are in their hands.

And I appeal to them especially in the name of the youth of the present day with all its incalculable potentialities of future service of the human race. The world has not yet recovered from the effects of the last carnage which in each and every country decimated my generation. The greatest success that any government could achieve for its own national policy would be nothing in comparison with the triumph of having contributed to save humanity from the terrible fate which threatens it today.

Somehow, I feel that my words tonight will find a sincere echo in the hearts of all who hear them. It is not for me to put forward concrete proposals; that must be left to those who who have the power to guide their nations toward closer understanding. God grant that they may accomplish that great task before it is too late.

Queen Mary Listens to Son

London, May 8 (U.P.).—Queen Mary tonight joined many Britons in listening to "bootleg" broadcasts of the peace appeal made by her self-exiled eldest son, the Duke of Windsor, despite a boycott of the speech by the British Broadcasting Co.

Thousands of British listeners who have short-wave radio sets were able to pick up the speech on its re-broadcast back to Europe by the National Broadcasting Co. Several other members of the royal family also were understood to have heard him.

The early editions of morning newspapers gave varied play to the Duke's peace plea, ranging from the Daily Mail's five-column headline smash: "Duke of Windsor Calls for World Peace!" to the Daily Sketch's two-column, eight-paragraph story on the lower part of the back page.

The Daily Express, which early today carried the first public criticism of the Duke's intention to broadcast, said in a two-column front-page headline: "Why I Break My Silence," referring to the Duke's preface to his ten-minute talk.

Keep Peace, Duke Asks 'All Leaders'

Duke

was returning to politics, but he insisted he was not.

His speech was broadcast to the United States and by short wave to Europe and South America, but Britons had to tune in on French radio stations and short wave broadcasts for the speech, because of the refusal of the British Broadcasting Corporation to relay his words. The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation likewise declined to carry the address.

British newspapers printed the speech, although they criticized it in advance as "untimely" in view of the voyage of his younger brother and successor, King George VI, and Queen Elizabeth to Canada and the United States.

Making his first broadcast since his historic abdication speech of December 11, 1936, the Duke spoke for exactly 10 minutes in a strong, clear and unhesitant voice, pronouncing phrases very slowly as if to let them have full effect. Beside him was his Duchess, the American-born Wallis Warfield, for whose love he gave up his throne.

The speech was delivered from a country inn here in the course of a several days' tour of World War battlefields. The Duke chose in Verdun a place where Germans were repelled in a historic defense.

He said "the problems that concern us at the moment are only the reproductions on a larger scale of the jealousies and suspicions of everyday life."

Speech Praised Here

Warm praise was given in Congressional circles for the peace appeal made by the Duke of Windsor.

Senators representing all factions in the bitter battle over neutrality legislation were in agreement that the Duke had made an appeal which all people may support.

A group of Senators heard the speech in the office of Col. Edwin A. Halsey, secretary of the Senate. Typical comments were:

Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana: "It was a very charming speech. I thought the Duke was sincere and honest in his appeal. I absolutely agree with what he said."

Senator Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming: "I was favorably impressed. The Duke's address reached to everybody. It should help maintain peace in the world—the hope of all of us."

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida: "Perfectly magnificent. It was sincere, simple and direct. . . . I believe that if the people of Germany heard it they will be aroused."

Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, ranking minority member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, sent the following cablegram to the Duke at Verdun:

"As one who served on the battle fields of France, and as a member of the United States Congress, I congratulate you on your radio appeal for world peace."

Duke Wasn't Talking of Love, So D. C. Girls Didn't Listen

At long last the Duke of Windsor—without the oomph of love in his voice and a throne at stake over a woman he loved—can't pack them by the radios.

National Broadcasting Co. officials said that people are pretty busy from 4 to 4:30 p. m., and opinion otherwise was that love—and love alone—is capable of emptying the Government buildings and attracting the lawyers' girls from their briefs; the shop girls from the counters, the waitresses from their counters, the high school girls from their classes, sending them all to the radio sides.

This time the duke had peace for argument and an inquiring reporter and photographer who went after opinions all the way from the suburbs to the door of the British Embassy, returned with only a water haul and the opinion that the duke, like a movie plot, had better rely on love.

"What Duke?" Some Ask

They posted themselves in the swirling hurly-burly of F street at 5 p. m., asking scores of persons if they had heard the duke.

"What duke?" some of them replied. "I didn't have time," replied others. None said he had heard the broadcast from Verdun.

One of the largest hotels in Washington said it had received no requests from its guests for radio sets in the rooms. Several downtown radio stores said they had not tuned in sets on the speech. One restaurant proprietor said he was about to tune in, but somebody said that Cleveland was on a scoring rampage so he got that instead. The colored waiter said a crowd was before a radio across the street, "but it must have been the ball game."

The National Broadcasting Company said several elderly ladies came to the studio to listen, but there was no need for the standing room only sign. Barber shop proprietors said they forgot all about it. So the search turned to the British Embassy where some gentleman, with a poker face, answered the door.

He didn't lose the poker face; but something did seem to be working quickly behind it. And he came up with the perfect diplomatic gem of the year: "But no one is hyeah now; they've all quite gone for the day, you know?"

And then his eyes grew quite placid, and he seemed ready to speak on the glories of that Washington spring that were coloring the trees in the pleasant little corner of foreign field on Massachusetts avenue that is forever England.

No listeners along the streets yesterday, nothing like December 12, 1936, when the big buildings, stores, meat markets and beauty shops unloaded to hear . . . "that I have found it impossible to carry the heavy burden of responsibility and to discharge my duties as King as I would wish to do without the support of the woman I love . . ."

Aimed at U. S., Nazis Say

Berlin, May 8 (AP).—The official German news agency, D. N. B., is a resume of about 200 words on the Duke of Windsor's address, pointing out that his speech was directed "in general" to the American people and emphasizing that he criticized "conceptions like encirclement and aggression."

Japanese Renew Ichang Air Raids

Shanghai, May 8 (AP).—The Japanese renewed air raids on Ichang today, 12 planes dropping 50 bombs on the important Yangtze River city midway between Hankow and Chungking. A brief dispatch from a British gunboat telling of the attack did not report any casualties, but they were feared to be large.

A Japanese naval spokesman indicated the Japanese would continue to reject a majority of the protests against the bombing of foreign property.

I KNOW FOUR ROSES IS ALL WHISKEY AT LEAST 4 YEARS OLD—IS THAT WHY YOU SAY IT'S AMERICA'S FINEST WHISKEY?

AGE IS MIGHTY IMPORTANT, DICK—BUT IT'S ONLY ONE OF 5 REASONS WHY FOUR ROSES IS TOPS!

DO YOU KNOW

1 Aging improves a good whiskey, but it can't make a poor whiskey good. So all the whiskies that go into Four Roses are outstandingly good to start with.

2 All of them are at least 4 years old—old enough to be bottled in bond. And they would be bottled in bond, if we thought they would be as good, sold separately that way.

3 But our 74 years' experience has taught us that the finest whiskey is made by combining several of our whiskies into one whiskey that's finer still.

4 Then we purposely make Four Roses lighter and milder, by reducing it to 90 proof (instead of the stronger 100 proof which bottled-in-bond whiskies must be).

5 Four Roses is ALL whiskey—with the mellowness of age, and the greatness that only generations of distilling skill can give. Compare it with any other whiskey made.

IT'S ALL WHISKEY 4 YEARS OR MORE OLD

Japanese Bled By China's War Of Attrition

20,000 Slain Each Month by Guerrillas, Foes' Main Hope

Peiping (Correspondence of the Associated Press).—China's "war of attrition" against Japan is in full swing. It is a "nibbling" process, which may last for many years, and one upon which Chinese pin their main hopes of success in driving the Japanese from occupied areas of their country.

With a comparative lull on most fronts since the fall of Hankow last October 25, Chinese guerrillas have nibbled continuously at thousands of miles of Japanese-held communications and outpost lines.

Official figures are lacking but the nearest approach to an accurate neutral estimate indicates it is costing Japan roughly a full division—20,000 men—a month. This includes those killed, seriously wounded or disabled by illness on all China fronts.

Ambushes Occur Daily

An outpost blown up by hand grenades, a train wrecked, a plane shot down, a transport column ambushed—these are the daily events throughout China which are believed to contribute to this total.

The Japanese army acknowledges only a small fraction of this estimated loss.

Its spokesmen complain, however, that the army seldom has a chance these days to meet Chinese fighters in frontal battles where superior Japanese equipment and discipline give the invaders an advantage.

Throughout the occupied areas the Japanese are carrying on "guerrilla-hunting campaigns" which cost dearly in men and materials.

Between times, during rests, Chinese sniping, ambushing, sabotage and mobile warfare continues.

Japanese hold the major railways, highways and big towns more or less permanently. Their skilled technique in repairing railroads after guerrilla forays have kept these communications running effectively.

"During the first three months of 1939 guerrilla attacks on the Peiping-Hankow line alone probably exceeded anything seen up to that time, but none of the damage done ever effectively held up operations for a single day," a recent Japanese communique stated. A check by neutral observers confirmed this statement in its essentials.

Hopei Guerrillas Unconquered

The Japanese conducted their most extensive antiguerrilla campaign in nearby Hopei Province.

They captured all the county-seat towns and were able to station garrisons there. But they failed to conquer the main force of the guerrillas, who skirted their advancing columns and then attacked them from the rear. These guerrillas still are in Hopei.

A Chinese report from this area gives some idea of the toll paid by Japanese to hold these towns.

This report was brought by a Chinese merchant who came here recently from his home town, captured by the Japanese and held by them for a month when he left.

He said the Japanese came in about a thousand strong. Every day they went out in small squads to chase guerrillas known to be lurking in nearby villages.

Each time the Japanese lost a few men—probably one, two and sometimes as many as six or seven men.

By the time the merchant left only 300 of the original 1,000 Japanese remained.

Occasionally Japanese have let it be known that the army finds it unprofitable to allow their troops to remain on any one front more than three or four months. After this period it was indicated they tend to become discouraged and lose their spirit.

Young Troops Pour in

Consequently a continual shifting of troops is under way and seems to boil down to a steady stream of new recruits from Japan who replace veterans, who, in turn are transferred to Manchukuo to strengthen forces there against possible war with Soviet Russia.

Careful checks on arrivals and departures in North China show almost a 50 per cent surplus of incoming troops over those leaving in recent months.

Already Japan is beginning, to a certain extent, to finance her war with China through exploitation of Chinese resources, issues of paper money and control of foreign exchange.

In this respect it appears that her ability to carry on the war now depends mainly upon the human factor—manpower in the trenches and at home.

Her resources give no evidence of running short. New Japanese troops in China invariably are young and vigorous men. Older reservists were used during the first stages, but they seldom are seen now.

Besides, the thousands of Japanese civilians flocking to China to operate new projects predominantly are young—men who would be soldiers if there were an acute shortage of manpower in Japan.

Pirate's Hoard Found in Orient

Hongkong, May 8 (U.P.).—Wreckers demolishing an old building in the center of the city today discovered a cache of 50,000 silver dollars, believed hidden there in 1850 by a notorious member of the Hongkong judiciary named Caldwell. Caldwell reputedly was the guiding light and organizer of a pirate gang. The find caused speculation that other buildings once occupied by Caldwell might contain hidden fortunes.

Study of Man's Growth Points Way to 'Sculpture' Humans

Carnegie Scientist Finds Particular Gene Regulates Length of Arms; Treatments Increase Height of Noses

By International News Service.

Cold Springs Harbor, N. Y., May 8.—A minute chemical particle, present in the germ cell, has aided man in evolution from his ape-like ancestors, according to researches revealed today.

Dr. Charles B. Davenport, at the laboratories of genetics of the Carnegie Institution, has been investigating the laws of the growth of human bodies, part by part as well as altogether.

As a result of these studies, scientists may learn how to change the types of human faces, heads, limbs and other bodily structures. Sculpturing of any important parts of the body, and of the entire figures, through manipulation of heredity and use of drugs, is not inconceivable in the light of notable facts discovered here.

Dr. Davenport found, for example, that the forearm of the human child grows to a certain length, and then stops developing, because of a particular "gene."

Genes Are Assumed

Biologists have postulated the genes to be the "atoms of heredity." Each gene is too small to be observed even by a powerful telescope. Its presence in the germ cells of the parents is assumed because of the known laws of inheritance.

A particular gene, then, controls the length of the radius, the bone of the human forearm.

In apes the radius, bone of the forearm, continues to grow as well as the upper arm segment before and after birth.

Before birth the human child's radius is like that of the ape. However, after birth, the rate of growth of the forearm segment decreases.

Dr. Davenport believes this stopping of the lengthening of the forearm is due to a particular gene, "a special gene."

Instead of being a handicap, the shorter forearm "gives to man a special advantage which has aided his survival."

Shorter Arms Quicker

The apes with their long, trailing arms, cannot manipulate their arms and hands rapidly enough. Man, thanks to his "abbreviated arms," as Dr. Earnest A. Hooton calls them, becomes the user and maker of tools. He gains mastery over the world.

Dr. Davenport's studies consist in studing a number of "absolute dimensions" of growth of each important body structure, and their mutual growth ratios. For example, the width and height ratios of development of the human nose have been investigated.

In certain dwarfs and idiots known as cretins, suffering from lack of thyroid glands, nose development has been increased by use of medical treatments.

The development of the height of the nose keeps pace with the growth of stature. Height of nose is greater in boys than in girls. But girls statures, too, are lower than those of boys on the average.

The remarkable likeness of nose height growths of identical twins is pointed out by Dr. Davenport.

Nazis Scoff At British Offer To Mediate

Gave Poland Free Hand, Now Twist Logic to Interfere, Press Jibes

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 8.—Informed German sources tonight scored the possibility that Britain might arbitrate Polish-German differences over the Free City of Danzig as Nazi press interpreters thundered that the Rome-Berlin axis now was made of steel and others must accept it or "break their teeth on it."

Propaganda Minister Goebbels' newspaper, Der Angriff, gave the latter keynote to other publications and officials after the declaration at Milan, Italy, yesterday that Germany and Italy had decided to write their partnership into a formal military and political alliance as an instrument for peace.

"Are the English living on the moon, or what?" exclaimed a high official at hints in the British House of Commons that Britain might be willing to arrange arbitration in the Danzig issue

"They certainly seem to be awfully naive. The Danzig trouble arose because Great Britain mixed in and now the same Great Britain stands piously by and offers to mediate! Can you beat it?

"Poland accepted the British guarantee pact (Britain's pledge to help defend Polish independence) on condition that she was to decide what constitutes a case where its provisions may be invoked.

"It is a decided twist of logic now for Great Britain to think that she can mediate when Poland has no reason whatsoever to accept mediation but can point to her specific rights under terms of the pact.

May Have Influence

"And as for Germany—of all unlikely things the most unlikely is that we would ask the British to mediate. That would be like appointing a goat as gardener."

The hints of British Prime Minister Chamberlain and Richard Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, invoked interest, however, and observers expressed belief they might have an important bearing on political developments of the next few days and weeks.

Officialdom was silent on the question of a possible alliance of the axis powers with Japan, but did not deny that talks toward that end may be going on.

Berlin, May 8 (U.P.).—Germany today warned Poland and Great Britain in inspired press attacks that the new Italo-German military alliance will be used, if necessary, to obtain satisfaction of demands on Poland.

The blunt warning, appearing in the Hamburger Fremdenblatt, coincided with diplomatic reports that the alliance is likely to lead to a unified Nazi-Fascist high command with German officers wielding a dominant influence over both fighting machines.

Italy, it was asserted, is committed to fight if necessary in support of Germany's demands for Danzig and a Nazi route through the Polish Corridor and is fully supporting the Reich on "all other questions interesting Germany."

Italian and German aviation collaboration at Spanish naval and air bases was believed to have been arranged.

Fremdenblatt's warning, hinting Hitler may find an early use for that unless Poland comes to terms the alliance, was signed by Dr. Adolf Halfeld, prominent Nazi diplomatic writer.

Halfeld said that the speech in Warsaw last Friday of Polish Foreign Minister Beck, refusing Hitler's demands but offering conciliation, had only served to aggravate the Polish-German tension.

Richberg Reports Oil Pact With Mexico Is Near

By the Associated Press.

Donald R. Richberg, attorney representing American oil companies, said yesterday an agreement with Mexico over expropriated oil properties was "within reach."

Richberg sketched these agreement lines:

A long-term contract, possibly for 50 years, under which the companies would operate their oil properties in Mexico, with the participation of the Mexican government in the operation;

Definite arrangements for adequate payment to employes and of revenues to the Mexican government;

A fair return to the companies from the sale of the oil produced;

At the end of the contract the properties to come into the possession of the Mexican government.

The companies to continue development of oil lands in Mexico.

Nicaraguan Flags And Shields Stolen On Parade Route

Faces of District and police officials turned a blush pink yesterday when they checked up on Nicaraguan flags and shields placed along Washington streets to honor President Somoza. Seven flags and three shields were taken by weekend tourists—despite special orders to police to guard against souvenir hunters.

More humiliating still, most of the missing emblems were taken from lamp posts near the White House and the Senate Office Building.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

British, French Army Staffs In Conference

Discuss Co-ordination Of British Expeditionary Force in Wartime

By the Associated Press.

Paris, May 8.—Technical army staff talks were opened between Britain and France today and plans were reported made for diplomatic conversations before next Monday's League of Nations Council session at which the German-Polish dispute over Danzig may be considered.

The military conferees, which began here less than 24 hours after announcement that the Rome-Berlin axis was being converted into a formal military alliance, were understood to be designed to coordinate movement of a British expeditionary force to France in the event of war.

The arrival in Paris last night of two warplane loads of high-ranking British army officers was the first public indication that such a conference was planned.

Foreign Minister Bonnet meanwhile planned to leave for England late Thursday or early Friday. He will preside at a banquet Friday night at Southampton and will return Saturday, presumably with British Foreign Minister Viscount Halifax, who notified the French foreign office he would come to Paris that day. The two ministers were expected to go on to Geneva Sunday or Monday.

Pius May Seek Danzig Parley

British

(Dispatches from Warsaw today said the Nuncio there had conferred with Polish Foreign Minister Beck during the day.)

The declarations in Commons by R. A. Butler, undersecretary for foreign affairs, and by Prime Minister Chamberlain, intimating British willingness to mediate between Germany and Poland, attracted attention because it recalled the Runciman mission to Prague last summer, which led up to German annexation of the Sudeten territory at the "peace of Munich."

Chamberlain asserted "The Polish government is aware that His Majesty's government would welcome an amicable settlement." Butler declared the Danzig question a matter to be settled by the parties signatory to the treaty (Versailles) which regulates its status.

Hitler Raises Price

The reports that Hitler is raising his price for settlement of his quarrel with Poland gave the British government deep concern. The Berlin information was seen as confirmation of the Fuehrer's hint in his Reichstag speech that his demands would be expanded if not accepted, and strengthened belief his real design is to acquire the whole of the Polish corridor.

Optimism as to the outcome of the negotiations to line up the Soviet Union with Britain and France was expressed here after news that Sir William Seeds, British Ambassador in Moscow, had conferred with Premier and Foreign Commissar Molotoff.

British official quarters are confident the resignation of Maxim Litvinoff as foreign commissar will not mean a reorientation of Soviet foreign policy. It was reliably said that Seeds had been instructed not to deliver the new British proposals until given assurance to that effect.

Soviet Envoy to Poland

Another favorable sign was the appointment of a new Soviet ambassador to Warsaw, filling a post vacant for 18 months.

Britain's military conscription bill passed its second reading in the House of Commons, after defeat of a Labor amendment by a vote of 387-145.

In the debate preceding the vote, David Lloyd George, wartime prime minister, had made a scathing attack on Chamberlain for what he called "dwaddling with Russia." He said he would support conscription, but scoffed at the small number of conscripts (200,000) to be called up.

Without Russia, he said, the pledges to Poland, Rumania and Greece are "reckless" and "demented."

Chamberlain, denying "dwaddling," said, "it is our purpose to make the fullest co-operation with Russia in the policy with which we are proceeding."

Moscow, May 8 (AP).—Britain's Ambassador communicated his nation's counter-proposals to Soviet Russia's far-reaching security plan today in a brief call on Vyacheslaff, Molotoff, Soviet premier and foreign commissar.

Meanwhile Soviet circles betrayed no astonishment over Sunday's announcement at Milan of an Italian-German military pact.

The Soviet point of view has been that Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini were working on the basis of such an alliance, so announcement of intention to sign a formal pact was not important.

Poles May Use Soviet Tie to Combat Reich

New Envoy Named by Moscow to Fill Post Vacant 18 Months

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, May 8.—An improvement in relations with Soviet Russia was advanced today as Poland's possible answer to the new Rome-Berlin military alliance.

Indications in this direction were seen in announcement of appointment of a new Russian ambassador to Poland and the fact that the Soviet vice commissar for foreign affairs, Vladimir Potemkin, would arrive here tomorrow night. Whether Potemkin would see Polish officials or merely pass through the city was not ascertained.

Meanwhile, new evidence of the Vatican's mediation to preserve peace in Europe was provided when the papal nuncio to Poland, Mgr. Filippo Corgesi, called on Foreign Minister Beck.

Offered Papal Assistance

It was learned reliably that the nuncio conveyed to Beck the desire of Pope Pius XII to do all possible to assist in any activity which may bring European nations together.

The new Soviet ambassador will be Nicholas Sharanow, now minister to Greece. He will succeed Jacob Davtian, who failed to return to his post from a sudden and unexplained trip to Moscow 18 months ago.

It was recalled that the Russian-Polish nonaggresion agreement, as revised last November 16, was accepted as Beck's reply to Germany's alleged plans at that time for an independent Ukrainian state at expense of Polish and Russian territory.

Poland took a calm and almost detached view of today's discussions in the British House of Commons on possible third party mediation of the dispute over Danzig.

No Turn in Policy Seen

Informed circles said they saw no reason that this would indicate deviation from British support of Poland's present position.

These sources also said they did not believe Poland was willing to drop her policy of direct negotiations as the only means of effecting lasting settlement of the Danzig issue.

Polish public opinion was regarded as unanimous in belief Beck has stated the maximum concessions that can be made to Germany and that nothing can be gained by third party intervention or round-table conferences.

[International News Service reported the British ambassador also had called on Beck.—Editor's note.]

Rescuers Climb To Bodies of 3 Air-Crash Victims

Seattle, May 8 (AP).—Rescue crews toiled up a precipitous Cascade mountainside late today to recover the bodies of a father, an expectant mother and their 7-year-old daughter, killed in the crash of a rented airplane last Saturday.

The victims were Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Olinger, of Milton, Oreg., and Dixie Lee, their daughter.

First reports that the bodies had been recovered later were corrected by Deputy Sheriff Jack Triplett, who said inaccessibility of the wreck scene made it unlikely they would be removed until late tonight or tomorrow.

Military Pact With Axis Wins Favor in Tokyo

2 Cabinet Ministers Quoted as Supporting Dictatorship Alliance

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, May 8.—Two Japanese Cabinet ministers were reported today to favor putting Japan in the Rome-Berlin axis through a military agreement with Germany and Italy.

The two, Lieut. Gen. Seishiro Itagaki, minister of war, and Gen. Kuniaki Koiso, overseas minister, were quoted by Domei (Japanese news agency).

It said Gen. Itagaki had told the Japanese press that it was "not impossible' for Japan to conclude an agreement if Germany desired it and that Gen. Koiso had said he believed such negotiations were under way.

[The foreign office was reported ready to make new overtures to London regarding a proposed understanding to assure Japan's "neutrality" in event of a general European war, the United Press said.]

Need for Stronger Pact Seen

Foreign Minister Arita at the same time in an important speech, said Japan could not disregard Britain's alliance proposals to Soviet Russia and concluded that the government "sees a need of strengthening the anti-comintern pact in view of the present situation."

(The Tokyo reports aroused no official comment either in Rome or Berlin.

(Many diplomats in Rome, however, expressed doubt that Italy or Germany desired to make military commitments so far from home.

World's Largest Warships Voted

Naval officials are expected to ask the Senate to restore the Wake base when the measure comes before the upper house.

Debate on the measure was brief and mostly confined to Republican objections to mounting appropriations without additional revenue to pay for them. A few members criticized the measure as "unnecessarily large."

Representative Lambertson, of Kansas, said the bill was "not a defense measure" and that such a total would not be necessary "if we were just protecting our own shores." Another Republican, McLeod, of Michigan, raised the question whether Congress is not "being stampeded into laying unnecessarily large burdens upon the present and generations to come upon the false premise of a war threat."

Supporters of the measure did not take the floor to answer these critics, and as a result the bill slid through to passage in a bare hour and a half, most of which was taken up by the clerk's droning through the long measure.

The first class of Army pilot trainees will begin instruction at civilian schools July 1. After three months training under instructors now being given special instruction by the Army, they will go to Randolph Field, San Antonio, Tex., for three months basic training followed by a like period of advanced training at Kelly Field, also at San Antonio.

While this shortens the training period from a year to nine months, Woodring said the graduates would "compare favorably" with those now being trained.

A second class will start training in the middle of August, followed by other groups every six weeks. Candidates must be between 20 and 27 years old, unmarried, and have completed at least two years' of college or its equivalent.

The cadets are paid $75 a month, plus $1 a day for rations and $22.50 a month allowance for rent. Flying clothes are furnished.

Upon completion of training, cadets are commissioned second lieutenants in the Reserve and must agree to serve three years on active duty. After three years' service they are given a bonus of $500 and may be selected for additional active service. Examinations are held every year for appointment in the Regular Air Corps.

Woodring said that it will be the first time that pilot training has been given at other than service schools "since the days when the Wright Brothers and Glenn H. Curtiss gave flight instruction."

The schools selected to give the primary training are: Spartan School of Aeronautics, Tulsa; Santa Marie School of Flying, Santa Maria, Calif.; Dallas Aviation School and Air College, Dallas; Ryan School of Aeronautics, San Diego; Alabama Institute of Aeronautics, Tuscaloosa, Ala.; Grand Central Parks Air College, East St. Louis; Lincoln Airplane and Flying School, Lincoln, Nebr.

Windsor's Speech

In his first speech since the night of his abdication, the Duke of Windsor made an earnest and eloquent plea for peace.

He voiced the sentiments of millions in every country when he prayed that the "cruel and destructive madness" of war "shall never again overtake mankind" and when he expressed the profound hope that the world will "be delivered from the fears that beset us." He stated what everybody knows when he said that "there is no land whose people want war." And there will be universal agreement with him that "the greatest success any government could achieve for its own national policy would be nothing in comparison with the triumph of having contributed to save humanity from a terrible fate which threatens it today."

It is impossible to doubt either Windsor's deep sincerity or his high-mindedness in making this plea. Coming at this time, however, his appeal may be questioned as to both its wisdom and its value. For it contains an unspoken accusation that the leaders of his own country, Great Britain, and of other nations, have been remiss in their duty—that, somehow, they have not been doing all they can to preserve the peace.

For an individual who allowed his personal interests to overshadow the duty he owed to his nation this is an astonishing allegation. No less astonishing is the fact that his one concrete suggestion is that such terms as "encirclement" and "aggression" be taken out of use because they arouse "dangerous passions." There is a very strong suggestion behind the speech that peace is worth preserving at any price. The point is arguable. But it is obvious that neither Great Britain nor France nor any other nation is prepared to adopt that view as a matter of policy.

Great Britain, for instance, is straining every nerve to rearm. She is planning to spend no less than $3,000,000,000 next year for defense purposes. She has resorted to conscription, which offends the deepest sentiments of Englishmen. She is trying to build a peace bloc in Europe that will prevent further aggression. All these efforts are designed, not to get England or any other nation into war, but to prevent war.

Certainly no nation in Europe has more consistently or in more far-reaching manner sought the path of compromise and appeasement than has the country where Windsor once reigned. But that policy failed and its failure is acknowledged even by Mr. Chamberlain. Now London is trying a firmer policy. Instead of supporting these efforts, Windsor apparently seeks to undermine them. That may not be his intention at all. But that is the unfortunate impression his speech will create.

Enemies Within

Far too little consideration has been given to three internal enemies, which, as Surgeon General Parran has pointed out, would be lined up against this country in case of war. Those enemies are tuberculosis, venereal disease and malnutrition.

It may seem strange that the head of the United States Public Health Service should be considering the health of the people in terms of war potential. Health is an objective which is desirable without reference to its bearing on the issue of military strength. Dr. Parran was speaking, however, to the Association of Military Surgeons. In case of war this distinguished group of doctors would be immediately concerned with the maintenance of health in the Army and, to a lesser extent, with the well-being of the civilian population. Nor can any country which finds it necessary greatly to increase its fighting strength afford to ignore the crippling maladies which make a considerable part of its population unfit for either war or peace-time service.

The situation over which Dr. Parran is so much concerned is the more disturbing because remedies have lain within the grasp of the country for a number of years. With proper safeguards and treatment of its victims, tuberculosis could be reduced to negligible proportions. Syphilis, where it is openly attacked, is rapidly yielding to medical science. With unemployment widespread, malnutrition seems to be a baffling problem at the moment, but for a country that is plagued by surplus food crops it cannot be called insoluble.

By linking our gross neglect of health to military needs, Dr. Parran has made the conquest against preventable disease a vital preparedness issue. Perhaps the dark clouds hovering over some parts of the world will help us to realize the folly of harboring the silent but ever-active enemies whom he indicts.

The Russian Attitude

Last Friday the Polish Foreign Minister, Joseph Beck, repudiated the German claim to Danzig and a strip of territory reuniting East Prussia with the rest of the Reich. That repudiation, made possible only by the recent British guarantees to Poland, has been received with significant quiet in Berlin. There has been little or none of the bitter, almost hysterical, reaction which the world has learned to expect when Hitler finds himself balked in the attainment of a cherished ambition.

It would be pleasant to believe that Hitler's refusal to fly into tantrums over Danzig means that its present status will remain undisturbed. It would be encouraging to hope that a new Polish-German treaty of non-aggression may be anticipated, to replace that recently denounced by the Fuehrer. But the more plausible explanation is that Germany feels sure the Danzig issue, and perhaps that of the corridor also, will eventually be settled in her favor. Feeling sure, the Nazis can afford to bide their time.

There are a number of reasons why Germany should refrain from forcing the Danzig issue now. To do so might readily precipitate war, which the Germans are probably as anxious to avoid as anybody else. But over and above this reluctance, which might not be dominant if Danzig could only be gained by fighting, is the feeling that the German diplomatic position is steadily growing stronger. If an apple will fall by itself there is no point in chopping down the tree in order to get it.

Obviously it is the present equivocal position of Russia which is encouraging the Germans to play a waiting game. And equally obviously the uncertainty as to Russia's stand makes it advisable for Hitler to make haste slowly at this moment. He need not worry about speeches by the Polish Foreign Minister if he has reason to believe that Moscow is inclined to be sympathetic with the German viewpoint.

And Hitler has many reasons to regard Stalin as a potential friend. It is not merely the great similarity between the Nazi and the Communist types of dictatorship; a similarity so profound in the glorification of the state and the submergence of the individual as to make the differences in the two systems seem secondary. It is not merely the fact that underdeveloped Russia so badly needs German technical skill, while for overdeveloped Germany access to Russian resources is all-important. An even more vital factor, tending to bring the two nations together, is what Germany has to gain by making friends with Russia now.

A peaceful settlement in Europe could be achieved if Great Britain, France and Russia would join forces in such a way as to make further Italo-German aggression dangerous for its perpetrators. On the other hand, a peaceful settlement may be expected if Russia leans toward the Berlin-Rome axis, or even preserves a neutrality which would enable her to befriend the Reich in the event of war. For if the latter outcome were foreshadowed Great Britain and France could not be expected, even by the most belligerent American commentators, to risk a war in behalf of Poland or Rumania. And on their own these nations are scarcely likely to defy Germany.

It is the latter form of stability, giving him a free hand in the East as far as the Russian frontier, which Hitler seeks. Evidently Stalin is not unreceptive to his quest. Two months ago, addressing the Eighteenth Congress of the Russian Communist Party, the Soviet dictator told the delegates in Moscow that the Anglo-French and American press was trying "to raise the ire of the Soviet Union against Germany, to poison the atmosphere and to provoke a conflict with Germany without any visible grounds for it."

On March 10 Stalin saw no grounds for Russian-German conflict. And since then he has confirmed this viewpoint by ousting the one man—Litvinoff—who has always been most active in seeking to fit Russia into an anti-German combination. The dismissal of the Foreign Commissar makes far more difficult the British effort to establish a reliable eastern barrier against Germany. And appreciation of this is intimated in the current British suggestion that Poland should arbitrate the Danzig issue.

The fundamental situation is perhaps not easier because of Russia's changing attitude. But the tensions are at least temporarily relaxed. Threats of force are in abeyance while diplomatic maneuvering is to the fore. And there is not a little irony in the fact that Communist Russia, excluded from the councils at Munich, is now the subject of ardent blandishments from all actors in the drama of last September.

Japanese Air Raids

Since the beginning of her undeclared war on China, Japan has been responsible for a long succession of acts which have shocked and outraged the civilized world. The recent bombardments of Chungking are only the latest chapter in a terrible sequence.

It is doubtful if any military purpose was or could be served by these devastating air raids which have resulted, it is estimated, in the death of several thousand Chinese civilians. Chungking is far removed from the nearest Japanese lines. It is in no immediate danger of occupation by the invaders. And the great bulk of the Chinese army is located at points removed from the temporary capital.

The purpose of the air raids on Chungking, therefore, was probably to terrify the population and thus force the government to submit. But as Japan's conduct of the war so far has tended to consolidate Chinese sentiment against the conquerers, the terrorization value of the present outrages may be much exaggerated.

In the meantime it would be well for Tokyo to recall that it was this kind of Japanese warfare which led Secretary of State Hull to urge airplane manufacturers to abstain from selling planes and parts to Japan. That limited embargo has, apparently, not had the desired effect.

While American exporters are voluntarily withholding planes from Japan, we continue to sell that nation the raw materials which she needs in the conduct of her aggression. The Chungking episode is a further reminder, if any were needed, that the United States has an indirect but grave responsibility for the conduct of Japanese warfare. This responsibility should be taken into account in considering changes in neutrality legislation.

The Great Beyond

Ignoring the troubled state of affairs on our own little planet, a group of distinguished scientists assembled atop Mount Locke, in Texas, are doing their utmost to clarify man's concept of the baffling cosmos in which he lives. The occasion for their current outpouring of data and hypotheses on the origin and evolution of the stars is the dedication of the McDonald Observatory, with its 82-inch astronomical telescope.

Dr. Edwin Hubble, of the Mount Wilson Observatory, contributed to the symposium a fascinating view of worlds in the making. He has viewed and photographed the process in a vast number of "extra-galactic nebulae" at distances from 7,000,000 to 500,000,000 light-years from the earth. (A light year represents 6,000,000,000,000 miles.) He has found no evidence of sudden cataclysmic forces at work. On the contrary, his photographs suggest a "smooth and continuous" evolution. Nebulae in the first stages of development are almost without form. In the second stage circular patterns may be seen, and the highly-organized systems take the form of spiral nebulae.

The more highly organized these vast universes appear the greater is their brightness. Paralleling the evolution of formless nebulae into more developed systems, Dr. Hubble also notes the appearance of "super-giant blue stars," each believed to be millions of times larger than our sun. His observations support the view that the materials of which worlds are made are being segregated and organized, rather than being ejected from a central nucleus.

Dr. Hubble gives us a view of seemingly endless space containing vast galaxies that make not merely the earth, but even the whole solar system of which it is a part, appear as a speck in infinity. It is not merely the telescope gazers who are assembled at Mount Locke, however.

Prof. E. A. Milne, distinguished cosmologist of Oxford University, has offered there a new concept of the universe from the mathematical viewpoint. In some respects his thesis affects the authority of the picture drawn by Dr. Hubble. For Prof. Milne believes that there are many measuring sticks which can be applied to the cosmos and our view of it will depend upon what "time-scale" is used.

If one "time-scale" is adopted, Prof. Milne says, the universe is not expanding. But if a different method of calculating the time-space relationship is adopted distant stars may appear to be flying apart at a great speed. And since the adoption of a scale of time "is an arbitrary act on the part of the thinker," he concludes that after all the individual observer himself is always the center of the universe.

So the whole problem of the universe comes back to the human viewpoint. In spite of Dr. Hubble's photographs, and the mammoth lenses through which cosmologists are searching the skies, man will still be forced to view the "great beyond" from his own little footstool and in terms of his own limited experience. And this leaves a very large probability that it will continue to hold enough mystery to fascinate mankind, no matter what his destiny.

A circus manager says it costs $400 a year to keep an elephant laundered. The G. O. P. refuses to release figures on what it costs to keep one whitewashed.

Oldest Paper

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the Post of May 7, in the announcement of an approaching wedding, is a statement implying that the Pine Bluff Commercial is the oldest paper in Arkansas. That credit should go to the Arkansas Gazette, published since 1819.

Founded at Arkansas Post when that now defunct river port was the capital of Arkansas Territory, it published the news of the arrival of Arkansas' first Governor, James Miller, of New Hampshire, who came down the Mississippi and up the Arkansas in a sumptuous keel boat. When Little Rock became Arkansas' capital in 1821, the Gazette was moved up the Arkansas to that point, which has ever since been its home.

Pine Bluff was not even a name several years after the Gazette was moved up the river. It was laid out as a town in 1832, I believe—but it got its printed news for years from the Arkansas Gazette.

Foreign Trade

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some legislators seem to favor increased duties on importations. These statesmen should judge each individual case carefully. Has anyone heard that England and France discontinued business relations with Germany even though there are threats of war?

In regard to Japan, we have had a favorable trade balance with that country for many seasons. In 1938 it amounted to around $115,000,000 whereas other nations in the past, have sold us considerably more than they purchased.

Why did some members of Congress remain silent while Mexico confiscated American oil, sugar and other properties? Some desire the price of silver kept at a high rate so as to benefit their State, while they should give more serious consideration to our cotton problem. In other instances, many have probably forgotten that years ago, Russia dumped millions of tons of wheat in European markets, even though her own people needed the foodstuff. Their action caused our grain prices to collapse.

Why not make an attempt to collect some of the billions of dollars due us from foreign nations? It would undoubtedly aid in solving our home conditions. To devise ways and means to secure jobs for our 10,000,000 unemployed, should, in my opinion, be of utmost importance to this country.

Citizens' Rights

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the President, the Congress and the press of the U. S. will speak now in support of an elected council for the District of Columbia it will be a shot fired for democracy that will be heard round the world. "United States extending rather than curtailing the rights of its citizens." That would be news now when in other countries the reverse is the order of the day.

We, the voteless people of the District have to be taxed, give military service, most of us are literate, sane, patriotic, and want to exercise the rights and responsibilities of suffrage.

Why not emancipate us now? We thank you.

MINNIE FROST RANDS.

An Embargo Against Japan

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the House Foreign Affairs Committee have just completed four weeks of hearings on proposed legislation for the establishment of our "neutrality" in the event of war. What is to be done is now in the hands of Congress.

The importance of any step that is taken here in Washington at this time is beyond measure. What happens now may be of vital significance to the progress or decline of what we regard as civilization, to a very large degree embodied in the democratic way of life. The stand of the United States during the past one and one-half years has definitely encouraged aggression and vastly contributed to the terrible state of affairs which has now come home to plague us. A sad commentary is that what may be done now should have been done years ago, when Japan first seized Manchuria, and precipitated a series of events. It is true that, whether because of the neutrality act or otherwise, we did not become involved in the Ethiopian or Spanish conflicts, nor are we involved in the Sino-Japanese conflict. However, by our passive attitude, we have directly contributed to the building up of a situation which may have terrible future consequences.

The overwhelming desire of the American people seems to be that the United States keep out of war. Many advocate the ostrich technique, while there are those advocating the positive, approach of attempting to find a fundamental solution to these world-shaking problems, a solution which would eliminate the inequities which bring about such situations as our present dilemma. In between there is almost every conceivable proposal.

The fact is that we supply Japan with as much as 92 per cent of some of her most essential war materials. We are helping to build up a powerful war machine in the Orient, against which we, in turn, must arm to protect ourselves. The United States has not only been helping Japan make war upon our friends the Chinese, but are at present assisting Japan in building up a vast, modern industrial machine, fed by resources obtained by seizure, not paid for as we must pay, and operated by slave labor. This slave labor receives from 4 to 8 cents per day.

As soon as this new industrial system gets into full swing, producing for a fraction of the production cost of other countries, Japan will be able to dominate the markets of the world. It will be impossible for this country to compete, and the result will be a continued and chronic stage of depression everywhere, with a corresponding lowering of the standard of living all over the world.

Thus, for the sake of immediate profits we are hastening the day when we shall be completely cut off from our present markets in the Far East and in the Pacific.

The Fascist totalitarian alliance of Germany, Italy and Japan is strategically a very effective one. It divides the attention and the strength of the other nations, the result being a general state of paralysis. A tripod stands on three legs. If the United States merely stopped helping Japan hold up her leg the whole structure would collapse of its own weight. Japan would be so weakened and the Fascist triumvirate would be so weakened, that war in the near future would be out of the question.

A strict embargo on our shipment to Japan of materials essential to her in the war would accomplish this. We would be acting on a valid, defensible principle, and more than any measure which could be taken anywhere in the world, we would be preventing war. We are helping to build up a powerful war machine in the Orient.

"World Of Tomorrow"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With regard to your editorial concerning the League of Nations, and Melvin D. Hildreth's letter on the same subject quoting M. Joseph Avenol, Secretary General of the League of Nations, it is apparent that you are doing some very wishful thinking about that "World of Tomorrow."

Regretfully, we should be willing to admit why the League of Nations failed, no matter with what high idealism we once viewed the League. We know that the League was not built on idealism. Rather, it was built as the instrument of imperialism. That is the reason it failed.

The kind of collaboration—not democratic co-operation—that the League of Nations calls for will not save Europe or mankind. It will not bring about a better world of tomorrow. The kind of collective security represented in the League is the puppet of imperialism. It will never bring an end to the violent nationalisms of Europe. It will not bring justice to the exploited colonial peoples. It will not solve the internal problems—poverty—of the masses throughout Europe. The collaboration the League represents is the kind that breeds wars, preaches democracy and practices something else.

The League might be a door through which we would again enter war—in another false effort to save democracy. Our job is to stay out of Europe's wars. Perhaps the biggest task before us is to consolidate democracy in the United States so well that the people of the world will want to follow our example. We can't set such an example by rummaging amongst the bones of the League of Nations, nor by going into the wars of members of that League or sending weapons of death to them or anyone else in Europe.

Let's save democracy in the United States! That is our best road to that "World of Tomorrow." There is no short cut.

Spendthrift

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hope that this Congress would be something better than a rubber stamp is overshadowed by the realization that it is as spendthrift as any other we have had.

The farm subsidy bill is a national disgrace. About to be passed by the Senate, it has been padded since it came from the House and will pile up a huge deficit to benefit a class of persons no worse off than other classes. It is buying votes from the farmers, to keep themselves in power, whereas if they really had the interest of the country at heart, they would resign their positions and make room for real statesmen.

Dictator?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why do we hate the European dictators? Some hysterical individuals even want to send our army to Europe to annihilate them and their brood, while right here in our beautiful capital we receive a dictator from Central America as the Nation's guest, with open arms, and with acclaim. Will somebody please explain?

Chores

THE TROUBLE today with the younger generation is that they don't have any chores to do. I mean especially the boys who live in my block, here in one of Washington's ingrowing suburbs. They have no cows to milk, no stables to keep immaculate, no corn to hoe, no regular little jobs. Nothing but play and an occasional paper route. Now, when I was a boy . . .

Chores, of course, are chores. We didn't like them. We didn't like to work any better than the boys do today, but that didn't seem to matter much. We worked anyhow, and we knew there were certain tasks that we had to perform every day, or else. And these things, beyond the borders of our adolescent choice, we prefer to believe were good for us—the discipline of regularity, the responsibility for certain definite work, the sharing of labor, the unconscious fitting-in to a little society.

These gave us a grown-up feeling that we were "earning our keep," that life was not all play. Perhaps we did grow out of childhood prematurely, but we came out of it with something that is noticeably lacking in today's crop of young urbanites and suburbanites. I think it is what H. S. Canby was thinking of when he wrote (speaking of his boyhood in Wilmington, Del., in the 1890's):

Our old home town was not Athens, or Paris, or even Stratford-atte-Bowe. Yet so far as it went, a child's life there was rich and varied and deep. He had by 14 what anthropologists call a culture, which is quite different from culture. He had made himself part of a conscious, an organized, a unified society. His roots were in the ground, and whether he liked the soil or not there was something to grow from.

Our town was even soilier than Wilmington, Del., and consisted of only about 800 souls. There were a few local industries, such as a canning factory, a grape-basket mill, and a cheese factory, but these depended on the surrounding agriculture. Almost everybody's place was a little farm. We had three acres inside the "city" limits, but that was big enough for a small orchard of apples, cherries, plums and pears; a few rows of Concord grapes; a rhubarb bed; a good-sized garden plot, and a little pasture for the cow. All these adjuncts gave us kids something to do besides running the streets playing machine-guns.

We may have had a wild Indian scalping party now and then, but it is quite unlikely that any of us ever presented so ludicrous a spectacle as the adolescent lout whom I recently overheard trying to imitate the sound of a machine-gun. His voice was changing, and try as he would he could not maintain his pah-ah-ah-ah-ah, PAH-ah-ah-ah-ah on the same vocal level. What this lad needed was a little wood to chop night and morning, a cow to milk, and maybe a few hogs to feed.

As I remember it I didn't mind, much, the chores; it was the extra jobs that griped me. To this day, even in romantic retrospect, I don't think I would inflict on any boy the job of turning a grindstone. I still recall what a whoop I let out not long ago when I read Bill Nye's marvelous account of Andrew Jackson's birthplace: "Here," wrote the famous fabricator, "Andrew turned the grindstone in the shed, while a large heavy neighbor got on and rode for an hour or two."

Yet somebody had to turn the grindstone, and you can have three guesses as to who it was. Another job, which for all I know has passed into the great limbo of ante-machine-age antiquity, was "looking over" beans. This was something that all the family participated in. It wasn't hard work; it was just so interminably monotonous. After the navy beans had been threshed or flailed they had to be picked over by hand to take out the bad and weevily beans and other extraneous matter.

Whole bagfuls of them would be dumped onto a big table, and we would all sit around it and pick and pick, holding a pan in our lap for the good beans and brushing the bad ones into a little pile at the side. It was a thrilling way to spend a long winter evening. I suppose there must have been some labor-saving device for this bean sorting, but we didn't know about it. We knew that good, clean, white beans brought in a little extra money, and so we kept on raising them year after year.

No, I do not care whether my two boys ever have to turn the grindstone or pick over beans or sprout potatoes, but it would be a wonderful thing for them, I believe, if they had a few chores that came as regular as night and day. Keeping children "off the streets" used to be one of the parents' most serious concerns, but they seem to have given up long ago, and except for the playful activities of a few boys' clubs, a few lawns to mow, and the like, there is nothing to take the place of the woodpile, the exacting requirements of the family cow and her habitation, the corn row, the potato patch, and the poultry yard.

It would be a little too much to ask, I realize, to have these erstwhile scenes of juvenile industry brought today to our populous cities and towns just to keep boys busy; but I yearn for a modern equivalent. I have no nostalgia for the woodpile for myself, mind you. It's of others I'm thinking—of a few contemporary hoodlums that I know of, mostly, as Robert Benchley would say, between the ages of 14.

About The Klan

WHILE BOUNCING briskly over the Southern tier your correspondent picked up a paper containing a picture of a masked and hooded Ku Klux Klansman with a symbolic lynching robe in hand, who rode through certain Miami streets, with others, in an effort to impress the Negroes of that city with the impropriety and danger of voting in a local election. Now, with full recognition of the many esthetic and substantial virtues of Miami, one should bear in mind, nevertheless, that she is a minor place and avoid overemphasis. Ordinarily, at this season of the year, Miami should be forgotten and allowed to proceed with her housework, to tidy up after the latest batch of contented guests and prepare to delight the next.

THE KU KLUX Klan, however, always is newsworthy, and this latest exertion of these guardians of the American home and civic purity prompts a few observations on a band of patriots who once were united in sacred, unfailing bond with Mr. Justice Hugo Black, of the United States Supreme Court.

Politicians Usually Submit To Gamblers

IT IS well known that Miami and certain of her suburbs have become the winter quarters and the off-season field of operations of the surviving executives of the Al Capone gang, and it is accepted in Miami that when Capone leaves prison he will make his home there and resume his career. Bootlegging, of course, is out, and the brothel business is so troublesome that it is hardly worth the genius of a real master, but gambling, on the horses and slot machines and in large rooms, is an industry which has a firm voice in the local government and that of the State as well. As Rhode Island discovered a few years ago when Walter O'Hara, of the Narragansett track, threatened to remove an untractable Governor, gambling, with its vast sums of ready cash, tend to grow arrogant toward public officials and people. And officials and other politicians, knowing the power of cash money, submit to the gamblers or shake them down.

Of course, the Miami members of the Ku Klux Klan know that a gang of Chicago criminals have taken over two racing plants in their midst. That Hialeah, a Miami suburb, is being shaped into the Cicero of the South, that a gamblers' lobby operates brazenly in the Legislature in Tallahassee and that accusations of bribery are common in the politics of their community. Ernest Graham, a Miami State Senator, who is running a rather inept legislative inquiry, openly asserts that many, though not all, members of the legislature are grafters who accept bribes from gamblers and tells of having been threatened by criminals of the underworld when he was campaigning for election. Men with police records elsewhere move into the community as businessmen without protest from the members of the Ku Klux Klan, and the suspicion cannot be avoided that the dunce cap of the crusader often hides the face of a crook who himself has been taking graft from gangsters attracted from the North.

Should Make Pass At Capone Mob

IF THE Ku Klux Klan contained clean men with the courage to show their faces and a real interest in rooting out the Chicago-Cicero mob of racketeers the thing would not be hard to do, for the evidence of corruption is flaunted rather than concealed. But the Klan never bothers hoodlums, whose murderous nature was made known in the bloody wars of Chicago. This diffidence may be attributed as much to embarrassment as to the physical shrinkage of men who go marked, because a combing of the roster doubtless would reveal crusaders who have done business under the stairs.

The Klansmen know who the racketeers are, know them by sight and know where they live. If the Klan of Miami ever summons the courage to make a pass at the Capone mob that will be news, indeed.

Welfare Board Delays Naming New Director

Washington may not have a new director of public welfare before midsummer, Frederick W. McReynolds, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, said last night following a meeting of the board.

Selection of the man to succeed Elwood Street, who will go to Richmond next month to direct the Community Chest, has n t been made, McReynolds said, and will not be made until "our committee has raked the entire field."

The committee is looking also for successors to Alice Hill, director of the public assistance division, and her assistant, May O. Hankins, McReynolds said.

Life's Darkest Moment

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Russian Puzzle

ALTHOUGH it is impossible even to guess about what position Stalin will take in the near future, one thing is now clear. It is that since about the middle of March Russia has emerged once more as a major power in the relations of the Old World. Russia, which was excluded from the diplomacy of Munich by the common consent of the four powers, is now being wooed by all of them. One has only to read the report of Stalin, made on March 10 to the eighteenth congress of the Communist Party to understand that the Russians are fully aware of this change in their position, and that they mean to make the most of it.

Therefore, in speculating on the reasons for Litvinoff's retirement, the best approach is to deduce the reasons for the event by considering its effect. The effect has been to make the world conscious of the new situation which has been developing for some months. We may assume that almost certainly this was the calculated purpose of Stalin. For it is Russia's interest to make the world realize how radically the position of Russia has changed since Munich.

Supposedly Foes Of Communism

ONLY by appreciating the change in the Russian position can we hope to begin to judge what is true and untrue, probable and improbable, in the rumors that reach us from every capital in Europe. The change can, I think, be defined quite simply.

Germany, Italy and Japan are signatories of a paper called the Anti-Comintern Pact. This places them publicly on record as being the avowed enemies of Russian communism, and in the other countries the avowal has been accepted at its face value by the governments, and by public opinion generally. Both in the Czech crisis which led to Munich, and in the Spanish civil war, the controlling opinion in Great Britain held that the axis was directed against Russia, that ideologically the issue in Europe was communism versus fascism, and that from the point of view of imperialist aggression the Russian Ukraine was the great objective.

Britain And France Apparently Fooled

BUT SINCE September it has gradually become clear to the governing classes in Britain and France that this whole conception of theirs was a total misunderstanding. They have realized that while the Anti-Comintern Pact is directed only against Russia, the action of Germany, Italy and Japan is not directed against Russia at all. It is true that according to the map Russia lies inside the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo triangle, and the world has believed, because it wished to believe it, that the actual aggression would follow the line of the ideological propaganda.

Actually, the aggression has taken the exactly opposite direction, that is to say, not inward against Russia at the center of the triangle, but outward against China, Great Britain and France. The Anti-Comintern Pact has not turned out to be an alliance against Russia but an instrument for isolating and neutralizing Russia while the partners were carving out their empires elsewhere.

Triangle Now Wooing Russia

THE ANTI-COMINTERN Pact has been a very effective instrument. For it succeeded in persuading the British and French that the question was whether they would become allies of Russia in order to save Soviet Russia from dismemberment and destruction. It is only in the past few months, actually since the seizure of Bohemia and Moravia, that the British and French have begun to realize that the real question was whether Russia would become their ally in the event of war.

As soon as they did realize that they, not Russia, were the objective, that it was Russia, not they, which had to decide whether to intervene in a European war, they began to woo Russia. At once the triangle began to woo Russia also. The propaganda ceased to attack bolshevism and began to attack "the capitalistic democracies," and the "plutocracies," became contemptuously hostile to Mr. Chamberlain, who dreads communism, and scrupulously polite to Joseph Stalin. Japan drew back from a military alliance which might have been interpreted in Moscow as a threat to Russia, and began to expand aggressively, not toward Siberia, but away from Siberia, southward by sea toward Hongkong, French Indo-China, the Dutch East Indies and Singapore.

At the same time the Italians proceeded to make clear, what anyone could have realized who thought about it at all, that there is no conceivable thing they can get out of a war against Russia. As ideologists they were, of course, opposed to communism. But as imperialists their field of action is in the Mediterranean and in Africa. Ethiopia, Tunis, Albania, Gibraltar, Suez and Egypt are not Russian possessions nor in the sphere of Russian influence, nor related in any way to the alleged crusade against bolshevism. But they are the key points of the British-French position, and if they fall, the axis can redraw the map of Europe, Africa and western Asia.

Russia Appears Formidable Again

THE DISCLOSURE that the Anti-Comintern Pact does not threaten Russia accounts for the sudden reappearance of Russia as a great power in Europe. Now, M. Litvinoff symbolized the Russia which, because it was supposed to be the intended victim of the Anti-Comintern Pact, was looking for allies in western Europe. He symbolized the Russia which was supposed to need help, and could not get it; the Russia which not only had no allies, but, until recently, practically until this last week, was not even acceptable as an ally. His removal is a sharp reminder that all this is a false picture of the true position, that it is not Russia which is immediately threatened and needs allies but Great Britain and France.

There is no need to conclude from this that Russia is about to come to an understanding with Germany. That is not inconceivable. But for the present all that we can be certain of is that Stalin has re-entered the Europe from which he was shut out at Munich, that he has made Russia formidable again as a potential ally, as a potential enemy, as a potential neutral. From now on it will be impossible for any statesmen in London, Paris, Rome or Berlin to forget that just as Germany, Hohenzollern or Hitlerite, is a great power in Europe, so Russia as Russia, be it Czarist or Stalinist, is also a great power in Europe.

Racial Ideology Easily Forgotten

THE FUTURE relations between Germany and Russia will not be determined, we may be sure, by those ideological principles that the innocent classes and masses take so seriously. The German racial ideology did not stop the incorporation of the Czechs, who are Slavs, into Great Germany; it has been conveniently forgotten for the time being as applying to the Germans in the Tyrol on Italy's northern frontier; it has not stood in the way of a partnership between the Nordic Aryans of Germany and the Japanese, or of great solicitude on Hitler's part for the very Semitic Arabs, or of the arrangement with the Italians, who are a mixture of every racial stock that ever entered the Mediterranean, or of a collaboration with the Spaniards, who are certainly as racially conglomerate as any nation in Europe.

And the Russian ideology has likewise been no barrier to working arrangements with anti-communist Chinese or with the altogether un-communist Turks, or with the bourgeois capitalistic democracies and what not at Geneva, or with M. Laval who negotiated the Franco-Russian Treaty.

One Or The Other Must Be Master

THE REAL obstacle to a very close association between Russia and Germany today is not ideological, or economic, or national. It is that the Nazi Party and the Communist Party, both of them small ruling oligarchies, cannot share power anywhere. Wherever they meet, the one or the other ruling class must be the master. It is difficult enough for constitutional rulers to collaborate. But among dictatorial regimes one or the other must be the master wherever they meet. The unhappy position of Mussolini proves that all too clearly.

Thus, it is conceivable from the precedents of history that Germany and Russia might come together by carrying out another partition of Poland. This is one of the possibilities, and we may be reasonably sure that it has been discussed. What may prevent it is, first the Poles themselves, and then the realization on Stalin's part that if the Polish buffer disappears, his collaboration with Hitler will be like Mussolini's, that is to say, on Hitler's terms. The chances are that he will much prefer the relative security which he now enjoys as long as he has left any freedom to choose.

Cleveland Police Radio Described; Maj. Brown Listens

Modernized radio, telephone and teletype communication systems which have enabled the Cleveland Police Department to reduce major crimes in that city by 50 per cent in one year were described last night by Lloyd N. Chatterton, superintendent, radio division, Cleveland Department of Public Safety.

Major Brown, superintendent of police, and Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent, were among the 75 guests and members of the Institute of Radio Engineers, Washington Section, who heard Chatterton's illustrated talk in the Potomac Electric Power Co. auditorium.

Elimination of roll-call and arangements for scout car crews to relieve each other at pre-arranged meeting places instead of reporting to their stations makes possible uninterrupted 24-hour patrol in Cleveland, Chatterton declared.

Gerald C. Gross, chairman of the local group, presided. Among other guests were Donald Manson, of the Canadian Broadcasting Co., and H. Lubke, Don Lee Broadcasting System of Los Angeles.

Stamp Plan Possibilities

By Mark Sullivan

Wage Increase

WITHIN A FEW days the New Deal will begin its most extraordinary experiment in the field of business and economics. The enterprise will be begun in Rochester, N. Y., about the middle of May. A little later it will be set up in Dayton, Ohio; still later, in four more medium-sized cities. If it works in these cities, the New Deal expects to practice it everywhere. The plan is decidedly worth studying— I imagine it is intended to have important consequences if it works, and grows.

Briefly, the plan is this: The New Deal, acting through the Department of Agriculture, will give to WPA workers (and other persons receiving public aid) a quantity of blue stamps. With these stamps the WPA workers can buy food. The stamps will be free, and will be in addition to the pay regularly received by WPA workers.

The amount of stamps given to each WPA worker is subject to rules, having to do with the pay regularly received by the worker, the number of persons in his family, and the amount of food he ordinarily buys. The quantity of blue stamps given each WPA worker will be about one-half what he ordinarily spends for food. Thus a WPA worker who ordinarily spends for food $1.50 a week for each member of his family, will be given 75 cents worth of blue stamps. He will be required to continue to buy as much food as formerly, and he will be required to use the stamps to buy additional food.

Banks Receive Cash For Stamps

AS AN example, suppose a WPA worker receives $14 a week —I am told by WPA headquarters at Washington that this is the average that WPA workers receive throughout the country as a whole. And suppose this WPA worker has five persons in his family. To him will be given about $3.75 worth of blue stamps. The blue stamps will be in addition to his regular pay. In effect this WPA worker's pay will be raised from $14 a week to $17.75.

With his blue stamps the WPA worker can go to any grocery store. There he can select certain foods, and pay for them with the stamps. The foods he can select include at present, wheat flour, butter, fresh grapefruit, eggs, oranges, beans. Later, fresh fruits and vegetables will be added.

The list of foods that can be bought with blue stamps will change slightly from time to time. They are what the Department of Agriculture calls "surplus foods." Whenever, anywhere in the country, there is a surplus of any food crop, and when, therefore, the price tends to drop, the Department of Agriculture steps in and buys up the surplus. The surplus thus bought is placed in the hands of the grocers, who sell it in exchange for the blue stamps.

The grocer, after receiving the blue stamps in pay for food, deposits the stamps in bank, along with his usual deposit of cash and checks. The bank sends the blue stamps to the Treasury at Washington and receives cash for them.

Politically, the plan pleases three large groups. It pleases the WPA workers, who get food for nothing. It pleases the farmers, for their surpluses are bought by the Government and the prices of their crops are kept up. It pleases the grocers—the Department of Agriculture states that the plan has received "unanimous indorsement by the National Food and Grocery Conference Committee."

Question Bears Lots Of Thinking

YET ONE wonders about those grocers. Have they given thought to what this plan may lead to in later developments? The plan would seem to point toward ultimate distribution of all food to everybody by this Government device. Will the time come when the grocer is a Government clerk in a Government-owned shop?

But the most striking feature of the plan is that only WPA workers (and others on relief) can take advantage of it. I quote from the official announcement: "Under the plan, WPA workers and people receiving public aid may obtain free the blue surplus food stamps."

How will this look to persons who are not WPA workers, or otherwise on relief? How will it look to persons in private employment at wages lower than, or about the same as, the wages received by WPA workers? Why should a WPA worker getting $14 a week (the Nation-wide average) be given $3.75 worth of food per week gratis — while a worker in private industry, receiving the same wage or less, must pay cash for exactly the same food? There are hundreds of thousands of persons in private work who get less than the $14 a week which is the WPA average—perhaps millions who receive less than the top wage paid to WPA workers, which is $90 a month. What is the point of discriminating in favor of the WPA worker, putting a handicap on the private worker?

The question will bear a good deal of thinking. It seems to be fundamental in the New Deal philosophy to give a slightly better standard of living to persons who get their living through WPA and other Government dependence, than is enjoyed by the lower-paid persons in private employment. What is the reason? And what does it lead toward? What do the New Deal thinkers have in mind? I inquire to learn, and hope to be told by those who think they see the answer.

Axis Into Alliance

By Barnet Nover

An Intimidating Move

IT IS RARE, indeed, for alliances to be announced before they are made. But that is precisely what has happened in the case of Germany and Italy, which, for at least three years, have co-operated in the field of international affairs but never, heretofore, have formalized their relationship in an alliance.

Following the conversations at Milan over the week-end of the German and Italian foreign ministers, a communique was issued stating that "it was decided to fix definitely the relations between the two axis powers, from a formal viewpoint, in a political and military pact."

The actual terms of that alliance, therefore, remain to be negotiated. All that there is, at the moment, if the communique is to be believed, is simply the determination to work out those terms.

THE QUESTION immediately arises: Why did not Germany and Italy wait until they had really concluded the alliance before announcing it?

The probable answer is to be sought in the present confused state of international affairs, with special reference to the Polish problem.

On Friday, Foreign Minister Beck of Poland made a notable speech in which he indicated that while his government was prepared to discuss with Germany the question of a change in the status of Danzig, it was not prepared to relinquish her rights and interests in the Free City. In particular, Poland was absolutely determined to maintain unimpaired her sovereignty over Pomorze (the so-called Polish Corridor).

THAT STATEMENT, coming on the heels of the conclusion of an Anglo-Polish alliance and of a strong pledge of support given Poland by France, placed Hitler in an awkward position.

To negotiate with Poland regarding Danzig and the corridor within the limitations fixed by Col. Beck would defeat the Fuehrer's purpose in raising these issues at this time. His major consideration is not sovereignty over Danzig, which would make precious little difference to the Third Reich, nor even the securing of a German-owned passageway connecting East and West Prussia.

Such gains would be satisfying to his pride and end old German grievances. But what interests Hitler particularly is that with Danzig wholly German and with a German passageway blocking Poland's access to the Baltic, Poland would no longer be in a position to play an active role in the non-aggression bloc being formed in Europe. She would, on the contrary be as much at the mercy of the Third Reich as was Czecho-Slovakia after Munich.

Unless, therefore, Poland's present determination to reject Hitler's demands is somehow undermined, the alternative facing the Third Reich is to obtain what it is after by force.

AT THIS POINT certain considerations arise to make such a course unlikely at the moment. In the first place, the German people fear a general war, particularly one in which the odds would definitely be against them. Secondly, there is no assurance that in such a war Italy would be on Germany's side. And in the other camp are Great Britain, France, Poland. To them may be added Russia.

However, Hitler has by no means given up the hope that he will be able to force Poland to capitulate without war. To that end he is mustering his heaviest propagandist and diplomatic battalions. A constant drum-fire of abuse is being kept up in the Nazi press regarding alleged Polish "atrocities," similar to those employed against Czecho-Slovakia last year. At the same time, a diplomatic drive is being made to weaken the British and French alliances with Poland.

THE ANNOUNCEMENT of the impending alliance with Italy fits in perfectly with that program. It does not in the least suggest that Italy is any more willing than she was a week ago to fight on Germany's side in a war concerning Poland. But it does suggest that Italy is quite willing to serve the axis if, in so doing, war can be averted and the developing anti-axis coalition weakened or destroyed.

In other words, the Ribbentrop-Ciano communique is less designed for its future importance, military and otherwise, than for its present diplomatic value. As such it is directed particularly at Great Britain and France who may, as a result of such pressure, seek to persuade Poland to modify its present position.

In this same category belongs the rumors, published in the German press, of a possible rapprochement between the Third Reich and Soviet Russia. There have been many such rumors before. Indeed, they have been in circulation almost from the first days of the Hitler regime, despite his fulminations against bolshevism and his ambitions regarding the Ukraine.

What truth there is in them it is difficult to say. But even if they contain not a scintilla of truth the fact must not be lost to sight that the possibility of a German-Russian rapprochement can serve Hitler admirably, at this time, by weakening Poland's will to resist. For the Poles may say, rather the loss of Danzig and any kind of compromise over the corridor than a fourth partition. And short of a direct understanding, there is nothing the Germans would like better at the moment than to have Russia retreat into a policy of isolation. The last thing they want is the actual conclusion of a Russian alliance with Great Britain.

New Yorker—So I hear. I must get out there before it closes.

Visitor—What's really the shortest route?

New Yorker—I'm not sure, because I've lived here all my life. But I know a feller who just moved to New York a few months ago and he can tell us all about every road leading to it.

Visitor—There are so many things in New York I am interested in. I hope to see the Statue of Liberty some day.

New Yorker—So do I.

Visitor—Where is the Metropolitan Museum of Art?

New Yorker—I forget. I asked a taxicab driver once and he told me but it's slipped my mind.

Visitor—Can't we visit the Hayden Planetarium some night?

New Yorker—We can if you know where to find it.

New Yorker—I've often wondered.

Visitor—How about the Poe cottage? Where's that?

New Yorker—Seems to me I read about a Poe cottage but I've never been to it, as far as I know.

New Yorker—Gracie who?

Visitor—You must be fooling. Surely you must have seen some of New York's famous places.

New Yorker—Oh, I get to Times Square, Rockefeller Center, Central Park and the Flea Circus once in a while.

Visitor—Where are the Botanical Gardens?

New Yorker—Say, is this the "Information, Please" program?

Visitor—Where's the Bronx Zoo? I've read a lot about that.

New Yorker—So have I. I think it's in Staten Island.

Visitor—And the Aquarium where Jenny Lind sang?

New Yorker—I know I could find that one. It's at the end of a subway.

Visitor—Is that the same subway that you use to go to Brooklyn?

New Yorker—How would I know? I keep telling you I'm a native New Yorker.

Visitor—I've got a cousin who's coming on from Kansas City. She comes to New York every two or three years and knows every nook and corner. I'll have to get her to show me around, I guess. Would you like to come with us?

New Yorker—No, but I guess I will. I suppose I ought to know something about my home city, now that there'll be so many visitors arriving to ask questions.

Coal Men to See Roosevelt Today

Miners

dustries threatened with a fuel famine. Asked whether the Government itself might distribute coal, she replied, "I cannot answer that."

Asked whether the Government might make its "one, two, three recommendations" tomorrow, Miss Perkins said, "No," but added that the proposals would be made soon if no agreement was reached.

She suggested that the negotiators' talk with the President might modify the nature of the recommendations.

A reference was made to the suspended Roosevelt-inspired peace conference of the C. I. O. and the A. F. L. when Miss Perkins was asked whether the rivalry between those two organizations was a factor in the coal deadlock.

"It is a vital factor," she replied, "though not the sole factor."

The U. M. W. A. has contended in the coal negotiations that it needed contract clauses that would protect it from rivals, presumably the A. F. of L.'s Progressive Miners.

In a resume of the negotiations, which she said she had given the deadlocked conferees, Miss Perkins indicated that the two principal bars to the signing of a contract still stood: the union's demand for either (1) a "union shop" or (2) elimination of strike penalty clauses.

Supplied Here for May

Fast-moving Treasury procurement division purchases shortly after the coal shutdown have stocked Government bins in Washington with enough fuel to last buildings, schools and hospitals until the end of May, a survey disclosed today.

Since the shutdown, 12,000 tons of coal have been brought to Washington by the Government.

Unless coal mining is resumed, there will be an end of air-conditioning in Government buildings, as well as hot water in the pipes, after the end of the month. The heating problem is not considered serious.

A special problem will be created in the buildings on Capitol Hill, however, where the electricity is generated by a Government coal-burning plant. It is expected, however, that the system can be connected with Potomac Electric Power Co.'s sources, which are hooked up with hydro-electric plants.

Procurement officials declared that there is no more coal available, every producer in the country having long since "scraped the boards" of what remnants he had. The division will defer its regular yearly offers for bids until mines reopen.

World's Military Chiefs of Medicine Honored

Dazzling Uniforms and Jewels Flash as Woodrings and Reynoldses Hold Reception For Delegates to Medical Congress Here

By Elizabeth Henney.

In a setting theatrically perfect Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry H. Woodring and the Surgeon General of the United States Army, Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, and Mrs. Reynolds last evening entertained at a reception in the Pan American Union in honor of the delegates to the Tenth International Congress of Military Medicine and Pharmacy.

The invitations specified "uniform with decorations, and as the iron grillwork gates swung wide into the marble hall, the guests swept in . . . officers from every country in the world, wearing the full uniform of their country, brilliant colors, gleaming medals, the wide, bright ribbons of imperial orders, and gold and silver bullion in masses of epaulets. Nor at that, did they outshine the ladies who accompanied them. Dresden figurines in frothy lace, dark-haired beauties from the Latin countries with their long-fringed shawls and vivid gowns; Viking lesses from the Norseland with their erect Brunhilde-like walk and their crowns of golden hair; piquant Orientals with their tiny figures and features, and stream-lined American beauties.

In the great front hall with it's vista of a tropical patio wound a steady queue of guests. Dividing at the hall, the honor guests went to the left, up the elevator or the marble stairway, the others ascended the marble stairway on the right.

At the entrance to the Hall of the Nations they were greeted by the Secretary and Mrs. Woodring and Gen. and Mrs. Reynolds. In the great Hall of Nations a uniformed orchestra played everything from swing music to Strauss waltzes, to the delight of the throngs who danced.

Among them were the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, the Chief of Field Artillery, Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, and Mrs. Danford; Col. Frank W. Young and Mrs. Young; Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Wallace De Witt, the Minister of Guatemala, Dr. Adrian Recinos, and Senora de Recinos.

From balconies on the far side of the hall, one could look down onto the wide flagstoned terrace in the garden. Lights from the eaves of the building gleamed down on the uniforms and gowns of those who strolled down the wide, balustraded stone stairways into the cool garden. There, where the velvet darkness closed around, the lily pond gleamed with the iridescent reflections from the mosaic-lined arches of the annex.

Count Castellani

Among Noted Guests

Strolling through the patio were Mme. Rajamaitri, wife of the Minister of Siam; the Minister of the Netherlands and Mme. Loudon. Near the soft splashing fountain in the patio stood the Minister of Rumania and Mme. Irimescu. The Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Lopez chatted with friends on the terrace, as did the Venezuelan Minister and Senora de Escalante.

Hundreds of distinguished visitors filled the building. Men who, in their own countries, are the the outstanding medical men of their generation. There was Senator Count Aldo Castellani de Chisiamaio of Italy. His work as the medical director of the Italian expeditionary forces in Ethiopia, and his splendid work in keeping the army free from epidemics earned for him a lifetime senatorship in Italy, the title of Count and the additional title of lieutenant general in the Italian navy.

There was Gen. A. Savornin, Surgeon General of the French Army, and Col. Jean des Cilleuls, chief of the medical section of the French Ministry of War; Col. A. Campbell Monro, of the Indian Medical Service.

The highest ranking medical officer in the world was there, Gen. A. Waldmann of the German army, the only full four star general in any medical corps. There were also Maj. E. Marques Porto, of the Brazilian army; Capt. Kamol Balajiva and Lieut. Dibya Sutabaha, of the Siamese medical service. This is the first time, it is understood, that Siam has sent representatives to the medical congress.

Brig. Gen. Raymond F. Metcalfe, chief surgeon at Walter Reed Hospital, was accompanied by Mrs. Metcalfe. Also noted were Col. and Mrs. Rufus Holt, Col. and Mrs. James P. Crawford, Col. and Mrs. Charles Walson and Miss Betty Walson, Capt. Oliver K. Niess, Capt. Kenneth A. Brewer, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Edgar A. Hume, Maj. Gen. Walter A. Baker, chief of the Chemical Warfare Service, and Mrs. Baker.

Col. and Mrs. Herbert C. Gibner, the newly appointed Surgeon General of the Army and Mrs. James C. Magee, the Chief of the National Guard, Maj. Gen. Albert H. Blanding and Mrs. Blanding; Col. William L. Keller, Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Baron Valentin Mandelstamm, the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy and Mme Oumansky, Col. and Mrs. Oscar Griswold.

Maj. T. W. Wartiovaara, of Finland, was accompanied by Mme. Wartiavaara. Col. Jules Voncken, of Belgium, was there as was Col. F. G. Patry, of Switzerland; the Panamanian Minister and Senora de Boyd and many, many others.

Medical Club Gives Luncheon

The Colombian Ambassador, Don Miguel Lopez Pumarejo, was ranking guest at a luncheon given yesterday at the Mayflower Hotel for delegates to the tenth International Congress of Military Medicine and Pharmacy.. The International Medical Club of Washington, of which Dr. Lee McCarthy is president, acted as host.

The Minister of Panama, Senor Dr. Don Augusto S. Boyd, who is slated to become ambassador from his country to the United States, was present as a delegate.

Among other members of the diplomatic corps in attendance were the Minister of Sweden, Wollmar Bostrom; the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted; the Minister of El Salvador, Dr. Don Hector David Castro; the Minister of the Netherlands, Dr. Alexander Loudon and the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar J. Procope.

Seventy-five delegates to the congress were included in the company of 125 at the luncheon. Among them were Maj. Gen. E. A. Luyssen, chief of the Belgian delegation; Lieut. Col. W. Southard Quint, of the Canadian delegation; Lieut. Col. Y. T. Seuderling, chief of the delegation of Finland; Lieut. Gen. A. R. Savornin, surgeon general of France, and chief of his country's delegation; Maj. Gen. R. Priest, chief of the British delegation; Col. A. Campbell Munro, of India; Count Aldo Castellani of the Italian delegation; Maj. Abelardo Leal Rodriguez of Mexico; Gen. C. P. Iliescu, of Rumania; Commodore Herbert Westermark, of Sweden; Col. Jules Thomann, chief of the Swiss delegation and Col. Sureyya Serter, of Turkey.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New Yorkers Take Pride in Their Fair—Believe It or Not!

New York, May 8.

MANY A NEW YORKER is eating crow these days—underdone and withoutout seasoning. For the past two years our citizens have been so belabored and worn down with World's Fair publicity that they have instinctively undersold and even unmercifully killed the Flushing show. But now that the thing is open and thriving, they have suddenly realized that they have something big and wonderful out there. Civic pride is really getting 'em, and they are becoming as chesty as the citizens of Rising Creek when the town band gets new red uniforms.

ALICE HUGHES.

Women especially are already heavily sold on that little show out thar. By day it may seem angular and "modern," in some spots, but by night that fair is certainly a thing of unearthly beauty. Still struggling to get back my full health and head of pep after my recent illness, I got to the opening ceremonies—though I had to fight 10 fast rounds with my recluse-helpmate, old Len Hall, to make it. He thought the effort would kill me dead, but I fooled him. And so I was one of the 600,000 who helped break open the place on April 30.

The President of the United States was there, too, and so was his wondrous wife. Mrs. Roosevelt helped the fair and the family along by wearing a handsome print dress speckled with tiny white trylons and perispheres on a field of brown. This is the fabric designed by her niece, Eleanor, 2nd. And the handsomest woman on the grounds was Mrs Herbert Lehman, wife of our Governor. She wore a navy blue suit to the opening ceremonies.

It was a frantic day. Forty restaurants couldn't cope with the the demands for grub, and many customers squawked about the food's high prices. Rain started to fall at four in the afternoon—but Aunt Alice, weary and happy, was on her way home to Murray Hill by then. Well, it's taught us all a lesson this fair. Never sell a big show short, here. It's apt to be much more wonderful than we believe.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Dearie me, always pleasant didoes when the fleet's in! Take that musician of the U. S. S. New York, who turned up on his battle-wagon at 5 the other morning without his—pardon me—pants. They threw him in the brig to relax and repent, while our constables kept a keen eye on the town. Pretty soon our Miss Barbara Wendell, all of 20, was found in a—excuse me—saloon wearing the missing sailor's trousers, also his gob hat, and even carrying his shore pass. Miss Barbara went to the lock-up, and told Judge Jeanette Brill that the sailor was relieved of his necessaries when he fell asleep at a party. All in good fun, it was. But Judge Jeanette didn't like the joke, escially since there was no way of getting the trousers back to the gob without leaving Miss Wendell in a very embarassing situation. But now it's all right. Heigho, the fleet's in!

My gosh, we don't totter out of the big movie houses these days, we swim, and in our town tears. With brilliant Bette Davis dying beautifully in "Dark Victory" at the Music Hall, and the lovely Merle Oberon passing away gorgeously in "Wuthering Heights" at the Rivoli, we girls have completely run out of hankies! Jolly times at la cinema, hey, kids?

'Fleet's In' and Sailor Lives To Repent

I MISSED my aged and dithering spouse, Len Hall, the day after the fair opened, and he was gone for 48 hours. When he came back he confessed, through his tears, that he had been following the magnificant band of Britain's Coldstream Guards, here for a month. Sucker for a fine brass band, this fellow—even after fighting and dying for his country over 20 years ago! But it's some band, girls—60 stalwarts in red and gold and blue, all tooting nobly!

Your Figure Madam

Circus Aerialist Has Figure Models Envy; Victoria Torrence Is Noted for Throatline; Tells How She Achieved Perfect Measurements

THE CIRCUS comes to town and with it this year the girl on the "flying aerial perch," a slippery perpendicular pole which makes the ordinary trapeze seem as safe as a kitchen rocker. The girl? Lovely Victoria Torrence, with a throatline that might have been freshly chiseled from marble and a figure that a Manhattan model might envy.

Right here and now, let me assure you that I do not expect any of you to take up aerial acrobatics for the sake of your figure. But I am bound to tell you about Miss Torrence for, after seeing her, I know that any promises I have made as to what exercise can do for your figure have been sadly inadequate. Hearing about her will make you want to do your throat exercises faithfully and put genuine enthusiasm into your workouts on the stretching bar.

Bust Contour Perfect

In the first place, that throatline! It caught my eyes as I watched her thrilling performance at Madison Square Garden and proved to be just as lovely close up when I saw her for the interview. Although part of her act is to hang by the teeth to one of those "iron jaws" while going into a spin that would shame a whirling dervish, there is no overdevelopment of the throat muscles. And you all seem to be so afraid of bulging muscles!

What has happened is this: the two big muscles at the back of the neck have been strengthened, giving our favorite aerialist a gracefully erect head carriage at all times, and the muscle tissues along the lower jaw line are so firm and compact that she can never have a sagging throat or double chin. Now will you do your throat exercises!

To the average woman, however, the most amazing thing about this figure is the perfection of the chest and bust contour. Constant use of the pectoral muscles, originating at the shoulders, spreading fanwise cross the chest and inserted in the upper arm, would seem to be the main factor in the development of a beautiful bust. You can use these muscles every day by pulling up on your stretching bar. But, Miss Torrence cautions, don't just hang there as a dead weight! Turn the palms forward, and pull up with every muscle in your body, keeping your toes on the floor.

Used to Be a Home Girl

As the result of a continual exercise program, her measurements are: Bust, 37 inches; waist, 24 inches; hips, 35 inches. How'd you like a figure like that?

Until 1928, Miss Torrence was a home girl, enthusiastic about sports but accustomed to doing her share of the housework. Now she is married to her partner—who used to teach gymnastics—and they have some sound ideas as to how the average housewife can keep a lovely figure.

If you can manage to swim often, Victoria Torrence thinks it is the best exercise in the world, "for it gives movement to every muscle in the body and makes long, smooth lines." But if you cannot engage in outdoor sports, the team agrees that mild calisthenics will answer the purpose.

Mr. Torrence add, that "everything in life, if you do it right, can be exercise. At all tasks, the body should be given an upward lift with the muscles. After a short time, you get so you cannot do your work with bad posture—then you are getting exercise all day long."

'Packable' Fabrics Aid Travelers

2 Designers Perfect Burma Mesh and Durella Creations For Hats, Dresses

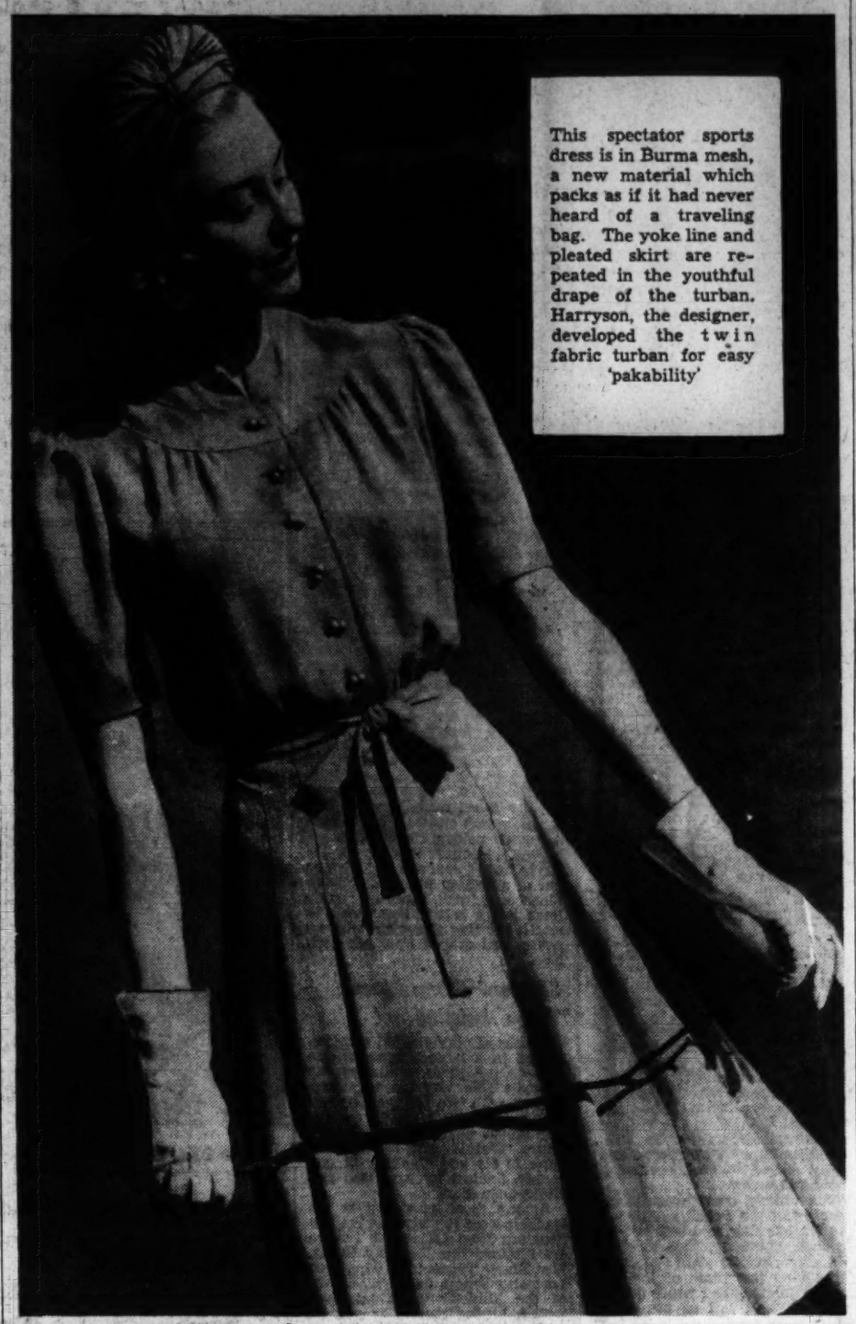
By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

It's exhilarating to discover new climates and new faces—but any traveler with half an eye to her personal appearance will admit that first impressions are usually lasting ones. It's no more fun for your gracious hostess to sputter little white lies about how fresh and sweet you look after a long journey than for you to garble apologies about having packed in a split second to catch that train.

Long awaited vacations, plane trips to the Fair or even a weekend in the country demand your immediate attention—or soon will. Good news comes to the girl with wanderlust in her veins for recently her biggest problem of packing has been solved for her. Pakable dresses and hats have now been perfected by a duet of designers so that excuses over rumpled bonnets and frocks are as old hat as last year's shako.

Two fabrics have been developed for authentic pakable clothes which have been especially processed for crease resistance. The exciting names of Burma mesh and Durella prints give a clue to the varieties of interesting textures and patterns utilized. Unbiased tests have proved that long confinement in crowded luggage still permits these hats and frocks to come out as crisp and unwrinkled as before packing. The simple and well bred styles of these twin classics also give the traveler little excuse for carting along too much luggage. One or two changes of costume among these pakable twins is all a tourist needs—whether flying to Rio for the summer or making up an overnight bag for a weekend at the seashore with the girl next door.

'Pakable' Twin Frock and Turban



This spectator sports dress is in Burma mesh, a new material which packs as if it had never heard of a traveling bag. The yoke line and pleated skirt are repeated in the youthful drape of the turban. Harryson, the designer, developed the twin fabric turban for easy 'pakability'

Curtsy? 'Yes Indeed!' Says Mrs. DeGoofey

COURAGEOUSLY attacking a problem that is almost driving Washington women to their sick beds, Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, founder and president of the Do Something About It League, has come out flat-footedly in favor of the curtsy to royalty.

Mrs. De Goofey

At her press conference yesterday the famous reformer announced that "literally thousands" of Washington women had been seeking her advice on what to wear and whether or not to curtsy when they were presented to the British King and Queen at social events planned for them—particularly the garden party.

"Now, I am definitely for the curtsy," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "It's a much simpler and more sanitary custom than shaking hands, and is much more graceful than a bow, especially for women of prominent hips. It also is an invaluable exercise for reducing the abdomen."

"But isn't there some danger that certain women will—er lose their balance when curtsying?" asked a reporter.

"Not if the proper precautions are taken," said Mrs. DeGoofey. "Now, when I made a world tour with the late Mr. DeGoofey I was frequently presented to royalty and I learned a few little aids in connection with the curtsy. One is the wearing of an athletic—or even a surgical—girdle. The other is the use of a drawstring across the front of the skirt so that you may pull it up as you descend and thus avoid stumbling over it.

Shepherd's Crooks For Garden Gambolers

"Then, of course, a staff of some kind is a valuable aid. Now, since I have taken up the use of the hunting stick—in order to be sure of a seat on all occasions—I have found it a wonderful support in curtsying.

"However, since many women do not habitually carry hunting sticks, the Do Something About It League is arranging to provide beautiful shepherd's crooks tied with gigantic bows of lavender ribbon for all women who attend the royal garden party. We feel sure this will prevent many spills in the reception line."

"Are you doing anything about what the garden party guests shall wear, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a woman reporter.

"Yes, indeed. We are advocating that all women guests wear shepherdess costumes with hip panniers, floor-length skirts, and, of course, shepherdess hats. By everyone wearing the same kind of costume no feelings will be hurt. It will also facilitate the work of the society editors who will not have to describe every costume in detail. Also, we feel this custom will make all visiting Britisher observers very happy, as it will enable them to reiterate that all American women look and dress alike."

"Should the guests also carry parasols, Mrs. DeGoofey?" inquired a foreign correspondent.

"That, I should say, would depend entirely upon their political beliefs"

"Have you any other aids for the garden party guests?" Mrs. DeGoofey was asked.

"Yes, our league will provide collapsible rubberized cushions that can be blown up like balloons. These will come in large cellophane bags of assorted colors.

Parachute Descent At Big Moment

"Now then, suppose the garden party is approaching the royal visitors. She will gracefully draw her rubberized cushion out of her cellophane bag and blow it up to the necessary size. Then grasping her shepherd's crook firmly for support, she will drop her cushion and as she descends give a quick grab to the drawstring in the front of her dress. Her skirts will rise and she will sink one knee comfortably on the rubber cushion, at the same time inclining her head.

"She will then draw herself up by her crook, let her dress down by the drawstring, grab the cushion, collapse it, return it to her cellophane bag and proceed gayly on her way."

"But, Mrs. DeGoofey, have you thought of the possibility that some of the—er—heavier guests might have difficulty in hoisting themselves after the curtsy?"

"We will be fully prepared for such an emergency. Groups of Boy Scouts equipped with belts and pulleys will be at convenient spots on the grounds."

"Anything else, Mrs. DeGoofey?"

"Yes, I should like the press to explain that the Do Something About It League is mailing out 500,000 mimeographed copies of garden party instructions in response to the inquiries we have received."

"By the way Mrs. DeGoofey," asked a political commentator, "have you received your invitation yet to the garden party?"

"We—ll, no . . . not as yet. But I am expecting it in every mail."

Westerner Calls Washington Men Sorry-Looking Lot; Says It's No Wonder Their Wives Are Lovelorn

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young, happy, healthy, normal (I hope) married man in my early thirties. I have a healthy, beautiful, vibrant wife whom I love very dearly, and a young, husky, stalwart son—and hope to have more just like him as soon as my pocketbook will allow. (Yes, my wife is willing, thank the Lord!) And we have a modest but sufficient income. Five years ago we came to Washington from a Rocky Mountain State in the West.

Now for my comment: From time to time, I notice that the problem of "emotionally frustrated wives" crops up in your column. This interests me, for I believe that emotional frustration is at the root of most marital troubles submitted to you. When I arrived here, I couldn't help but notice the physical differences between Easterners and the people who live out West. It is especially noticeable in men. Take a walk down F street and lok at the crop of men converging there. Most of them are dressed in the height of fashion (even to the point of being foppish), but the physical bodies beneath the clothes show signs of being sadly neglected.

Never in my life have I seen such a nondescript array of underdeveloped, lily-fingered, emaciated (some paunchy), "pansyfied" lot of men—typical drugstore cowboys. There are exceptions. The football players and other athletes of the city (very, very few) stand out like giant redwoods in a forest. But the rest—oh, my! No wonder we have frustrated wives and disappointed, unescorted girls in the city. This impression struck me the first day I landed in Washington.

The women, I notice, seem to be in much better physical condition than the men, on the whole. There are a few exceptions—women who have starved themselves down to a mere rack of bones to emulate the far-too-thin Garbo, Lombard, Hepburn, et al, and have become slaves of every whimsical, eccentric fashion trend emanating from New York and Hollywood; who live an artificial life in the fullest sense of the word, cocktail soaked, tobacco-voiced, with nerves and facial expressions drawn taut as a bow-string and who appear to lack the physical and mental basis to respond to, or to be stimulated by, any healthy emotion. But I repeat that these are in the minority.

Most of the women appear to be healthy physical specimens, mentally and physically capable of their responsibilities in life. No doubt you are wondering, "Well, what would you propose to do about these wrongfully frustrated wives?" You, Miss Haworth, have already given about the best advice for those who are doomed to stay put. But, I think I know what I would do if I found myself in the place of some of these wives. If I were half-way attractive, physically sound, mentally normal, and had access to a little cash, I would drop my impotent millstone of a husband like a hot potato, via the divorce route. Then I would pack my duds and hie myself out to a country where I could meet some real, honest-to-God, he-men.

It is a woman's God-given right to have a home and children and all that goes with it. A woman is not complete without it and neither is a man. The approximation of perfection cannot be attained without these conditions of existence. A house full of dogs, cats and other pets does not make a home and never will. If you feel justified in printing this, I have my ears already cupped in my hands, awaiting the repercussions from you and your correspondents. My neck is out, so come on with the ax!

ROCKY MOUNTAINEER.

The Woman's Business

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is happening to the modern American man? There seems to be a surprisingly large number who refuse to shoulder their marital responsibilities — thus plunging their wives into a bewildering and tragic situation. Strange as it may seem, the responsibility for correcting this situation devolves upon the woman's shoulders, a fact which most of them fail to recognize. It is their business to preserve the marriage by curing its ills. It is their right and duty to DO something about it; something forceful, strategic and courageous. All the sniveling patience and meekness exhibited by frustrated wives, in their letters to you, is not—as they seem to believe—a testimonial of their virtue, but a plain confession of cowardice alone.

I am one of those women. Or was, for three years, until it suddenly dawned on me one day that I was retreating rather than enduring, being weak instead of strong. It devolves upon the normal partner willingly to assume the problem which the other, by virtue of a form of illness, cannot face or solve. To "Sue," (your correspondent of May 3) and any others in the same predicament, I would say this: she is morally obligated to do just as you have advised her to do (i.e., "see a psysician, given him the full facts, and let him interpret the situation") before entertaining the slightest notion of divorce.

In the light of experience, let me advise "Sue" not to expect any co-operation except that which she coolly arranges and demands. See a doctor; report the findings of that interview without argument, extenuation or urging; then calmly announce to the husband that he is to see the same doctor at such-and-such an hour on a certain day. Allow no time for scenes or apprehension. When once the doctor takes over, then her duty is done, beyond continuing to take the matter sensibly and with loving good nature; "to love, honor and cherish, in sickness, etc." And let her remember that "God helps those who help themselves."

Luncheon for Crown Prince and Princess Given by Hulls Is Both Glamorous and Gay

Senator Barkley 45 Minutes Late Working For Kentucky Tobacco Constituents; the Wadsteds' Dinner Is Last for Danish Royalty

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

GLAMOROUS AND GAY was the luncheon given yesterday by Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull for T. H. R. Crown Prince Frederik and Crown Princess Ingrid of Denmark and Iceland. Much too delightful, in fact, to miss the first part entirely, as did Senator Barkley, who arrived 45 minutes late, full of apologies and explanations. There was a Senate debate to be opened and an amendment to be offered in which he had special interest.

"It was for the tobacco growers," he said, which seemed to make his Kentucky reason bear weight. And from then on, the party moved merrily along without an interrupting ripple.

It should have. It had everything, including royal guests of honor, a gracious and distinguished host and hostess, superb appointments, and an interesting list of guest. The huge oval table was a dream, planned to perfection by Mrs. Hull herself, who had chosen pink roses as the blossoms to be featured. They sprouted from four tall silver vases and five alternating silver bowls, the center one standing on a mirror edged with still more roses.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS, the Crown Princess, whose beauty defies description (mine, anyway) wore a tangerine crepe frock, simply made, beneath a matching wool coat, and a black straw picture hat with a gathered band of net veiling the brim and the crown, the latter of which was trimmed in a narrow tangerine ribbon.

Mrs. Hull had on a draped print blouse over a dark skirt and a becoming black hat with flowers on the front blending with the shades in her frock. Bouquets of double lilacs and mixed spring blossoms decorated the drawing room, where guests were received.

MOST OF the company had assembled, everybody, in fact, except Senator Barkley, when the royal couple arived, and smoothly and speedily thereafter the receiving line formed with Secretary and Mrs. Hull, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, and members of the royal party greeting the 30-odd other guests. Some curtsied, some did not. Whatever you did seemed all right; and in no time at all the company was moving into the Carlton Room, where the luncheon took place.

Music of the Marine Band and lively talk up one side of the table and down the other stopped only once—near the end of the luncheon, when Secretary Hull stood and proposed a toast to the King of Denmark. A toast to the President of the United States, voiced by the Crown Prince, followed as a fitting climax for the event. A few minutes later, the ladies were on their way back to the drawing room for coffee and liquer, and within ten minutes the entire company reassembled there briefly before saying good-by.

COUNTESS Sybille M. L. Reventlow, lady in waiting to the Crown Princess, was a center of much attention at the luncheon, as were all members of the royal party, including Capt. Johan V. F. Vest, Commander Philip C. Weilbach and Karl L. Eskelund, chief of the press department of the Danish foreign office, whose observations on America and Americans are both enlightening and flattering.

Justice and Mrs. Hugo Black were luncheon guests; also, Secretary of War and Mrs. Harry Woodring, Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings, Mrs. James F. Byrnes, Representative Sam Rayburn, House majority leader; Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., House minority leader, and the newly appointed American Ambassador to Spain and Mrs. Alexander Weddell, who will sail May 17 for his post.

STILL OTHERS THERE were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, Miss Mabel T. Boardman, the former United States Ambassador to the Argentine and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who entertained the Crown Princess at tea yesterday afternoon while the Crown Prince was visiting Annapolis; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Watson, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Arthur Krock, Miss Margaret Hart, Lieut. Col. W. C. Crane, American military aide to the Crown Prince; Commander Lloyd J. Wiltse, American naval aide to the Crown Prince; Stanley Woodward and Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Patchen, of New York.

IMPRESSIONS: I'd curtsy every chance I get if I could do it as daintly as Mrs. Bliss . . . The Crown Princess, Mrs. Woodring and Mrs. Black, seated in a row and chatting over coffee cups, were as pretty a trio as I've seen lately. ("Mrs. Black, all in white," someone commented) . . . A prize possession of the Crown Prince, according to after-luncheon talk, is a cigarette case, bearing a picture of the United States with industries designated . . . It was purchased by his wife in New York . . . She likes American shops . . . Countess Reventlow said she would adore to come back to this country for a long, long visit . . . She, Mrs. Dunn and Mrs. Bliss seemed to have much to talk about . . . Mrs. Tydings had on one of the prettiest outfits there—a little-girl hat of natural straw, flower-trimmed, sitting on the back of her head; a black frock with a fitted bodice and full skirt; very effective . . . The Crown Prince said his American experience had been "pleasant but strenuous" . . . the Crown Princess described it as "wonderful, but too brief" . . . Mr. Esklund declared he would like nothing better than "at least six months here."

As the final fete on the Washington calendar for the Crown Prince and Crown Princess, there was a dinner ("small and informal," according to Minister Wadsted) last evening at the Danish Legation. Later, the royal couple and their party left for New York. They will sail from there tomorrow.

Polish Envoy Honors Group Here for Fair

Dinner Is Followed By Buffet Supper For 100 Other Guests

A sextet of distinguished Poles who are visiting the Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, were honored at a dinner given last night at the Embassy, on Sixteenth street. They are Antoni Roman, Minister of Industry and Commerce, and Mme. Roman, Col. Alexander Bobkowski, Vice Minister of Communications, and his wife, who is a daughter of the President of Poland, and August Zaleski, former Foreign Minister of Poland, and Mme. Zaleska.

After the dinner an additional 100 guests, members of official and residential society, were asked to greet the visitors over champagne and the usual excellent buffet which one finds when the Polish Ambassador entertains.

Harry Hopkins, Secretary of Commerce, who will give a luncheon for the visitors Thursday, was at the dinner, as were the Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace. Others were the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, the Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Richard C. Noble, of the Commerce Department, and Mrs. Noble; the Director of the Export-Import Bank and Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hawkins and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Feis, of the State Department, and Sir Willmot Lewis.

Mrs. John H. Whitney drove from Llangollen Farm for the dinner, bringing with her her house guest, Mrs. Ruth Waddell, of London. Mrs. Whitney expects to be at her Upperville home for some time. Others at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fleming, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, Thaddeus Lychowski and A. B. Giedioyc, of the Ministry and Commerce; Mrs. Witold Wankowicz, wife of the Embassy Counselor; Sylvestor Gruszka, Commercial Counselor of the Embassy; Janusz Zoltowski, Financial Counselor; the Military Attache and Mme. Mrs. Preston McGoodwin Fetes Senora de Somoza

Guest of Honor Is Accompanied By Sra. de Bayle

One of the most widely feted visitors in Washington this season, Senora de Somoza, wife of the President of Nicaragua, was guest of honor yesterday at a large reception given by Mrs. Preston McGoodwin, wife of the former United States Minister to Venezuela.

A spacious suite at the Hay-Adams House, where the McGoodwins live, was the setting for the party, which got under way at 4 o'clock and was still going strong a couple of hours later. The hostess received with Senora de Somoza and Senora de De Bayle, wife of the Minister of Nicaragua, who has also been very much in the social whirl since her country's Chief Executive and his attractive wife came to town.

The trio, standing at the door of the drawing room, made a pretty picture, their frocks blending nicely, as if each had been chosen to go with the others. Mrs. McGoodwin had on a gown of moss chiffon and lace, fashioned with a full skirt, a fitted bodice and short sleeves. The guest of honor wore toast crepe, tucked from shoulder to hemline, with a draped bodice and three-quarter-length sleeves. Her hat, an unusually smart model, had a dark brown crown straw, rimmed with a narrow natural-straw brim.

Pretty, petite Senora de De Bayle looked as if she had stepped out of a fashion plate. Her navy blue crepe frock, made on simple lines, had a belt of lime suede to match her tiny straw hat with its frothy veil draped over her dark hair.

Senators' Wives Among Those Assisting

Masses of pink gladioli were reflected in a large mirror on one side of the room, while on the opposite side was the tea table, decked with two bouquets of yellow roses. An unusual decorative accent was effected in a miniature "Washington's Monument," done in ice and standing in one corner, flanked by American and Nicaraguan flags.

Among those presiding at the tea table were the wives of the two Senators from Oklahoma (where the McGoodwins formerly lived), Mrs. Elmer Thomas and Mrs. Josh Lee; also Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister of Guatemala, whose black frock was set off with a rose-petal hat; Mrs. George Messersmith, looking cool and handsome in a gown of rose and white figured chiffon; Mrs. Benton McMillan, one of the most popular persons present; Mrs. Ollie James, whose wide-brimmed black hat and figured frock were most becoming, and Mrs. Thomas Burke, in a smart black ensemble.

Generally assisting were Mrs. Maurice H. Thatcher, who wore a figured frock featuring shades of luggage tan and beige, with a wide-brimmed tan hat; Senora de Lecuna, Mrs. Elsa McGuire and Miss Luisa Teetz.

Many Notables Seen in Throng

Lillian Somoza had quite a group of pretty young things around her, among them Senorita Laurita Recinos, Senorita Rosa Castro Beeche, Senorita Maria Teresa Escalante and Senorita Leonora Campbell . . . Senora de Ghiraldo, whose husband will soon be leaving to take over his duties as Minister to five Central American Republics, had on one of the prettiest outfits there—a powder blue frock with a tiny matching hat, trimmed in small black plumes . . . Representative Caroline O'Day, coming straight from "The Hill," said she left her desk full of work that needed to be done . . . Mrs. John J. Dempsey looking fresh and pretty in a snappy black and white ensemble . . . Baroness von Below, holding a little court all her own near the door . . . Senora de Lopez, wife of the Colombian Ambassador, threading her way through the crowd to the tea table . . . Mrs. Emil Hurja, wearing a becoming broad-brimmed black hat with a blending print frock, chatting with friends here, there, and everywhere . . . Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, among the early arrivals . . . Senora de Guimaraes, in a stunning beige suit with a hat to match and a blouse of white and beige figures . . . Mme. Oumansky, Mrs. Jack Beall, Mrs. John Enochs, and Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie also glimpsed in the crowd.

Mme. Hassan Is 'At Home'

There was plenty of talk at the "at home" given yesterday by Mme. Hassan, wife of the Egyptian Minister, but you could still hear your own voice. There were plenty of people too, but just enough to make it fairly easy to reach the lavish buffet.

Mme Hassan, in white starched lace and wearing a scarab on a long chain, received most informally, and was here, there and everywhere making her guests feel really "at home."

Glimpsed in the company, the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy and Mme. Oumansky, she in a dark print; the Finnish Minister, Hjalmar Procope, who was chatting with Mme. Constantin Fotitch, whose pastel frock had pink accents; Mrs. Sol Bloom in brown with a brown hat; Miss Vera Bloom wearing a wide-brimmed white hat and a dark blue dress with white pin stripes; the Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation and Mme. George Boncesco, she in a black, close-fitting hat and black and white print, and the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga.

Still others there were the Latvian Minister and Mme. Bilmanis; the Greek Minister-Counselor and Mme. George Depasta; the wife of the Secretary of the Iranian Legation, Mme. Hadjeb-Davallou, in a dark blue suit; Miss Nora Magee, Mr. and Mrs. H. Charles Spruks, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Britten, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hare, Henry S. Villard, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Allen.

Von Numers Family To Sail to Finland

The Secretary of the Finnish Legation, Dr. Sigurd von Numers, has been transferred to the Foreign Office in Finland, and with his wife and two small children will sail the end of the month for their homeland. Since coming to Washington several years ago, Dr. and Mme. von Numers have made many friends who will be sorry to see them go.

Brewsters Fete French Envoy At the Sulgrave

Count de Saint Quentin Meets Some Americans Outside Diplomatic Set

Another dinner in honor of the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, went on the record last evening when Representative and Mrs. Ralph Brewster, of Maine, took over the Sulgrave Club, lock, stock and bar, to fete 90 guests.

Silver candelabra with white tapers, crystal chandeliers and long mirrors sparkled down on the scene at which the flowers—red roses, blue fleur de lis and white stock—carried out the colors of France and the United States.

Mrs. Brewster received in a gown of black marquisette and lace fashioned with a train. On her shoulder was a corsage of purple orchids.

Somoza Feted By Holcombs

Starting out as a garden fete, the party given yesterday afternoon by the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Holcomb, turned out to be a presidential reception when the President of Nicaragua, Gen. Anastasio Somoza arrived on the scene. Even old man weather, who had been scowling himself into a perfect storm all day, relaxed into a sunny smile for the occasion.

Beginning at 5:30 with a parade in the quadrangle of the Marine Barracks behind the Commandant's quarters, the party continued until week after 7 o'clock.

The Commandant and Mrs. Holcomb received with their guest of honor, first in the drawing room and later in the cool, green high-walled garden.

Mrs. Holcomb was gowned in a chiffon print garden party frock of an orchid print with a light background. Its tones were matched by her orchid corsage and she wore a pair of long white jade earrings.

Disconsolate Gallery of Modern Art Staff Hangs Crepe on Door as It Officially Closes

THAT WREATH of withered calla lilies tied with black crepe streamers on the door of 736 Seventeenth street yesterday marked the official passing of the Washington Gallery of the Museum of Modern Art. As the last van pulled away with the textiles, ceramics and furniture which composed the gallery's final exhibit, the office staff felt so badly that they rescued some of the flowers which had been on show and made a funeral wreath. Since it was inaugurated two years ago by Mrs. Dwight Davis and Mrs. George Garrett, the gallery has always drawn hundreds of notables to every opening, but finally folded because of the difficulty of getting enough paying memberships.

EZRA POUND, the wiry-haired expatriate poet, is in Washington, and one person he hopes to see during his stay is Mrs. Roosevelt. Champion of James Joyce and other well-knowns in their earliest struggles, he has lived abroad, mostly in London and Paris, since 1907. When living in Paris he was noted, among other things, for the velveteen suits and wide-open collars he wore. It all seems even more unusual when one considers that he comes originally from Hailey, Idaho.

MEDITATIONS on royalty:

George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol for the State Department, refuses to hand down an edict officially on whether or not to curtsy, but we notice that his daughter-in-law, Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., did not bend a knee when presented to the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Denmark.

Nobody works any harder than royalty on tour. It would even seem difficult for them even to relax after official hours, at least judging by a very small party held for Prince Bertil of Sweden after a state banquet on his visit to Washington last summer. At that particular "off-the-record" gathering, this columnist and the Prince's two American aides were the only people present outside the royal party. Everybody but the Prince and one or two others went out to the kitchen to fry eggs, including His Highness own Aide-de-Camp, a wonderful gentleman done up in a powder blue uniform hung with medals, who fried the bacon. Then everybody gathered around the diningroom table to sing, but if the Prince started in on a swing version of "Dinah" when the others were already launched on a different song, everybody broke off and listened politely to him. Every few minutes a member of his party would approach him and say "Don't forget all your luggage has to be ready at such-and-such an hour," etc., etc.

EVIE ROBERT'S invitations to her "stall party" for the press yesterday read "Big Surprise," and there were several in store for the guests. It was a get together to talk over plans for the Junior League horse show June 2, 3 and 4, so those present got into the proper spirit by abandoning the porch of the Meadow Brook Club and going to sit around on boxes in the stables. High point of the afternoon came when Peter Carter, wearing high heels and a fringed satin dress, mounted Evie's famous horse, John the Baptist, to pose for pictures. "Chip" Robert did his usual excellent job as master of ceremonies, and his wife was as friendly and hospitable as she always is.

MORE PARTIES for the merry month of May: Mrs. Nathan Wyeth is asking a few friends in for tea on Monday in honor of Miss Carolyn Levering of Baltimore, fiancee of her son, Stuart Wyeth. The wedding will take place next fall . . . Mrs. Eldridge Jordan has cards out for Wednesday, May 17, at 5:30.

Mrs. J. C. Tribby Entertains at Country Club Tea

Mrs. J. Clinton Tribby entertained yesterday afternoon at a 5 to 7 party at the Army-Navy Country Club. Carrying out a color scheme of pink, the carnations in low bowls on the tea tables were of that shade as were the tall tapers. The hostess, gowned in salad green crepe, with a gardenia corsage, wore pearls.

Assisting at the tea table were Mrs. Claude Pepper, Mrs. John H. Overton, Mrs. Herron Pearson, Mrs. Paul Maloney, Mrs. John McMillan, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, Mrs. Eugene O. Sykes, Mrs. Robert Gates, Mrs. Dwight Webb, Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mrs. Chauncey Carter, Mrs. Mary Buford, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. Garland Ferguson and Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden.

Noted among the guests were Lady Bradford Leslie, Mrs. Ewing Thomason, Mrs. Justin Miller, in navy blue with a flowered hat; Mrs. Emil Hurja in print chiffon, Mrs. Walter F. George in blue with a peaked hat, Mrs. Joseph Daly and Mrs. Ollie James.

Members of the District chapters of the P. E. O. yesterday were urged by their national president, Mrs. Chellie Stevens Wright, to meet the challenge of present day chaos with poise, strength of conviction and righteous examples. "It is our responsibility to preserve and protect, by the unassailable integrity of our own actions, the constitutional freedom under which we live and breathe and bespeak our own souls," she said.

Mrs. Wright addressed the District members at the fourth annual convention since the local P. E. O. chapters—now 15—merged into one. The sessions, including the banquet last night, were held at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred. Mrs. W. W. Stockberger, retiring president, presided, and reports of officers were given.

Past presidents who reported were Miss Laura van Duyn Hanson, Mrs. Kenneth Jacob, Dr. Ella R. Fales. The three gave a breakfast for State officers and the supreme president yesterday morning at the hotel.

State officers in addition to Mrs. Stockberger are Mrs. Robert M. Ferguson, first vice president; Miss S. Elizabeth Reynolds, second vice president; Mrs. T. A. Hutton, organizer; Miss Margery Williams, recording secretary; Mrs. F. W. Reynolds, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Jean Maxwell, treasurer. Election of new officers takes place today with Mrs. Ferguson slated for the presidency.

The chapters in the District have done much philanthropic work in addition to giving support to Cottey College, which the organization maintains, and contributing to the educational fund of the P. E. O.

Mrs. Harry L. Underwood, of Chapter G, was general convention chairman, with Chapters G and H as hostesses.

Music Featured On Program

The music at the morning session included vocal solos by Mrs. Helen Turley and Mrs. William B. Cafky, of Chapter B, and at the afternoon session, solos by Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, vice president general of the D. A. R. and member of Chapter L, and piano solos by Mrs. F. F. Elliott of Chapter F.

The delegates were presented with yellow handbags made by Mrs. Grant S. Barnhart, of Chapter G, and decorated with the yellow and white marguerites, the P. E. O. flower. Songbooks, similarly decorated, were made by Mrs. W. R. Reed, of Chapter G. Mrs. Stokberger was presented with a bouquet by members of her chapter.

Mrs. R. M. Wolfe of Chapter B, was chief guard, and Mrs. Elliott F. Brumbaugh, of Chapter B, the president's personal page; Mrs. Helen McIntosh, of Chapter G, the general chairman's page; Mrs. Edgar Briant Meritt and Mrs. Horton H. McKeever, both of Chapter B, reporters. Pianists who are serving during the convention are Miss Florence Reynolds and Mrs. George Sutton of Chapter H; Mrs. Turley was song leader.

Saturday night, Mrs. Stockberger was hostess at dinner at the Henderson in honor of Mrs. Wright and officers of the District chapters.

Democrat Club Hears Newsman

The Negro voter today holds the balance of political power, in close elections, in approximately 20 States," H. E. C. Bryant, veteran Washington newspaper correspondent, told members of the Woman's National Democratic Club at their luncheon yesterday, Mrs. D. Tucker Brown, president of the club, presided.

"One of the most significant political moves in America since the War Between the States," he asserted, "was the switch of the Negro vote from the Republican to the Democratic Party, in the cities of the North."

Mr. Bryant, for many years a member of the Washington Bureau of the old New York World, spoke on the subject, "The Advancement of the Negro in Politics." He described the migration movement, started in Florida in 1915, which in the last two decades has caused more than 3,000,000 Southern colored persons to move North, East and West, with the result, he said, that they are now realizing the power of their ballots. Having succeeded in sending one of their race to Congress, the speaker declared that they expect to increase that number to five or six in the next ten years.

Mr. Bryant was introduced by Mrs. Brown. Guests at the speaker's table included Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, former official of the club and now assistant State director of the National Youth Administration in Colorado.

Others were Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, Mrs. A. S. Monroney, Mrs. Copley Amory, Mrs. Mark L. Bristol, Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Mrs. Bryant and Mrs. Charles J. Brand.

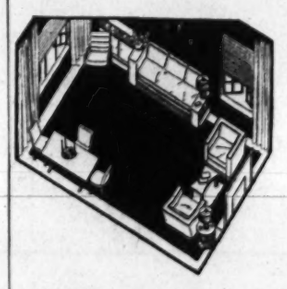
Basic Rules For Furniture Arrangement

by "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess, of The Hecht Co.



Although most of us are inclined to think our own home presents a unique problem, the truth of the matter is that the range of room shapes and sizes is relatively limited, so that there are certain basic rules we can all follow. Never crowd your room with furniture . . . never select furniture too large for your room . . . never place one piece of furniture so that it overlaps another or interferes with its use. Every room needs a focal point of interest. This may be the fireplace . . . or an interesting grouping between windows . . . or a huge inviting sofa. Make it predominate by carefully selecting its companion pieces, so that all eyes are centered on it the moment anyone enters the room.

Foreign Service Merger Hinted In No. 2 Plan

Trade, Agricultural Attaches Abroad May Go To State Department

Transfer of America's foreign commercial and agricultural attaches to State Department control in the Administration's proposed reorganization plan "No. 2" last night was reported under serious consideration.

This consolidation, long under study, was said to involve shifting part of the staff of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and at least a portion of the force of the Agriculture Department's foreign agricultural service to the State Department.

Commercial attaches, now responsible to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, now are stationed in all major foreign capitals, while agricultural attaches reporting to the Agriculture Department are active in about half a dozen foreign posts. It was said the Agriculture Department's foreign corps of commodity specialists may not be affected if the merger is approved.

Decisions Reached on Plan

Congressional leaders who conferred at the White House yesterday emphasized that final decisions have been reached on the President's second major reorganization plan, and declined comment on the proposed State Department phase of the program, aimed at eliminating duplications and occasional conflict in this country's foreign service.

It was learned in other quarters that legislators interested in maintaining the Forest Service intact under the Agriculture Department have been assured no shift in this agency is contemplated in the next merger plan, expected Wednesday.

A tug of war between Secretary of Interior Ickes and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace for possession of the Forest Service has long been in progress, and decision to postpone any shift in the agency would remove a major source of controversy from the plan. Ickes has sought consolidation of conservation activities within his department, while Wallace has insisted Forest Service functions are of primarily agricultural concern. When the transfer was proposed during consideration of the original reorganization bill, a loud Congressional protest arose that contributed to the original defeat of the bill.

Agency Friction Seen

Plan "No. 2," dealing with shifts among regular Government departments, was expected to precipitate old line agency friction that failed to develop in plan "No. 1," which merged New Deal welfare, works and lending functions into three new agencies.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley said only that some "grumbling" was inevitable.

Among the new shifts believed still under study were proposed transfers to the Interior Department of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Fisheries, Bureau of Lighthouses and Coast and Geodetic Survey, and of the Agriculture Department's Biological Survey.

The second plan, expected to complete reorganization recommendations until next session, was discussed yesterday with leaders at an early morning White House conference, and later with the President's own reorganization advisors.

Attending the second conference were Budget Director Herbert Smith, in charge of preparation of the second plan; Louis Brownlow, whose committee on administrative management drafted the original reorganization report for the President and Judge Newman Thompson.

338 Million Farm Relief Is Voted

ward "parity"—(1909-1914 purchasing power).

A few minutes later it agreed by a scattered voice ballot to $113,000,000 for farm surplus purchase and disposals, and for financing an as yet indefinite export subsidy program. The $113,000,000 was in addition to $90,000,000 already available for the purpose from custom receipts.

Cotton Subsidy Vote Today

Today it will consider an amendment by Senator Bankhead, (Democrat), of Alabama, for subsidies approximating $10 a bale to be applied toward moving about 7,250,000 bales of new crop cotton to foreign markets. The amendment requires a two-thirds vote of the Senate for passage, and approval was doubtful.

Senate Majority Leader Barkley declined comment on the Morgenthau statement, but Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, manager of the bill, said he thought the Secretary had "ample notice" of what the Senate intended to do.

Senator Lucas (Democrat), of Illinois, Western farm bloc leader, said he was drawing a processing tax bill to provide funds for the program but was "undecided" on whether to introduce it. Barkley voiced "doubt" that Congress will consider processing taxes and declared any attempt to substantially revise taxes at this session would result in a "half-baked" bill.

President Is Opposed

Morgenthau himself is on record as characterizing processing taxes as a business deterrent, while the President has referred to them as tax depressants. Both, however, have insisted that Congress live up to an implied promise to provide needed revenue to finance the $212,000,000 for parity price payments it voted last year.

Morgenthau yesterday added that not only the $212,000,000 for price parity voted last year, but the $372,000,000 provided over and above budget estimates in the present farm bill—a total of $584,000,000—shouuld be financed from new tax revenues.

"I do not want to discuss the merits of the appropriation, but I do want to say that the increase of $372,000,000 added to the present deficit disturbs me greatly," he said.

Morgenthau estimated the deficit for the coming fiscal year at $3,300,000,000, and he called this "plenty." When a reporter asked if it wasn't time to start scaling this down, he said: "Yes, I do feel that." He said action of the Senate committee (partially ratified yesterday by the Senate) was "going in the other direction."

The bill now before the Senate carries a $1,216,528,572 total—the largest farm measure on record. It topped the House figure by $381,000,000, and additional Senate increases were being voted on the Senate floor. It came before the Senate under what Senate Minority Leader McNary termed "a perfect deal," an informal agreement between a group of Western and Southern farm Senators to support jointly both the parity price sum and added surplus funds to aid dairy farmers not benefiting from the parity amendment.

One lone voice rose in protest from the Senate economy bloc as the Senate proceeded yesterday to vote the increases provided in the bill—that of Senator King (Democrat), of Utah. King said approval of farm and other increases "will soon force the Nation into bankruptcy."

Declaring "we are spending billions in excess of what we wring from the taxpayers," the Utahan asked where the money was coming from. He said Congress needed a "devil's advocate" at appropriations hearings "to protect the public interest" and suggested a special committee to scale down appropriations.

Lucas agreed that revenue was needed to finance the increases, but said Congress must recognize that "the Nation's prosperity rests on the well-being of agriculture." He declared the farmers' financial plight is such that "emergency legislation will be necessary for some years to come." On the Republican side, Senator Capper, of Kansas, agreed that economy cuts should not start with the farmer, although he said deficit reduction was urgently needed. Senator Russell, chairman of the sub-committee which drafted the bill, insisted funds recommended were not adequate to actual farm needs.

Farm Tenancy Doubled

In addition to the $225,000,000 for farm parity payments, and $113,000,000 for surplus removal, the Senate yesterday doubled the $25,000,000 House appropriation for financing the farm tenancy program.

On motion of Majority Leader Barkley, the $2,000,000 provided by the House for land for national forests was increased to $5,000,000, and a $375,000 House appropriation for tobacco inspection was stepped up to $525,000.

As a test neared on the Bankhead amendment to subsidize exports of cotton, backed by the Administration, the amendment apparently lacked the two-thirds majority needed for its approval. Leading a Southern drive against the amendment, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, will ask the Senate instead to write a prohibition into the bill against use of any funds in the bill for subsidized cotton exports.

Supported by Wallace

The Senate was being circularized on both sides of the issue. President Edward A. O'Neal, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, wrote Senators the Bankhead amendment "would restore American cotton to its normal competitive position in the export market." He said it had the support of both the President and Secretary Wallace.

At the same time, J. E. McDonald, Texas State Commissioner of Agriculture, wrote Senators "such a plan would prove disastrous, if not a betrayal of cotton farmers and the American people."

Seek Remedy for School Damage in Northeast

At mass meeting in Stuart Junior High School yesterday civic and church leaders planned an educational program to cut down school property damage amounting to $14,000, done by children last year. Left to right—the Rev. Edward Fuller, S. J., of St. Aloysius Church; the Rev. Cornelius Stevenson Abbott, jr., pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd; Miss Florence C. Mortimer, chairman of the meeting, and J. Harold Mumper, pastor of the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church

The home is the "sore spot" that must be attacked if vandalism by school children is to be cut down, representatives of 35 civic organizations, churches and parent-teacher organizations in the Northeast section agreed yesterday.

Meeting at Stuart Junior High School under chairmanship of Miss F. C. Mortimer, principal of Wheatley School, delegates planned an educational program to reduce damage to school property done by children, which amounted last year to $14,000 for broken windows alone.

Criticizing parents more than the children, speakers called for "rebuilding of the American home." "The question is larger than the mere breakage of glass or the need of more playgrounds," said the Rev. C. S. Abbott, pastor of the Church of the Good Shepherd. "It is a question whether we will develop in this country national slums, with slum habits all over the country."

"Many people don't know what a real home is," asserted the Rev. Edward Fuller, S. J., of St. Aloysius' Church. It is impossible for schools and churches to teach children respect for other people's property if their own parents have none, he said.

A home for victims of chronic alcoholism was demanded by Mrs. E. R. Moore, representing the Kingsman-Peirce Parent-Teacher Association and the Lincoln Park Welfare Association. Care for alcoholic parents should be combined with a reorganization and rebuilding of broken homes, she declared.

Increased attendance at Sunday school and churches was urged as a cure by Mrs. J. C. Lunson, Wheatley Parent-Teacher Association.

Campaign Organized

The following committee was appointed to supervise an educational campaign: by radio, Mrs. Moose; by school publications, William H. Jenkins, Langley School; by churches, the Rev. Dr. J. Harold Mumper, pastor of Keller Memorial Church; by newspapers in the colored schools, Mrs. William B. Powell; by the Shopping News, Mrs. Lunson; by newspapers, Mrs. Walter Jones, general chairman of the committee, and R. W. Strawbridge, Stuart principal; by parochial schools, Father Fuller.

A circular letter to all parents is to be drafted by the committee and sent out by T. E. Ferry, of Stuart School.

A campaign for larger recreational areas and longer hours of supervised recreation in existing playgrounds was turned over to the Northeast Neighborhood Council. Mrs. J. M. Selby, of the Trinidad Parent-Teacher Association, reported for the council that the Board of Education had agreed to purchase a recreational site.

In making the presentation Mrs. Roosevelt said that Miss Taylor had given her 'a wonderful time" on several occasions this year. She said she had always been interested in Abingdon, Va., even before she had heard of the Barter Theater.

Secrecy Ordered After Tests of New 'Commercial' Plane

By the United Press.

San Diego, Calif., May 8 (U.P.).—Military possibilities of Consolidated Aircraft's 54-passenger "commercial" airboat were regarded as so significant after test flights today that Government and Consair officials clamped a rigid censoship on the crafts ability.

Only comment relative to the performance of the half-million dollar "experimental" ship was made by chief test pilot William Wheatley who remarked he was "well pleased" with the trial flights.

Although Consair Engineers defined the ship as a "commercial experimental" airboat and not of military design, United States military attaches evidenced great interest in its posibilities as a long-range bomber, asking that its construction details be kept concealed.

Device Saves Fliers, War Doctors Told

Dental Splint Eases Ear Troubles, Cuts Crash Factors, Parley Here Informed

A clinic of leading international military surgeons, considering means of reducing air death lists in the next world war, heard from an American naval officer here yesterday how the Navy has minimized at least one airplane crash factor by fitting aviators with a composition rubber mouthpiece.

As quickly as possible the mouthpiece, known as a "dental splint," will be made standard equipment for naval aviators suffering deafness, acute air pressure pain on eardrums and other ear disorders while flying, Comdr. Alexander G. Lyle, of the Naval Dental Corps, said.

He was one of three scientists to read "air medicine" papers before a joint meeting of the Association of Military Surgeons of the United States and the Tenth International Congress of Military Medicine and Pharmacy at the Willard Hotel.

Comdr. Lyle Reads Paper

Commander Lyle read a paper prepared by Lieut. Raymond A. Lowry, D. C., U. S. N., now aboard the Yorktown, which was based on a two-year study of the entire aviation personnel at Pensacola, Norfolk and on the Yorktown. It showed a definite connection between dislocation of the normal positions of the jaws due to loss or abrasion of teeth or other dental malformations and the incidence of ear disorders in fliers.

Of 542 men examined, 83 were found to have suffered such dislocation, Commander Lyle said. Of these, 26 were fitted with splints after they had been discovered to have had a history of ear pressures.

More than 80 per cent of the men thus outfitted reported either complete or partial relief from pain. The figures were 34.61 per cent reporting elimination of all symptoms, 53.84 per cent reporting some benefit, Commander Lyle said. Only 11.54 per cent reported they were given no relief by the device.

The splint, worn only while flying, holds the teeth in a "fixed, normal" position so that the mouth and, consequently the ear openings, are more readily ventilated and varying air pressures at various altitudes more quickly equalized, Commander Lyle explained.

Deaths in the sky battlefields of the next war will be "considerably" reduced by intervention of the military surgeon, declared Air Commodore H. E. Whittingham, second senior medical officer in the British Royal Air Force, another clinic speaker.

Glare Goggles Developed

As an example of many contributions of medical science to air safety, Commodore Whittingham cited the development of "glare goggles," which have removable lenses, all of them scientifically tinted to improve sight under day and night light conditions.

Whittingham also described methods of helping pilots to retain consciousness while coming out of power dives, of determining their physical fitness to fly, of keeping them fit to fly, of reducing air sickness cases and of minimizing fatigue caused by flying conditions and motor propeller noises.

In England, he said, apparatus has been developed which detects one-third of those physically unfit to fly while two-thirds of these failures may be detected by psychologists.

The history of the advancement of air medicine was discussed by Col. Arnold D. Tuttle, U. S. A., retired, in a paper prepared by him and Capt. Harry G. Armstrong, Army Medical Corps.

America "is not physically fit for war," Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States and president of the Association of Military Surgeons, told opening sessions of the conference. There are, he warned, three "conditions of prime military importance"—tuberculosis, venereal disease and malnutrition.

"The next war," he said, "will be different in that there will be no sharp demarcations between the fighting fronts and the rest of the population. War will be dependent more than ever on factories, farms and protection of the health of the people."

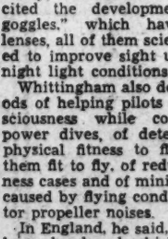
Probable casualties in war and methods of their calculation will be one of the questions to be discussed at scientific sessions of the congress, starting this afternoon.

The congress will formally open at 10 o'clock this morning in the departmental auditorium. Delegates will hear addresses by Secretary of State Hull and War Secretary Woodring.

The association awarded to Col. Albert Love, U. S. A., Medical Corps, the Wellcome Award for his essay on keeping records of wartime wounded.

Military Doctors Don't Like War

"There's not going to be any war," said Col. Jules Voncken, of Belgium, director of the Military Hospital at Liege.



VONCKEN

"But military doctors always say that," he added. "They are afraid of war, because they know the sufferings it causes. We were all very happy last year when President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull made their appeal for the humanization of war, and the work of our committee at Liege is a development of that appeal."

The Liege committee, according to a pamphlet he gave the reporter, plans to gather leading international doctors and lawyers at Liege in June, to study methods of assuring the safety of civilian population in war time.

Britons Born In War Held Fit Today

Despite the fact that Great Britain's present soldiers and sailors were born during the war and spent their early lives in a nation shattered by its aftermath of poor and scanty food, they are first-class fighting men and, to the doctor's practised eye, fine physical specimens.

STEPHENS

This is the judgment of Surgeon Captain H. E. R. Stephens, British doctor at the Greenwich Naval School. "The standard of our recruits is excellent. Our men are physically just as good as ever before," he said, with a retrospective thought to the seadogs of Drake and the sturdy bowmen of Agincourt.

Capt. Stephens is among the delegates to the Tenth International Congress of Military Medicine and Pharmacy.

Spokesman Speaks For French Doctors

Four of the French delegation, discovered in animated conversation in the lobby of the Willard Hotel, were a little taken aback at the methods of American journalism. "But we've arranged for an official spokesman to tell you all that," they said when asked for interviews.

SAVORNIN

The good-humored Medecin General Inspecteur de l'Armee Francaise was finally prevailed upon to say a few words for the group. Armand Savorin, a portly gentleman with a merry sparkle in his eye, voiced a warm appreciation of American hospitality with which the others heartily concurred.

"As the senior medical officer in the French Army," he said, "I am completely happy to be received in this touching and charming fashion."

Police to Levy Maximum Fines For Illegally Parked Autos

Traffic Division officials said yesterday all parking regulation violators will be forced to post maximum collateral, following an accident in which a 4-year-old girl was injured when she darted from behind an illegally parked car into the side of a truck in the 600 block of I street northwest.

Signs ordering no parking between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. are posted along the entire street. The accident occurred at 11:45 a.m.

The injured child, Martha Via, 605 I street northwest, stepped from behind the car into the path of a truck driven by Thomas Johnson, colored, of 28 F street northwest. Treated at Sibley Hospital for leg injuries, she returned to her home.

Lieut. Robert Pierce, of the Traffic Division, said: "It is this type of parking, endangering citizens, that we must stop. If that car had not blocked the child's vision she would not have stepped off the curb as the truck approached."

The car was impounded by the Police Department and its owner forced to deposit $10 collateral for its return.

Mary Long, 46, of 1129 Morse street northeast, a passenger in a cab operated by John D. Wilson, colored, was treated at Casualty Hospital for internal injuries, following an accident at Third and E streets northwest.

A pedestrian, William Scroggins, 10, of 3220 Ely place southeast, was hit by a car at the intersection of Pennsylvania and Minnesota avenues southeast. He was treated at Providence Hospital for lacerations of the forehead. The driver of the car was William C. Parahaska, 40, of 2838 R street southeast, police said.

Pay Tribute to American Mothers in Skit

A Mother's Day celebration was given last night at the Jewish Community Center by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Jewish War Veterans. Shown (left to right) in skit staged by Juniors are Lois Lopatin, Liberty; Joseph Rodis, Citizenship; Janet Segal, Democracy; Shirley Lilienthal, Loyalty; Sam Gordon, Bill of Rights, and Melvin Diamond, Independence; Babette Levy (front) as the American Flag, presents flowers to Mrs. Judith S. Harmel, who portrayed Whistler's Mother

Tribute to Americana mothers as the "immortal builders of all heroes" and the "unsung architects of destiny" was paid last night by Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat), of West Virginia, chairman of the House District Committee, at a Mother's Day celebration sponsored by the Washington Ladies' Auxiliary, No. 58, Jewish War Veterans of the United States.

From the landing of the pilgrims to the World War, Representative Randolph traced step by step the heroic part mothers have played in American history, before a gathering of nearly 300 in the Jewish Community Center.

The pledge to the flag was led by Mrs. Mary Reiskin, president of the auxiliary.

Greetings from Washington Post, No. 58, Jewish War Veterans, and an address in praise of Mother's Day were delivered by the post commander, Joseph F. Barr. Mervin Cohen, Rieta Johnson, Morris Freed and Al Margolis, all sons and daughters of members of the post or the auxiliary, and Capt. Dick Mansfield, of the Ninth Precinct, provided entertainment.

3 Citizens' Groups Back D.C. Suffrage

Units Also Approve Griffenhagen Plan, And New Traffic Safety Suggestions

District self-government proposals won approval of three citizens' organizations last night. Units also adopted resolutions favoring the Griffenhagen reorganization plan, traffic safety suggestions, and changes in zoning.

Northwest Council

An elective city council, in the event the present governing set-up is altered, was urged by the Northeast Council of Citizens Associations.

The council, composed of delegates from associations north of Rock Creek Park, also appointed a committee to deliver a protest against rezoning of territory south of Connecticut avenue and to urge the zoning commissioners to prevent the erection of dwellings on lots less than 40 feet wide.

Other resolutions called for increased appointments from the District to West Point and Annapolis and a halt to the cutting down of trees at the Connecticut avenue entrance to the Zoological Park.

Piney Branch

Opposition to location of the Abbott Vocational School at Fourteenth and Upshur streets northwest was voted by the Piney Branch Citizens Association.

The area, site of the old Tuberculosis Hospital, should be used for a recreational area "after sufficient land has been set aside as the future location of Wilson Teachers College," the unit declared.

The association also favored more careful operation of street cars on Fourteenth street, and asked that a traffic light be erected "at once" at the corner of Sixteenth and Kennedy streets northwest.

Kalorama

Indorsement of the Kennedy resolution for government of the District by an elected council was voted by the Kalorama Citizens Association. It also expressed appreciation to members of Congress favoring national representation for the District.

William J. Bartle, attorney, discussed the possibility of establishing a liquor dispensary system

Bladensburg

Bladensburg Citizens Association unanimously indorsed the District Suffrage Association's campaign for an elective city council. Two hundred post cards were purchased to be sent to Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, demanding local suffrage.

Election of officers was deferred until the June session.

Hillcrest

Approval of the Griffenhagen report for reorganization of the District government was voiced by the Hillcrest Citizens Association.

The group asked, however, that the school system remain under the Board of Education and that the Public Library be supervised directly by the proposed city council.

The organization also went on record favoring establishment of a postoffice and the construction of a new elementary school in Hillcrest.

West End

The West End Citizens Association held its last meeting of the year, with a film showing life in the Police Boys' Club summer camp.

Capital News In Brief

$510 of $600 Recovered

A 29-year-old former employe of the Federal Cab Association was arrested last night for the theft of $600 from the safe at the taxi company's headquarters, 101 Massachusetts avenue northeast early yesterday.

The man, who police said had served terms at Lorton and Atlanta penitentiaries, was arrested at Fourteenth and W streets northwest by First Precinct Detective William Shipman. $510 was recovered from the man's person and auto.

Shirt Tail Clew

The natural delicacy of Thirteenth Precinct policemen is under severe strain today. The officers frankly admit they want to yank out people's shirt tails.

That seems to be the only way they can trap the thief who looted the Costa Rican legation yesterday, removing six shirts and several dozen handkerchiefs belonging to Minister Ricardo Castro Beeche. The ministerial shirts all carry the monogram, "R. C. B." below belt level.

First Play Revived

Dialogue from the first play ever to be given in the Capital —"Venice Preserved," presented at Blodgett's Hotel, in August, 1800—was heard again at a meeting of the Shakespeare Society at Universalist Church last night.

More than 75 members of the society heard Yerby Pannill and Bruce Rowzer read the principal roles after a discussion of the drama by Dean George D. Woods, of American University.

Student Hurt in Fall

A 19-year-old Catholic University student was in a serious condition at Providence Hospital last night after he fell backwards down an 11-foot embankment in the rear of Caldwell Hall on the campus yesterday.

Robert S. Moffett, of Bridgeport, Conn., plunged to a concrete areaway when a handrail skirting the bank gave way, as he leaned on it police said. He suffered a possible fracture of the skull.

Contest Semifinals Tonight

Doris McNeil (left), 1611 Connecticut avenue northwest, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Mrs. Viner G. Burns, Garrett Park, Md., of the Treasury Department, are two of the 25 semifinalists in The Post-sponsored "Beauty With Brains" contest, who will appear tonight before Judges Eleanor Powell, Senator Tydings and Representative Randolph on the stage of the Capitol Theater. Six girls selected will be sure of a trip to the New York World's Fair. First and second prize winners will be chosen Friday on The Post's Umbrella Court of the Air on Station WMAL

Suffrage Group Pushes Drive For 21-Member City Council

Approval of Griffenhagen Plan Without Provision For Such Body Held Suicidal

Congressional approval of the Griffenhagen plan for reorganization of the District government, without provision for a popularly elected city council, would set back the cause of local and national suffrage for Washington at least 50 years, Wilbur Finch, president of the District Suffrage Association, declared last night.

Creation of the commissioner form of government here in 1874 was intended as "a temporary expedient until Congress had time to work out a really effective system," Finch said. "But that makeshift arrangement has lasted 65 years."

Finch spoke to an audience of 100 at a rally in Thomson School, called to spur the "March of Postcards" to Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee. The suffrage group hopes to flood Randolph's office with 25,000 cards demanding popular election of a District municipal assembly.

The fight for local suffrage must take precedence over the campaign for a vote in national elections, Finch said, because revision of the city government can be accomplished by a single act of Congress, while national suffrage would require a constitutional amendment.

Election of a 21-member city council, long advocated by the suffrage association and now proposed in a bill introduced by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, "in no way conflicts with administrative reorganization of the District government, as recommended by Griffenhagen," Finch pointed out.

"At the same time," he said, "the proposed council would not interfere with the present setup, if the Griffenhagen plan should not be approved by Congress."

The Board of Commissioners, he explained, "would not be disturbed at the present time," but their policy-making powers would be transferred to the elected council.

Prof. Charles M. Thomas, head of the Federation of Civic Associations, warned that "you will have politics and bosses when you get the vote."

"Personally, I don't want suffrage here," he said, "but I'd like to see it come because the younger generation is entitled to the experiment and some experience with real politics, which won't be as orderly and gentlemanly as the campaign for suffrage."

"Postcards are all right," Thomas said, "but if you want to attract some attention, send your petition up to Congress with an escort of beautiful girls."

Firemen Rescue Man Jammed in Tree as Limb Falls

Knocked unconscious by a falling limb while working 50 feet in a tree, John W. Lewis, colored, 25, of 507 T street northwest, was rescued yesterday by firemen of No. 12 Truck Company.

Working high in a tree in the 6600 block of Thirty-second street when an overhanging branch crashed down on him,

House Passes 2 Bills to Cut D.C. Banditry

Mandatory Jail Terms, Firearm Registry, 4 Other Measures Voted

Two bills designed to decrease armed robbery were among six District measures passed by the House yesterday in an eight-minute District session.

Sponsored by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, the measures would make jail sentences mandatory for crimes of violence and require registration of all firearms. Schulte said that the bills, if enacted, will make Washington "the safest place in the country."

Four Other Bills Voted

The other four bills passed provide:

That the Commissioners shall be allowed to declare larger benefits in the opening of minor streets and alleys than the law now permits.

That drivers of Government-owned motor vehicles be permitted to drive in the District without local permits when they are stationed outside Washington.

A permit for Doctors' Hospital, Inc., to install an underground electrical conduit.

Dispute to Be Aired

Earlier, at a House District Committee meeting, Schulte said he intends to call a meeting of the subcommittee on traffic to iron out "disagreements" between District officials. Discord, which he did not explain, has increased traffic hazards, he charged.

On the Senate side the Commissioners opposed removal of the National Training School to nearby Maryland, as provided in the House version of the District supply bill.

Chairman Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, indicated he agrees with the House sub-committee, however, and said additional testimony will be taken.

The House yesterday, upon recommendation of the Ways and Means Committee, appointed Representative Poage (Democrat), of Texas, to the House District Committee. He is the fourth Democrat to be added in recent weeks. One more vacancy remains.

17 Companies Of D. C. Cadets Pass in Review

Annual Competition To Close Today With Award Announcement

Seventeen cadet companies from five Washington high schools drilled their smartest under a plaguing sun at Griffith Stadium yesterday in annual company competition.

The grass was slippery and the cadets found three second lieutenants from the regulars at Fort George G. Meade, who came to do the judging, distressingly vigilant.

But there was compensation. For the high school girls swarmed in the stands and whooped encouragement. And when the companies filtered back from the field to the stands, the grils ran up to them, their eyes finding something mighty grand about a soldiers.

Manual of Arms

So the cadets relaxed to autograph their photos in the programs, and the girls autographed the photos, too, and everybody sat around watching other companies take the field.

This amounted to marching, in the slickly-pressed blue uniforms, from a lot beside the stands. There they went through the manual of arms. Then the lieutehants walked along the line, looking at the rifles, that sprang to port arms, and at the individual cadet's bearing. It was enough to make a man a little excited, even after he returned to the stands.

Award: Today

Each company, of about 57 men, went through the paces that consumed more than six hours. The companies were E, B, F, A, C, from Central; D, C, A, and E, from McKinley; G, H, and L, from Western; C, A, E, and B, from Wilson, and B Company from Anacostia. Today Eastern and Roosevelt send companies to the competition, and at 3:30 p. m., the awards will be made, with battalion drills the brigade review, and a lot of color reaching from the home plate to the outfield.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Board of Education president, will be the reviewing officer. It will be the first time since 1885, when the drills originated, that a woman has served in such capacity.

The judges at the competition yesterday were Lieutenants William S. Humphreys, Joseph S. Kujawski and Frank Miller, of the Thirty-fourth Infantry, Fort Meade. Their decisions will be announced this afternoon.

Teachers' Institute Meetings

The last Teachers' Institute address of the year will be given by Dr. Wesley M. Gewehr, of American University, speaking on the war in the Orient. He will address divisions 1-9 in the McKinley High School auditorium at 3:45 p. m. Thursday, and divisions 10-13 in the Dunbar High School auditorium at 8 that night.

Installing Meters

Fredericksburg, Va., May 8.—Work of installing parking meters in the business section got under way this morning. The work is expected to be completed by Wednesday.

This, the third of a series of articles on conditions in the Capital, revealing the extremes of social and health conditions. The fourth article will appear tomorrow.

One of Washington's neighborhoods where a fifth or more of the homes do not have any running water adjoins the Capitol and office buildings in which legislators discuss laws to promote the welfare of all the people.

A chart of District neighborhoods that reveals the presence or absence in dwelling units of the liquid necessary for the "cleanliness that is next to godliness," has been prepared by the research department of the Washington Council of Social Agencies. It shows the first of many deficiencies in "Census Tract 60" next to the Capitol which makes the neighborhood one of the worst focal points for poverty, disease, death, and crime in the city.

Reference to the map shows that it does not stand alone in its deficiency of running water. In this respect, as in others, glaring contrasts exist throughout the city, and most neighborhoods in the city, although as might at least be hoped, a greater number of areas show all dwelling units with running water than with some of the other conveniences charted by the council in its study of the city's neighborhoods.

The fact that most the areas which are seriously lacking in running water have a heavy proportion of Negro residents, is ascribed by those who made the study to the greater prevalence of low incomes among them than among whites. For some of the areas most deficient in homes with running water are preponderantly white. And here, too, the economic factor shows itself.

Tract 60, which is southwest of the Capitol and bounded by the Mall, South Capitol street, Fourth and M streets, will show up distinctly on other maps, as well as this one. Of the 2,440 dwelling units in it, 543 are without running water. Other sections that have a fifth or more of the dwelling units lacking in running water are across the Anacostia River, one of them between East Capitol street and Pennsylvania avenue, and the other between Morris road and St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Other neighborhoods in the same general territory on both sides of the river show between 15 and 20 percent of the homes without running water. And when the proportion between 10 per cent and 15 per cent is examined, they are found in the familiar juxtaposition with adequately equipped neighborhoods. One such area is between Rock Creek and Georgia avenue, and Military road and Alaska avenue. Another is east of North Capitol street and north of Soldiers' Home and Michigan avenue. In a neighborhood in the Northwest bounded by Florida, New Jersey, New York and Georgia avenues there are 283 homes without any running water.

Justice Luhring said optometry was not a skilled profession like medicine, adding that the law regulating optometry was for "the protection of the public health and not to further the personal interests of optometrists."

Government Drops Last of Charges Against Rhodes

Fred B. Rhodes, veteran Washington lawyer and financier, was cleared yesterday on the last of the charges made against him after the closing of the Fidelity Building and Loan Association, of which he was president.

Two juries disagreed when trying Rhodes for forgery and he recently was squitted of a perjury indictment. With the approval of the Department of Justice, three forgery, one grand larceny and one perjury indictment left pending were dismissed yesterday.

Also dismissed yesterday was a charge of moving stolen jewels interstate against Mrs. Eula Mae Bennett, who was granted a new trial last week by the Court of Appeals.

De Mille Is Pioneer Of Film Spectacle

Famous Producer-Director in Capital Today; 'Union Pacific Special' on Exhibit at Station; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

SPEAKING OF "UNION PACIFIC"—as practically everybody will be by the time the "Union Pacific Special," with its trainload of motion picture stars, arrives at Union Station today at 1 p. m.—it is interesting to cast back through the years and unearth just what it is that this fellow Cecil Blount De Mille has done that he has grown so great. Of course, everyone knows he produced and directed "Union Pacific," but I mean before that.

BELL

If you have a memory that goes back to the beginning of Hollywood, you will recall that Cecil B. De Mille, Sam Goldwyn and Jesse L. Lasky produced the first feature picture ever made in what is now the capital of the motion picture world. That was "The Squaw Man," back in 1914. It was made in a back-lot shack, with the late Dustin Farnum as its star. Every effort was made by the producers to induce Farnum to make the picture as a partner in the enterprise, but Mr. Farnum was too smart for them! He held out for a straight salary and got it. Since "The Squaw Man" snowballed itself into the Paramount and Famous Players-Lasky Pictures Corporation, Mr. Farnum merely talked himself out of millions.

De Mille always has been on the side of mammoth and spectacular productions. For a time, he devoted his interest to Biblical and medieval subjects—"Ten Commandments," "The King of Kings," "The Sign of the Cross," "Crusades"—but more recently has turned to the heroic sagas inherent in American history and the conquest of a continent. In this latter category would fall "The Plainsman," starring Gary Cooper; "The Buccaneer," starring Fredric March, and, now, "Union Pacific," which deals specifically with matters that were only incidental to "Dodge City." Those who have been privileged to preview it—and I was talking with some of them only last night—assure me that "Union Pacific" is a whale of a picture.

Extravagant as that statement is, I can well believe it. De Mille has an uncanny faculty for making pictures that are not only big, but superlatively good. It is common knowledge, or should be, that his productions have played to more people and grossed more at the box-office than those of any other producer-director. "Union Pacific," incidentally, is his sixty-fifth major production.

To those interested in backgrounds and antecedents, it should be made known that no one is better fitted to grasp the full significance of the great eras in American history than Cecil B. De Mille. He is a descendant of one of America's oldest families, founded by a De Mille who came to this country early in the Seventeenth century from Haarlem, Holland, and rose high in political life in old Nieuw Amsterdam under both the Dutch and British administrations.

It will be pleasant to meet him again today aboard that trick train.

Washingtonians who wish to inspect the "Union Pacific Special" are invited to visit the Union Station today between the hours of 1 and 9 p. m. The old wood-burning engine, the antique passenger cars, baggage cars and other components, both ancient and modern, of this famous train will be on public exhibition between those hours. This composite train, which spent last week-end on exhibit at the New York World's Fair, has attracted unusual attention from coast to coast. At 2 o'clock this afternoon, all of the stars aboard the train will be heard in a special broadcast, over Station WJSV, from one of the old-time cars making up the train. The list of 15 stars forming the passenger list of the "special" was set forth in this space yesterday. All are film luminaries, proved or prospective, well worth meeting and listening to, even if you have to do it over the air. At 2:40 p. m., the group will proceed from Union Station to the office of our friend Col. Halsey, secretary of the Senate, and thence to the office of Vice President Garner, where they will present the Vice President with a new gavel.

"Night Must Fall," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's unique romantic melodrama, which Robert Montgomery claims is the finest picture in which Robert Montgomery ever has appeared—a pronouncement in which this column heartily concurs—has been voted the outstanding non-French motion picture of 1938 by the French Film Academy, an organization comparable to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences in this country. This subject, which will be withdrawn from public exhibition following its current Washington engagement, will enter its second revival week at the Little Theater tomorrow. Sharing honors with Montgomery are Rosalind Russell and Dame May Whitty.

In the first line of those visiting the "Union Pacific Special" this afternoon—we will get off this topic eventually — will be Stephen E. Cochran, impresario of the Olney Theater, midway betwixt here and Baltimore. He will be hot on the trail of Glenda Farrell, one of the train's visiting stars. Miss Farrell is scheduled to open the second season of the Olney next Monday night in "Stage Door." I trust she will not forget to get off the choo-choo!

We had something to say here a few days ago about the graciousness and willingness to "give 'til it hurts" that are among the outstanding qualities of character possessed by Eleanor Powell, headlining this week's stage bill at Loew's Capitol Theater. We have something to add to that now.

When Miss Powell played New York, immediately prior to coming to Washington, she was aware that she was back on the 'stage—where her career began—for the first time in several years and that a great number of relatives, friends and old associates would wonder what she was like, now that Hollywood's "glamour" has spread over her. Lest they think her changed in any particular from the splendid "trouper" she always has been, upstage, high-hat, or whatever you want to call it, orders were given that "open house" was to prevail in her dressing room. Throughout the length of the engagement there was a "waiting line" at Eleanor's door that suggested the White House in the old days of the New Year's Day receptions. She literally held "open house" and in so doing wore herself down to a frazzle.

When she arrived in Washington last Friday morning, she was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. Having subsisted on drugstore sandwiches throughout the New York stay, she wasn't too robust when she got here. Those who met her at the train encountered a nervous young woman with icy and trembling hands who should have been in bed, but who insisted upon going on and "doing her stuff." She has scored one of the hits of her life in this Capitol engagement.

Eleanor Powell, as I have vaguely intimated on previous occasions, is one in a million. On second thought I raise that to 130,000,000. Everybody else in "show business" thinks so, too.

It-Seems-a-Little-Warm Note

Would it be safe, do you think, to let the fire go out?

ONE OF the reasons why Jimmy Roosevelt went to England was to induce the King and Queen to attend the London premiere of "Wuthering Heights" . . . Ambassador Joe Kennedy assisted in making this arrangement . . . When Sam Goldwyn was informed that their Majesties would attend, he wired his New York office that he himself would pay for the radiophotos of the premiere—to release to all the American newspapers . . . A Goldwyn aide, therefore, went to RCA and waited there all night while the photos of the Royal Premiere were radioed . . . all the photos except one, which the London publicist was too excited to take—the picture showing their Majesties attending.

Douglas Corrigan, the wrong-way flyer, is in New York now, still puzzled by his one-picture career in Hollywood . . . In that picture, "The Flying Irishman," Corrigan was shown at the controls in a prop plane compartment operating countless instruments which his own plane never had . . . "Here's what gets me," Corrigan sighed. "That prop cost $12,000. My plane cost $900—and it could fly."

THE SPONSORS of the Burns & Allen program the other night complimented Gracie for her new arrangement of "As Snug as a Bug in a Rug." Gracie didn't tell him that the "arrangement"—in which she merely spoke the lyrics instead of singing them—was necessary because Ray Noble's band made a mistake and played a different song . . . Gypsy Rose Lee now appears in an ad, showing her almost nude, appealing for Clothing—Old or New." It's for the Spanish Refugee Relief Campaign . . . Orson Welles' program will conclude on June 2 despite its high Crosley rating. Welles, who rejected Hollywood offers, fearing that the films might thwart his artistic desires, may go into vaudeville.

ELAINE BARRIE will not forego her drama career . . . She'll return to the East this summer and work in stock at the Dennis Playhouse, operated by Dick Aldrich . . . "Now that Doris Dudley has replaced me in John's show," Elaine confided before going to Hollywood, "all the girls in the cast are blondes. John will be in a helluva mess. This is his blonde cycle."

THE NAZI Ministry of Propaganda has issued a dictionary to the owners of short-wave sets who might be affected by Britiain's broadcasts to Germany. Some of the official Nazi definitions are: GENTLEMAN—In England everyone is a gentleman so long as it is not publicly demonstrated that he isn't. CONSULTATION—To ask permission—of England, naturally. FREEDOM—A word for which there is a fondness, to cover up other ill-sounding ideas. IMPERIALISM—In others, deeply resented by England. CONCENTRATION CAMP—An English invention. CALICO—Cotton goods, petroleum, coal, naval bases, steel, rubber—what the English statesmen mean when they speak of God or Righteousness.

He met Joyce in Paris later and told him of his acquisition . . . $1,950?" replied the author. "You paid much too little" . . . The manuscript now is valued at $10,000.

THE RAINBOW Room waiters told the managaing director: "Some of the ladies on the dance floor are stumbling" . . . The manager checked and learned that the "stumblers" were part of a Danish group . . . "But look at them," the waiters protested. "They're stumbling" "The people at that ringside table are Crown Prince Frederick of Denmark, his wife and Countess Reventlow," the manager explained . . . "And the ladies are not stumbling. They're just curtsying."

THE NEW YORKER magazine has assigned the now bucolic E. B. White, who once wrote "Talk of the Town"—New York's most sophisticated column—to report the World's Fair, from a hick's point of view . . . For 27 years her next-door neighbor has been an American lady, with whom she discusses the weather, the crops, the children—all via sign language . . . Last week the venerable Mrs. Saroyan returned to her home and, in her native tongue, told her family: "Isn't it a shame about that lady next door—living here all these years—and can't speak a word of Armenian?"

SATURDAY a bedraggled stranger presented himself at the office of the Czech Consulate and asked for Karel Hudec, the acting Consul . . . "I've been reading all about your country," he explained, "and I sympathize with you in your tragedy. The only way I'd like to show it is by giving you money—all the money I have" . . . He emptied his pockets of the 15 cents he possessed and turned to go . . . "Wait, please," Hudec called. "I must issue a receipt" . . . The stranger waited, accepted the inscribed piece of paper Hudec gave him, placed it in his pocket and left . . . The "receipt" the acting Consul had issued was a check for $10.

Mr. Goldwyn Battles Acute Filipino Crisis

'The Real Glory' Brings Consternation To All Concerned

By Frederick C. Othman.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, May 8. — Having quelled a Moro insurrection on his private Philippine Islands—said uprising having to do with whether his personal army ought to be shoeless—Samuel Goldwyn was hopeful today that his insular troop troubles were ended.

These difficulties started last winter when it became known that he was contemplating production of "The Real Glory," wherein Gary Cooper would re-enact some of the heroic moments of the Moro revolts in the islands after the Spanish-American War. This news indicated that Goldwyn would need a large cast of Filipino extras.

In February a troop of the Filipino defense volunteers, in full uniform and armed with wooden rifles, came down from Stockton, Calif., looking for movie jobs. D. Iszard, the production manager, said he'd keep these 140 soldiers in mind. The troops returned to their lettuce picking.

Really Started Something

When this news leaked into the Filipino colony here, things really began to happen. One leader rounded up a group of his countrymen and started drilling them in a Los Angeles loft building. A third Filipino movie army practiced the manual of arms in an old garage.

A fourth troop, an offshoot of the original Stockton contingent, did squads right on a vacant lot, while a fifth army maneuvered on the beach at Santa Monica.

The leader of each army had promised all his men jobs in the picture. Came the day for choosing the workers and 1,181 Filipinos showed up on the Goldwyn lot. All five armies stood at attention while Director Henry Hathaway; Col. William Shutan, former Governor of the Island of Mindanao, the technical director, and Iszard, picked their soldiers.

Picked Indiscriminately

They ignored the leaders and indiscriminately chose from each army the types of men they thought would look best before the cameras. Eventually they chose some 500 soldiers. That left 600 men who had spent months in training, upon the promise of movie jobs from their leaders.

The latter scrammed. One of them, at last reports, was on the high seas. One was in Alaska. Another was hiding out here from the men he'd guaranteed picture jobs.

Goldwyn chieftains, who'd been caught in the middle, did their utmost to salve ruffled feelings. The men who got jobs were put on the pay roll at $8.25 a day each.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 8 (INS).—I would like to give Alice Faye a little well-meant advice. I hear through the grapevine route that she is to be starred in William Anthony McGuire's life of Lillian Russell. One of the loveliest women who ever lived. I met Miss Russell in the old Herald office when she was writing beauty hints and I was doing a movie column. She was then over 60 years old and still a beauty with a pink and cream complexion. She had come to call on the publisher with her husband, Alec Moore, one-time Ambassador to Spain, and she won everyone with her sweetness.

LOUELLA PARSONS

My advice is this. Study the Lillian Russell photographs. Alice of late has a tendency to twist her mouth out of shape when she sings and it is not becoming. Certainly there is no one who can sing the old songs of another day better than Alice and Darryl Zanuck has given her two of the best musical comedies ever made, so she should really restrain her mouth tendencies when she plays Lillian, who was the toast of the theater in the days when Diamond Jim Brady was eating three dozen oysters at a sitting.

Harold Lloyd moved into RKO today and this is the truth. So quiet were negotiations kept no one had any idea he was discussing a deal until his unit was assigned offices. The surprising part is Harold's first appearnace on the RKO lot will not be as an actor but as a producer. After a quarter of a century of being one of the head comics in the movies, Harold will now turn his attention to producing a comedy for the new RKO setup. He is negotiating for a well-known play morrow Jean Arthur for one of and, if successful, he will try to the two starring roles. This deal at RKO doesn't mean Harold is giving up his acting, but he is going to have a try at producing before he again faces the camera.

"Wuthering Heights" has given Alexander Korda an idea. He'll co-star Merle Oberon and Laurence Olivier in "Manon Lescaut" as soon as Olivier finishes in the Katharine Cornell play. So it would seem that Vivien Leigh will also return to England as soon as she finishes "Gone With the Wind," for I don't believe she and Olivier will be separated. George Cukor has received a cable from Korda asking him to come to London to direct Merle and George would like to do it if he can make the starting date the last of June, after he finishes "The Women." "Manon Lescaut," based on the famous opera, is right up George's alley and he would do a beautiful job.

Spencer Tracy is sailing for home May 12 without ever having seen London or at least without enjoying the privilege of other tourists in taking a look at London Tower, Westminster Abbey, Cheshire Cheese, Old Bailey, etc. The London fans just wouldn't let Spence go sightseeing. They mobbed him so that the highlights of his long planned European journey are a week-end at the country estate of Robert Donat and a tennis game at the home of Ambasador Joseph Kennedy. Bromidically speaking, that's the penalty of fame.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Louise Stanley rushed to the Good Samaritan Hospital for an emergency operation, with her until the last minute, was Addison Randall, her ex, who is still in love with her; Bert Wheeler and Diane Dewey a very devoted twosome at Slapsy Maxie's; Wally Beery looking very sad at Selznick's cafe just after news came that Mrs. Beery had rewed. He never wanted the divorce and had hoped she would change her mind; Madeleine Carroll and Bob Ritchie dinging tete-a-tete at Little Hungary; has Richard Carlson supplnated Cesar Romero in Ann Sherdian's affections? They go everywhere together these days; the Helen Twelvetrees-Wally Gould combination continued three nights running at Neville Fleeson's Mandalay; Elaine Barrie Barrymore back in Hollywood. Wonder what she will have to say about her troubles with John and her magazine epic?

The Robert Allens are together again; Pat and Arthur Lake are entertaining at the opening of the Cabanne Cafe, for which pretty Bubbles Draper is handling the publicity. She is a sister of Natalie Draper, the former Mrs. Tom Brown; all Hollywood was tuned in to hear the Duke of Windsor's peace speech. What a delightful speaking voice; Buddy Westmore all attention to Judy Starr at the ball game. Looks as if she is indeed his big moment? William Powell and Loretta Young dining with the John Waynes at the Brown Derby; the Veloz and Yolanda dance team bringing out many of their admirers at the Cocoanut Grove. The Jules Steins entertained with a large party.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Annabella's Home Lacks Furniture

When Annabella moves into her new Westwood home, she faces the possibility of sleeping on a paddleboard for the first two weeks.

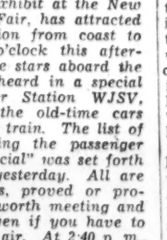
She learned this after reading the telegram delivered to her on the "Bridal Suite" set. It explained that the furniture she was importing from France was delayed at the customs office and would be two weeks late.

Annabella's plight is most embarrassing, for the lease on her present home expires this week. And she has made all arrangements to move immediately into her new home, which is now empty except for a paddleboard.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 8.—Goldwyn's "The Real Glory," dealing as it does with the American Army occupation of the Philippines, is as timely a subject as Warner's Nazi Spy. For by 1946 the Philippines will be free of us forever, or come again under our protection.



HOPPER

Pacita Paredes, the present Ambassador's daughter, told me that her countrymen were anxious for American protection. Only a few dictator politicians in Manila want an independent government. The Japs are standing by, ready to grab, and Americans are too tolerant. Wonder when we'll learn that for ourselves without having to be told?

Through us, Manila is as modern as any American city, with public school systems and the highest standard of living in the Orient. So, if Pacita's papa makes good at election next year, we'll probably retain our interest in the Philippines.

All of which has given Sam Goldwyn a swell story for "The Real Glory."

If our producers buy "Kiss the Boys Good-bye," I hope they'll put Marie Wilson in as Cindy Lou. She'd be a wow!

Stars aren't turning out for that play; we're not amused at another satire on "Gone" or Hollywood. The line calling us the "outhouse of civilization" went flatter than stale beer. You know we could get even with Broadway by writing of its antics trying to crash Hollywood! It's a rich and fertile field. Surprised none of our boys have done it.

Claire Booth's line that she'll sell the play for a quarter of a million flat—no more, no less—is also pretty funny. Even funnier if she gets it. And she probably will.

When Ty Power was looking over Grace Moore's house with Annabella, and they came to the prima donna's bedroom where the walls were covered with pink satin, Ty said, "That's too, too much for me. If I should buy it, we'll do this room over." And they did!

Nice to see Leslie Fenton directing his wife, Ann Dvorak, in "Stronger Than Desire." If he directs as well as he acts, all studios will be fighting for him. Remember his scene in "Boys Town?"

No, Mickey Rooney isn't doing his impersonation of Eleanor Roosevelt in "Babes in Arms," but he did do it for our First Lady and she nearly burst a button.

No wonder Dr. Vic Fleming prescribed a rest for himself. He got that title for screen-itis, not sickness. In two years he directed "Test Pilot, did some work on "Too Hot to Handle," reshot "The Great Waltz," "The Wizard of Oz," practically all of "Gone," and, tired as he is, now wants to do Pulitzer prize winner, "The Yearling."

The silliest scene of the week was Bob Taylor being inoculated against ticks, just before doing a love scene with Hedy Lamarr in "Lady of the Tropics." Of course inoculation was for those little beasts he'll encounter in Idaho where he goes for "Northwest Passage." Every member of the cast and crew submitted to it.

Trans-Lux

News breaks forth at the Trans-Lux Theater this week with proud, little, peaceful Netherlands preparing to tell the world that any attack will be met with shot for shot. Here are unprecedentec pictures that make history, and almost at the same time Germany's Goering has a two-edged sword drill given him by the troops of the Italian-owned Libya, that huge piece of Africa bordering right on the Mediterranean.

Also in the news comes the Atlantic Fleet into the Hudson, and the opening of the New York World's Fair with President Roosevelt speaking. When there are vivid shots of the crashing of the Soviet airmen; Mrs. Lindbergh, with her children, arriving from Europe, and Mrs. Roosevelt posing with the new gowns she has purchased for the visit of the King and Queen of England.

Also included is the formal opening of the new French-Indo-China strategic highway; Lew Lehr again, at his funniest, cavorting with World's Fair monkeys. And current sports a plenty are represented in the remaining 30-odd news events.

The "shorts" include a colorful and interesting travelog on distant Macassar, located in the Dutch East Indies; a screen musical of Viennese waltzes, sung and played charmingly in artistic settings, and for golf fiends there is a most unusual short, "Smooth Approach."

*X THE WASHINGTON POST: TUESDAY, MAY 9, 1939 21

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Cleveland, May 8.—If there is, indeed, a possibility of reincarnation, among the things from which we would like to be delivered is a return to this world as a Cleveland baseball manager. The pay is all right, the hours are fair enough, but the job—well, it's painful, hazardous and sort of hopeless.

POVICH

Already the grandstand wolves have descended on bandy-legged little Oscar Vitt, shouting for his managerial scalp and booing him vociferously. And to be booed by the Cleveland fans, is to be booed by the best in the business. There may be no truth to the report that Cleveland game-goers eat their young, but they don't stop very short of being carniverous where Cleveland managers are concerned.

They hooted Roger Peckinpaugh out of his job here, and then they jeered kindly Walter Johnson out of the Indians' management. They fell upon Steve O'Neill, an old Cleveland hero, with such vigor that the front office was forced to fire him, and now Oscar Vitt is getting the works, what with the Indians floundering about in the second division.

But a Cleveland manager has not only the wolfish fans to contend with. For the fans, incidentally, there may be some excuse. They earnestly believe that their Cleveland clubs are made of pennant stuff and the manager who doesn't win pennants for 'em is a bum. Since 1920, when the Indians won their last pennant, a parade of managers have earned that appelation.

But what we were about to say was that the unhappy fellow who happens to be the Cleveland manager must combat not only the seven other clubs in the American League, and the fans of his own town, but he must battle an unpredictable front office and a hypercritical Cleveland press. They do not make it any easier for him.

Second-Guessing Festival

Now here around the baseball circuit is a baseball manager hamstrung by a city's baseball correspondents in the manner that it happens at Cleveland. Here, the baseball writers treat the game as something akin to life and death. In their columns, they pontificate. With eagle eyes, they watch a manager's every move, and if nobody happens to be warming up in the bull pen at a time when somebody should be warming up, Vitt is told about it the next day in blaring headlines.

When the Indians are licked, the game has not ended as far as the baseball correspondents in Cleveland are concerned. It is replayed on their sports pages and Cleveland managers are often made to look very stupid indeed by the second-guess. Editorials follow in the wake of Cleveland defeats and it was a matter of this type that once occasioned aroused Cleveland fans to picket the ball park with a threat of patronizing no more games unless a manager were fired.

The greatest travail of a Cleveland manager spawns, however, from the business office, where they do such very strange things. The latest example of hamstringing a manager, occurred only three days ago, and was a classic. Following a well-pitched game against the New York Yankees, Al Milnar, a southpaw, was called into the Cleveland front office and presented a check for $200 in the form of a bonus.

That may have been all right and a kind gesture, except for the fact that General Manager Cy Slapnicka, before presenting the check, called in news photographers to make a pictorial record of it. Reports have it that Manager Vitt was highly aroused, as well he should be. If the front office is doling out bonuses, he reasoned, they should do it in secret. They delighted Milnar, but they put themselves on the spot with every other player who might reason he deserved one of the bonuses and didn't get it

Cy Outwits the Press

There was much the same kind of incident engineered by Slapnicka last year. Midway during the season, elated by the brilliant work of Ken Keltner and Johnny Humphries, a pair of rookies, Slapnicka called them into his office, tore up their contracts and presented them with new ones calling for more salary. The smart general manager would not have removed the incentive for Keltner and Humphries to keep up their brilliant play to the end of the season in the hopes of getting better contracts.

On the opening day of the season, the Cleveland front-office put Vitt in Dutch with one Cleveland newspaper. Hearing that the paper planned to print a score card that might interfere with the sales of the Cleveland club's official score card at 10 cents a copy, Slapnicka barred the paper from the ball park. When he was overruled by Alva Bradley, owner of the Indians, and the paper permitted in the park, Slapnicka changed the numbers on the uniforms of the players thus rendering the newspaper's score cards of no use.

The suspicion is that the Cleveland ownership doesn't quite know what the baseball business is all about. A few years ago, when Walter Johnson was engaged in a bit of a row with Willie Kamm, Cleveland third baseman, Owner Bradley did not go to the front for his manager, he referred the differences between Manager Johnson and Player Kamm to Baseball Commissioner Landis, who very promptly dumped the ruckus back in Bradley's lap with the observation that it was none of his business.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 8.—Just about every celebrity in the sports world except Johnstown, who will hit the hay too early, will be on hand tomorrow night at Madison Square Garden to see what is confidently expected to be the worst baseball game of the season. This titanic contest between the puerile and the inept will pit Bob Ripley's "Believe It or Not" team against Lowell Thomas' "Nine Old Men." As an extra special attraction the proceeds of this charity show will go to charity, thus setting an example which will be righteously deplored by all the well-publicized humanitarians among United States sports promoters.

CONSIDINE

The contest, which is expected to play the same role in softball history that the building boom did in Tom Thumb golf, will feature such lean, lithe athletes as Heywood Broun, Cols. J. Reed Kilpatrick, Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle, Rudy Vallee, Gene Tunney, Ted Husing, Jack Dempsey, Jim Farley, Lew Lehr, Billy Rose, Clem McCarthy, Theodore Roosevelt, Frank Buck and his father, Gene; Ham Fish, Westbrook Pegler, Bugs Baer, Quentin Reynolds, Jimmy Durante, Fred Allen and an officer of minor rank, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker.

Mayor LaGuardia, who officiated at so many openings this year that he was made a fellow of the American College of Surgeons, will umpire the game. He will be assisted by Senator Bob Wagner, who is expected to rewrite his labor act immediately after watching Heywood Broun run out a bunt. To spare the feelings of the athletes, the two teams of muscle molls, who will be opening the Garden's summer season of filly softball, will not take the floor until the last celebrity is carried away on one of Col. Kilpatrick's starched shirts.

A man named George M. Ruth, who says he used to play a little baseball in his younger days, also will play.

What a Place to Train a Fighter

Dick McCann, who is publicizing Lou Nova these days, has taken a census of the animal life at Nova's eccentric training camp—a 300-acre estate that in its day served as a sanctuary for a mooing and lowing love cult.

There are nine tigers, five bengals and four sumatras, seven Asiatic elephants, one bull chimpanzee, one llama (housebroken), four species of monkeys, two African lion cubs, 6 months old; a herd of Guernsey cows, a Holstein bull, a family of white peacocks, a Canadian golden eagle and a dwarf stallion and a magpie with more of a vocabulary than Lou's sparring mates.

We want to be there, dressed in a natty little two-pants suit of armor, when Jack Miley—in a moment of fun-loving mischief—opens all the cages.

Johnstown didn't set a record when he won the Derby, but his owner, William Woodward, established some kind of a mark for confidence. A minute after the race a C. B. S. microphone was thrust into the banker's face. What should he do but reach in his pocket and extract a prepared statement! He cleared his throat and read off that he was very happy that Johnstown had won. The statement was prepared for him sometime Friday.

Sam Snead recently won one of the strangest bets in the often screwy game of golf. He bet a fellow that he could break 90 on his own Greenbriar course and use only one club. He left the naming of the club up to the other fellow, and that smart bloke demanded that Sam play the round with a sand wedge.

Snead shot an 87.

Joe Holman, the hefty Washington sports poet, comes up with the following:

Old "Iron Horse"

The old "Iron Horse," they say, is through,
Is bowed with years, and red with rust,
Refer to him as "Poor Old Lou,"
Who's passed along as all men must.
And in his passing cheer his name
As grandest in a grand old game.

The old "Iron Horse," they say, will find
His joints are creaking, eyes are dim,
The long, long trail is due to wind
Into retirement meant for him.
But Lou, the mighty, grins a grin
Reserved for baseball's fighting men.

The old "Iron Horse," I hope, will brace,
Reclaim his perch of bygone years,
Resume his pennant-winning pace
And thrill anew to fandom's cheers.
And if he does, all men, I know,
Will proudly chant, "I told you so!"

Martin Steals Home and Wins Game, 1-0

Dodgers Bow To Cardinals; Are Now Tied

Birds Deadlocked With Flock for Second Place in National Race

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, May 8.—The old Wild Hoss of the Osage, Pepper Martin, stole home in the sixth inning with the only run of the ball game today to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 1-to-0 victory over the Dodgers.

He had singled to start the inning, took second and third on infield outs, and went home as Brooklyn's rookie pitcher, Russ Evans, held the ball in his hand until it was too late.

The run gave Lefty Bob Weiland the decision over Evans in a tight pitchers' duel, although the Dodgers outhit the Cards, 6 to 5.

The victory boosted the Cards into a second place tie with the Dodgers in the National League standings.

Vander Meer Routed As Phillies Win, 8-7

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 8.—Those fighting Phillies came up with a five-run rally in the eighth inning today to knock Johnny Vander Meer out of the box and beat the first place Cincinnati Reds, 8 to 7.

The veteran Chuck Klein pinch hitting for Pitcher Max Butcher, hit the centerfield wall or a triple with the bases full, and then scored the winning run on LeGrant Scott's double to left.

Vander Meer, although wild, enjoyed a three-run lead going into the eighth and seemed well on his way to his first victory when the Phils started. With one down, Merrill May walked, Pinky Whitney, playing first in place of Les Powers, singled. George Scharein walked, filling the bases. Vander Meer pitched three straight balls to Spud Davis, then was replaced by Big Jim Weaver. Davis eventually walked, forcing in May and setting the stage for Klein's three-bagger. Emmett Mueller fanned, but Schott doubled, sending Weaver to the showers. Eugene Thompson replaced him and got Gil brack on a grounder to bill Werber.

Frank McCormick, first up for the Reds in the ninth, hit a homer, but relief Pitcher Walter Beck got Ernie Lombardi, Harry Craft and Wally Berger in order to end the game.

Cavarretta Breaks Ankle As Cubs Win

Hurt While Stealing Second; Giants Are Beaten, 4 to 2

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 8.—The Chicago Cubs won the ball game today, but they lost Right-fielder Phil Cavarretta.

In the second inning of the Giant game, which eventually went to the Cubs, 4 to 2, Cavarretta stole second, but in sliding into the bag his right foot caught and he broke his ankle. He was carried off the field and to a hospital, where an X-ray examination revealed the fracture.

Ironically, today's game marked Cavarretta's first return to the lineup since he was benched a week ago.

Big Bill Lee, the "lifesaver" of the Cubs' 1938 pennant drive, was the whole show in setting down the Giants. He held Bill Terry's outfit to nine hits and contributed a homer and two singles on the attack, scoring two runs. His first hit started off the three-run third-inning rally which put the game on ice for the Cubs and sent Hal Schumacher to defeat.

Johnstown, Full of Life, Gets Ready for Maryland Classic

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Full of life and apparently none the worse for his long train ride, William Woodward's Johnstown arrived this morning from Louisville, where he carved a niche in turf history by galloping to his Kentucky Derby victory. The big colt, turned loose in his stall, stuck his head over the half door and eyed those within range, as if he knew he had taken on some additional importance.

Johnstown was accompanied by T. M. Dorsett, Joe W. Brown's colt, seventh in the Derby and a Preakness eligible. They had an uneventful trip.

W. L. Brann's Challedon arrived a trifle later than did Johnstown, just as was his fate in the Derby. He also was in good shape and did not appear tired from the long trip.

Mrs. Page Takes Golf Medal Honors

Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., May 8 (AP).—Medal honors for the qualifying round of the Southern Women's Golf Tournament went to Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, Greensboro, N. C. whose sparkling 39—40—79 on the wind-swept seaside course led the field by two strokes.

Jane Cothran, Greenville, S. C., was runnerup with 40—41—81. Next came Mrs. Dan Chandler, Dallas, Texas, who was medalist in 1936 and 1937. She scored 40—42—82.

Three players were bracketed in third place with 835. They were Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky.; Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta; and Mrs. E. L. Donaldson, New Orleans city champion.

Mrs. Donaldson scored what is believed to be the first hole-in-one in Southern Women's Tournament Competition when her ball plopped into the cup on her drive from the 131-yard sixteenth hole.

Yanks Beaten, 5-3, by Chisox And Lose Lead

Smith Pitches and Bats Chicago Mates To Victory

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 8.—Edgar Smith, purchased only last week from the Athletics, pitched and batted the White Sox to a 5 to 3 victory over the New York Yankees, today, thereby dropping the world champions into second place in the American League behind the Boston Red Sox.

Frankie Crosetti, first man up in the first inning, belted Smith for a homer, but after that the Yanks couldn't do much of anything with the southpaw.

He kept things pretty well in hand after that for a time, but in the eighth his control left him, he walked three men in a row, and Smith won his own ball game with a single, driving the deciding markers across.

Ferrell gave up only five hits altogether, but his inability to find the plate cost him the victory. Smith was tagged for seven safe blows.

A walk, a single and a sacrifice netted the first White Sox run in the first inning. Two hits, a walk and an infield out, produced two more in the second.

After Crosetti hit his homer, the Yanks went scoreless until the sixth, when an error, Joe Gordon's double and an infield bounder produced a run. In the seventh, a walk and Luke Appling's second error of the game gave the Yanks their only other tally.

Late Blast Nets Indians Six Scores

Young Hurler Holds Tribe Well in Check Until Fatal Seventh; Hudlin Is Winner

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Cleveland, May 8.—The Nats maintained their regular routine today, collecting their fifth straight defeat. They acquired it in the seventh inning amid a hail of Cleveland hits that produced a large "6" on the scoreboard.

The ball game blew up in the face of young Ken Chase in that seventh inning, at a time when he was pitching three hit ball and holding the Indians scoreless. Chase lasted out the inning because he showed an amazing ability to pitch and duck in the same motion, but he lost his 1-0 lead and the ball game by a score of 6 to 2.

In the light of Willis Hudlin's clever pitching job against the Nats, the Indians' last three runs were entirely superfluous. Against Hudlin, the Nats were a puerile outfit today. In fact, the only Washington athletes to make hits were Taft Wright, Johnny Welaj and Jake Early. They collected a pair each to account for the even half dozen blows yielded by Hudlin.

Chase Has Edge

For a time it appeared that the one run the Nats gave Chase to work with in the first inning might be sufficient to win the ball game. Going into the seventh, Chase was outpitching Hudlin and apparently headed toward a dazzling triumph. And then things began to happen to Chase.

The first thing that happened was a walk he issued to Jeff Heath, and then he pitched a single to Ken Keltner. Then he saw the bases loaded when Jim Shilling beat out a bunt to Lewis. Then he saw two Cleveland runs score when Jimmy Webb belted a single into centerfield.

Chase should have escaped with only two runs' damage, but after Hudlin had sacrificed and Chapman had walked to fill the bases, Ossie Bluege, of all people, muffed a double play ball off Rollie Hemsley's bat. As the ball skipped through his legs into the outfield two more Cleveland runs scored. Then, on a cheap infield single by Trosky and a solid slam to center by Solters and Heath, the Injuns picked up their fifth and sixth runs of the inning.

Indian Threats Fizzle

Up to that seventh inning Chase appeared to be considerable pitcher. In the third inning, for example, after Webb had led off with a triple, Chase held the Indians scoreless, striking out two batters, and every other Cleveland threat had also fizzled.

Johnny Welaj inspired the Nats' first run when, with two out in the first inning, he beat out a hit to Keltner. Taft Wright promptly

Diekelman's Two Triples Aid Victory

Pitcher Slugs Hard And Scatters 9 Hits; Young Hoyas Shell Redinger Early

Georgetown University's yearling baseball club, with Dick Diekelman allowing but nine hits and contributing a pair of triples to his own cause, pounded out a 19-to-8 victory over George Washington Frosh yesterday at the Hilltop. One of Diekelman's triples drove three mates across the plate in an eight-run young Hoya splurge in the eighth.

Don Redinger, G. W.'s ace hurler, was touched for four runs in the first and three in the second, and from there on it was all Georgetown. McGuinnis took over Redinger's job in the seventh, but the damage had been done by that time. Feature of Georgetown's spree in the first period was Mlyniski's home run with two men on, and Bulvin got the Hoya's second homer in the fourth with nobody on base.

Despite the width of the score, only two errors were made throughout. Numerous bases on balls and 17 bunched hits spelled victory for the Hoya frosh who were defeated in their only other start this season by Maryland's cubs.

Nats, Still in Form, Lost First Ball Game 80 Years Ago, 35-14

Beaten by Potomacs In Game Setting Off Flourishing Series; War No Deterrent

By Al Hailey

The first game of organized baseball in Washington was played 80 years ago Friday and the Nationals—not too unlike the present-day Nats—started things off by losing, 35-14.

It was a sunny afternoon in 1860 when the Nationals trotted out on the diamond "south of the President's house" and were humiliated before one and all by another local baseball club known as the Potomacs.

The ante-bellum Nationals, however, were so irked that they demanded a return game, and on June 2, 1860, met the Potomacs again, defeating them by the narrow margin of 46-14.

There was some doubt about this victory, however, for yellowed newspaper accounts said that "in justice to the Potomacs, they were at a disadvantage, having lame fingers and swelled hands."

All in Scrapbook

All this came to light yesterday for the first time when in the brittle pages of a scrapbook filled with stirring accounts of the organization of the Nationals in 1859 and decade.

There is only a penciled notation to record the defeat suffered by the Nationals in that initial game which set off a series of baseball contests which thrived throughout the '60's—not even letting up when Rebel and Yankee guns were booming on the outskirts of the Capital during the War Between the States.

The newspaper accounts of the Nationals' ante-bellum exploits begin with the return game, which lasted some three hours but included only five innings.

Conducted with all the dignity of a drawing room musicale, the game was followed by the Potomacs being "handsomely entertained by the Nationals" at the old National Hotel. This apparently was the custom in the '60's for the scrapbook includes numerous menus listing enough varieties of food to stock a small army for several days.

The scrapbook, compiled by E. F. French, who was president of the National Base Ball Club from May, 1862, through March, 1866, contains clippings from the old Washington Gazette and the New York Mercury.

Perturbed by promotion stunts of baseball moguls, Robert H. Young, patent attorney, reluctantly brought out the treasured book yesterday, complaining, "All this centennial talk makes me sick."

Young, formerly chief of the patents section, Army Air Corps, and special assistant to the Attorney General, received the book as part of the estate of his father, Nicholas E. Young, who served as secretary of the National Association of Baseball Players and the National League for several years and who had a large part in building the game into what it is today.

"The significant thing about this book," Young explained, "is that it indicates baseball was being played on a large scale here 80 years ago—much the same as it is played today—and that it had been played for any number of years before that first game."

In most of the histories of baseball, the Washington National Baseball Club is credited as having been organized in 1867—actually the year the original constitution and bylaws were revised.

Organized in 1857

A copy of the first constitution of the club is included in the scrapbook.

The club was organized November 27, 1859, with James Morrow, president; J. L. Wright, vice president; A. P. Gorman, who later became senator from Maryland, secretary, and A. Dodge, treasurer. The text of the 1857 laws was printed in a pamphlet by Henry Polkinhorn's Steam Job Press.

The bylaws referring to dues and fines indicated the plane on which the game was conducted in those days, even though players used no gloves and were often tempted to give vent to strong language when stopping a hot grounder.

"Members, when assembled for field exercise, or at a meeting of the club, who shall use profane language, shall be fined 10 cents for each offense," read rule 3.

Anyone "disputing the decision of an umpire during the time of exercise" was also subject to a 10-cent fine. And any player so bold as to "audibly express his opinion on a doubtful play, before a decision of the umpire is given (unless called upon to do so) shall pay 10 cents," read rule 5.

Although Friday was revealed as a day filled with momentous portent to Washington, baseball moguls, apparently anxious to commemorate almost anything, somehow overlooked the day's significance. Not so much as a single bugle note was heard around local baseball strongholds. In fact, it is highly probable that none but Young and a few old-timers knew that May 5 meant anything in Washington's baseball history.

Detroit Suffers Its Seventh Straight Defeat of Season

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, May 8.—The Detroit Tigers lost their seventh straight game and skidded into last place in the American League as they bowed to the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 5, today.

Bill Nagel, young Philadelphia third sacker, broke a 5-5 deadlock with a homer in the ninth after two previous circuit blows by Bob Johnson had put the A's back in the running. Charley Gehringer hit a four-base blow for Detroit with two mates on the sacks in the third.

Each team got nine hits but Philadelphia made its blows good for 22 bases.

Quarter-Mile Aces Compete Here Saturday

Cronin and Miller Entered in A. A. U. Championship

A couple of Southern conference quarter-mile champions will match strides Saturday in one of the outstanding features of the Evening Star's games for District A. A. U. championships at College Park. They are Alan Miller, currently performing for the undefeated Terrapins, and Frank Cronin, freshman track coach who completed his collegiate competition last year.

Cronin won the conference outdoor 440-yard crown last May with a brilliant run of 48.3 seconds, the best time ever recorded by a Maryland athlete, while Miller romped home ahead of a fast field to win the indoor title during the past winter.

Cronin, who enjoys the unique distinction of winning a conference boxing title his first and only year on the squad, has been training for the games over a period of six weeks, working out while tutoring Terp rookies.

Miller has not lost in a dual meet this season with the exception of a close decision dropped to Foster, of Dartmouth, in an early-season meet.

Charley Yates Is Bracketed With 'Champs'

By the Associated Press.

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 8.—Charley Yates, most popular United States golfer in Britain since the halcyon days of Bobby Jones, was thrown into a "bracket of champions" when the draw for the British amauter championship was announced today. The tournament will be held at Hoylake, May 22 to 27.

With the defending champion in the third quarter of the draw are four former titleholders: Robert Sweeney, jr., 1937; Hector Thompson, 1936; Dr. W. Tweddell, 1927; and Cyril Tolley, 1920 and 1929.

Also in the select field of 167, the smallest in 14 years, is Hon. Michael Scott, winner in 1933 and the entire British Walker cup team of last year as well as the amateur champions of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland. One of the best bets among the British is Jimmy Bruen, young Irish amateur champion and stylish iron player.

One of the six Americans is sure to be eliminated in the second day's play when Powell Chrichton, jr., of the Winged Foot Club, and Bill Holt, of Syracuse, who received byes through the first round, meet each other. Yates matches strokes with Bruce Thompson in the first round and Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., tangles with John Cowley.

Ellsworth Vines, better known for his tennis playing, and E. J. Phillips of Philadelphia's Aronimink Club, also received byes into the second round where Ellsworth meets E. N. Ratcliffe and Phillips plays J. S. F. Morrison.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

Back in the East we have been curtseying to royalty and getting some pretty good exercise. This form of obeisance takes the strain off international relations and places it on the back suspender buttons.

A curtsey is a nod from the waist north. It takes a lot of practice before you can jack-nife.

Royalty will be visiting the fairs right along this summer, and we will all have our chins on the carpet like vacuum cleaners. It's the good neighbor policy plus bobbing-for-apples.

Hoya Rifleman Wins National Recognition

For the first time in the history of Georgetown University rifle teams, one of their marksmen this year brought back to his school a coveted All-Ameria rating at the conclusion of the National Rifle Association's collegiate matches, it was announced yesterday. Tom Lewis was the brilliant Hoya shooter who earned the honor, being the only collegiate marksman with an average good enough in open tournaments to be included in the tryouts for the U. S. Pershing Trophy squad.

With the strongest team in years, Maryland University was also given one of the All-America berths. George Meeks placed on the first team after moving up from second team rating last year.

Just as it dominated the team rankings in the national tournament recently, U. S. Naval Academy team was well ahead of all other aggregations in the Ten Golden Bullet selections, name given rifle All-Americas. Capt. J. W. McCoy headed a list of four on the team, the others being J. W. McConnoughhay, W. A. Stiles, jr., and J. C. Roper.

The Navy shooters scored 1,891 points in the prone, sitting, kneeling and standing matches of the N. R. A. five-man team finals, well ahead of any other team competing. Navy also carried off the individual championship, the trophy being given to its captain, McCoy.

Leo Walper, Tuning Game for Open, Has 69 in Pro Sweeps

Bob Barnett, Diffenbaugh Score 72s

Walper 2 Under Par At Indian Spring; Plans Heavy Practice Grind for 4 Weeks

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Starting an extensive month's practice for the National Open championship, Leo Walper, East-West highway driving range mentor, showed a half-dozen fellow pros that he's near the top of his game by winning the sweepstakes in a little get-together yesterday at Indian Spring with a 69, two shots under par.

Walper missed two putts of 4 feet and under and made only one long one, a 40-footer on the fourth hole for a birdie. The first hole, where his apparently perfect second shot rolled over the green in the deep rough, and the fourteenth, where he three-putted in anxiety for a deuce, were his only slips from par. The round could have been 65 if he had been pressed.

Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase professional, and George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, were each three shots back with one over par 72s, Barnett playing the front nine in one under, 34, and the back in 38, and Diffenbaugh going out in 37 and cracking par on the back nine with 35. Barnett had 14 pars, two birdies, and the thirteenth hole, where he was trapped and three-putted for a six cost him a possible tie.

Cliff Spencer, Beaver Dam, with 40-36; Mel Shorey, East Potomac, 37-39, and Al Houghton, 35-41, all tied with 76s. Host pro Al Jamison only played nine holes and was 3 over with 39, while gridster Charlie Malone made up a foursome in the first match and had 80.

Walper, who has been putting in 14 and more hours a day on his driving range since completing the winter tour where he grooved his game to its finest point, will spend several hours a day on the practice tee for the remainder of the week.

The two-time Middle Atlantic P. G. A. champion will play most of next week at Congressional, scene of the sectional qualifying rounds for the open, and if successful there he will leave for Philadelphia, scene of the event where Ralph Guldahl will defend his title, a week or 10 days ahead of time for extensive practice.

Walper has a putting touch that gives him confidence, and if he keeps his game tuned to its present pitch, he may cause the big timers a lot of worry in Philly.

He has not competed in the Open in several years, but said yesterday he has never had the desire to play in the big show that he has now, with the utmost confidence in his game.

Mrs. James Hill, Jr., Wins in Manor Play

Mrs. James Hill, jr., won low net among the members in the weekly ladies' day play yesterday at Manor, scoring 97-19—78 for a nine-stroke margin over the field. Mrs. D. S. Platt and Mrs. D. Fronheiser tied for second with 87 net, with Mrs. Fronheiser winning in the draw.

Mrs. N. J. Torlinski won first prize among the guests with 94-16—78, with Mrs. W. M. Moses second with 98-18—80. Both are Army and Navy members.

In the inside nine play Mrs. J. E. Hansbury, Mrs. John P. McMahon and Mrs. George N. Walker finished in that order among the members, while Mrs. E. B. Lockett topped the guests.

scored him with a lengthy triple to centerfield. But thereupon the Nats' attack subsided almost completely. From the second until the eighth they could make only two hits, a single by Welaj in the third and a single by Early in the seventh.

Their only reply to the Indians' outburst in the seventh was a single run in the eighth, and that was acquired with the help of a pair of Cleveland errors. Grimes muffed Case's grounder and a bit later, when Trosky attempted to complete a double play with a throw to second, the ball hit Case on the back and he scrambled to third, from which point he scored on Welaj's infield out.

Notes of the Nats — Walter Masterson made his first big league appearance today, pitching the eighth inning for the Nats . . . he escaped undamaged despite allowing two bases on balls and a hit . . . Ossie Bluege, in two games here, has personally left 12 runners stranded on base . . . Jake Early's catching and hitting of late has been such as to threaten Rick Ferrell's job as Washington's first-string catcher . . . Pitcher Harry Kelley has joined Cecil Travis, Charley Gelbert and Rick Ferrell as a convalescent . . . He was confined to his hotel today with a grippe attack . . . Travis in Chicago with Gelbert, is expected to rejoin the Nats in Detroit, but Gelbert will go direct to Washington when discharged from the doctor's care.

Mrs. F. D. Letts scored a surprise in the qualifying round of the women's French High Commission Cup play at Chevy Chase yesterday, winning the medal with a 91 and also posting low net score of 91—13—78.

Mrs. Bishop Hill, club champion, and Mrs. Landra B. Platt, runner-up, were two strokes back with 93 each, minus 5 handicaps, while Mrs. L. W. Cameron had 96. Louise Claytor, defending champion, was an automatic qualifier.

Mrs. Letts meets Mrs. Oscar Coolican in the first round tomorrow morning. Matches will be continued Thursday and Saturday with the finals next Monday morning.

Countess Van der Straten, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, qualified for the match play rounds with 103—17—86, and will play Mrs. Cameron in the first round.

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

By Walter Johnson,

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Outfielders draw down the bulk of the points in the Man of the Month contest on the basis of the Nats' performances at Cleveland where they lost a 6-2 game yesterday.

To Taft Wright, four points, because he made two of the Nats' six hits, including a three-bagger that produced their first run.

To Johnny Welaj, three points, because he made two hits and stole a base in addition to playing a sparkling game in the outfield.

To Jake Early, two points, because he made two of the Nats' hits.

The totals:

Taft Wright	8	George Case	3
Jimmy Wasdell	8	Charles Gelbert	2
Johnny Welaj	7	Alex Alexandra	2

The Brighter Side

By Damon Runyon

We wrote in this column some time ago about a gentleman in Newark, N. J., who we said claimed he could foretell the sex of an unborn child.

RUNYON

Our comment on this was that the idea was not so hot. We allowed that knowing the sex of the child in advance would remove all the biff that is involved in guessing whether it is going to be a girl or a boy.

Now then, that gentleman in Newark, N. J., has written us a nice polite letter. In fact, he wrote it some time ago but it has just caught up with us. The gentleman's name is Sidney A. Fortel, and right off the bat he patiently explains to us that what we were talking about was the determination of the sex, while what he was talking about was the pre-determination of the sex, which is something entirely different.

This Mr. Fortel boldly asserts that he not only claims but that he can prove that he pre-determines the sex of a child. In short, that he can fix things so before conception that a couple can have whatever sex they desire, though he admits that if the conception has already taken place nothing in this world can change it.

"I have received countless letters from Maine to California asking me to please help them have the sex they desire," writes Mr. Fortel. "How happy it would make them. As one couple writes they would like to have another child but are afraid it is going to be another boy and they have two boys now. Another couple writes just the opposite."

Increase in Population?

He wants to know if we do not think that the couples and thousands of others could find pleasure and happiness if they could have the sex they want. He asks:

"Would not the population increase? Some might think that in time the sex of the population would be unequal, but according to the letters I receive the desire for boys and girls is about evenly divided. How would you feel if you had five daughters and no sons, or vice versa? Something like that happened to me. I had seven sisters, six still living, and no brothers. It took me 20 years of study to find out why."

Mr. Fortel says he is hoping we will see his side of the pre-determination matter, and we see it all right, but not in an altogether favorable light. Even if he can do what he says, we still do not think the idea is so hot.

When it comes to certain things, we suppose we are one of those fellows who should have lived in the Dark Ages. We have superstitions and presentiments that have no place in an intelligent mind in an enlightened era.

For instance, we think the sex of a child is something that may well be left to providence. It has worked out all right so far. Personally, we would consider it bad luck to monkey with human destiny that way.

Another Argument

If scientists do not consider this sound reasoning, we will have to admit that there is another thought behind it. This is the theory that no matter what Mr. Fortel says about the equality of the demand, too many couples would want sons and these sons might turn out to be more of those busted horse-players we see around the race tracks.

As to how we would feel about five daughters and no sons, or vice versa, it would depend largely upon their ages. If they were from 1 month to 7 or 8 years, we would feel swell, because young kids are pretty cute. If they were all in their teens we would feel terrible. That is when they are just so many pains in the neck, male and female.

If Mr. Fortel insists on his pre-determination business, we say he would be better employed pre-determining not the sex of the children, but their character and disposition. If he will pre-determine them to be reasonable and tractable that will be all right with us.

If he will pre-determine them to be grateful to their parents and unselfish, we will be the first to organize a Fortel-for-President club. If he will pre-determine them not to think that no other human beings ever lived in this world or endured disappointments and tribulations before they were born, we will insist that Mr. Fortel be given a diamond-studed Congressional medal.

Or if he will pre-determine the children to have respect for their elders and for the privacy and property rights of others and to be a trifle less ruthless than is the juvenile vogue of the day, we will have the name of Fortel emblazoned in letters of perpetual light across the skies. Oh, yes! About the population increasing under Mr. Fortel's plan. Brother, the population will keep on increasing even if the married folks have to continue taking potluck on the sex thing.

Washington-Lee came from behind to defeat Anacostia High School, 5-3, yesterday on its own field. It was the ninth victory against three defeats this season for the Little Generals.

Rockville High Defeats Little Hoyas, 16 to 1

Cleveland Fans 15 In One-Sided Game At Garrett Park

With Dick Cleveland hurling six-hit bal and fanning 15, Richard Montgomery High diamonders of Rockville swamped Georgetown Prep, 16 to 1, yesterday on the Garrett Park field, the losers scoring their lone run on a luck tinted homer in the fifth.

Devine, third-sacker of the Little Hoyas, lofted a fly between right and center field and Butt and Marsden, Rockville outfielders, collided while attempting to make the catch and the ball went for a home run.

Butt had hit a homer for the winners and Anders also connected for the circuit, while Burgee, Anders and Day collected three safeties apiece, two of Day's going for doubles. Devine with a homer and single led the losers' weak attack.

By the Associated Press.

Caracas, Venezuela, May 8.—Baby Oriental, Cuban flyweight champion, was reported dead today after being knocked out last night by Freddie Miller of Cincinnati, but he lived to deny the report.

He was removed to a hospital after being knocked out by a terrific punch which landed in the region of his liver.

Battle Jack Finishes Two Lengths Back in Feature; Winner Pays Backers $11 Ticket

By Walter Haight,

Pimlico, Md., May 8.—Rough Time, aptly named gelding, whose career has been one of alternate misfortune and triumph, added the Jennings Handicap, a $5,000 race, to his list of stake successes today. Victory came the hard way for Jockey Hilton Dabson was forced to put the son of Grand Time to punishment to hold a neck margin at the finish of the 6 furlongs. The A. C. C. Stable's Sun Egret was wearing down Rough Time at every jump and closed two lengths in advance of J. W. Y. Martin's Battle Jack.

Winner of the Rowe Memorial at Bowie, Rough Time came back today and turned in creditable time of 1:12 for the 6 furlongs and placed his name with those of Wise Counsellor, Noah, Single Foot, Balko and other Jennings winners.

Victor Pays $11.60

The crowd of 10,000 installed Sun Egret the favorite in the field of eight. Rough Time paid $11.60. Alfred G. Vanderbilt, president of the Maryland Jockey Club, presented Owner-Trainer J. Yancy Christmas with the Jennings Trophy, emblematic of Rough Time's victory.

It was an "all-Maryland" victory for the Marlboro-owned horse who was capably handled by Jockey Dabson, of Greensboro, in this State.

Battle Jack was out of the gate like a streak and had a length lead at the end of the first furlong. However, Dabson was allowing Rough Time to find his stride and the gelding soon displaced Battle Jack as the leader. He opened a length and a half lead as the stretch was reached. Sun Egret came with a rush along the rail to save many lengths at the final bend and Jockey Al Shelhamer pounded him along the rail. He was gaining rapidly on Rough Time when Dabson put the gelding to punishment. Rough Time responded with the speed necessary to withstand the gallant challenge of the Bedwell-trained colt.

$13 Daily Double

The Daily Double, after running into telephone numbers most of the meeting, shrunk to a mere $13 today with 948 persons holding tickets on the "3 and 2" combination which represented a pair of heavily-played favorites.

The Calumet Farm sent Lisco, a daughter of Cohort to the post among maidens and the filly romped off with the opening purse by three lengths. Hugood was second with ease over Cele Carney. Lisco was a $4.40 shot and stepped the four and a half furlongs in 0:55.

LISCO, off alertly, opened a good lead at once and was not threatened seriously while winning with some speed in reserve. HUGOOD went closest to the pace from the start but would not menace the winner while put to intermittent punishment. CELE CARNEY went to contention boldly on the outside, but weakened in the closing stages. REFRESHING lacked speed and had no excuses.

SECOND RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 2:46½. Off at 2:47½. Winner, W. M. Elder's ch. f. BURNER, in close quarters between horses at the first turn, disposed of WALLI and MAEWHISK to get to the front leaving the backstretch and held away thereafter. MAEWHISK was rated behind WALLI'S pace for the half and could not threaten the winner seriously while hard ridden to the end. CACKLE TIME was carried slightly wide by the winner at the first turn and failed to respond when placed to a drive. SIR TIME was outrun for the half, improved his position on the outside and closed with good energy.

Daily Double, Lisco and Burner, Paid $13.70.

HOP, showing good speed and fencing ability, went to the front in the opening quarter, drew out and was in hand during the final stages. SLIEVEREIGH was rated well off the pace for a mile, improved position sharply when asked and was rated at the end behind stablemate. JACAMAR went well placed throughout, under good handling. GUATEMALA was closest to the early pace and weakened badly in the late stages. TROLIGHT lost rider at the fourteenth fence. LATERAL PASS fell at the fifteenth fence.

BABY LAMB was sent to the front at once, withstood the early bids of SNOBBISH LADY and was kept to a drive in the stretch to offset the late challenge of SHENUIT. The latter, forced to be taken up sharply soon after the break, came to the inside entering the stretch and was wearing down the winner at the end. ASTER LADY dropped back gradually after showing early speed. WILDMUTE went evenly.

ROBESPIERRE, slow to begin, came wide for racing room, improved his position steadily and, under good handling, was up in the concluding stride. LITTLE PINKEYL was hard handled from the break, disposed of WISE SHINE to take command between calls, but could not resist the winner while holding on stubbornly. BLAZING HEAT, outrun to the stretch, came with a bold rush. HOOT TOOT had early speed and pulled up sore.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $5,000 added. The Jennings Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:46½. Off at 4:53½. Winner, J. Y. ROUGH TIME, going in his best form, took command over BATTLE JACK leaving the backstretch, drew out, but had to be placed to intermittent punishment to stave off the closing bid of SUN EGRET. The latter, unable to menace the leaders in the opening stages, saved ground entering the stretch and closed with good energy along the rail. BATTLE JACK, first away, tired gradually after being displaced. BUNNY BABY, badly outrun to the stretch, came with a bold rush on the outside.

Dear Al.

W. L. Brann, the affable owner of Challedon, has high regard for the ability of former Jockey Lou Schaefer, his trainer. While Challedon was being unloaded today following the trip up from Louisville, Brann talked to the paper boys. Schaefer knows what he wants and operates accordingly, regardless of others. Brann laughed as he told about an incident last week. He said he told Schaefer that he was going to bring a group of friends to the track the following morning to see Challedon work. "What time is Challedon going on the track?" he asked Schaefer. The trainer looked at him and replied, 6:30 o'clock." Brann asked, "Is it necessary that Challedon work so early." Schaefer came back with, "Well, that's the time he always works," and he walked away. Brann and his party saw Challedon work out the next morning at 6:30 a. m. The scribes couldn't get an alibi of any sort out of either Brann or Schaefer. The owner and trainer just agreed with the consensus that there was too much Johnstown in the Derby. However, their eyes sparkled when somebody suggested something about mud for the Preakness. Brann has had a keen love for horses all his life. He was raised in Indiana, just across the river from Louisville. He left his home at 18 and headed for New York to make his fortune. When he left he told friends that he was going to make a lot of money and that some day he would breed a horse that would win the Kentucky Derby. He did make a lot of money and he did have a good second in the Derby. He was just unfortunate enough to run into a Johnstown year. Alan Clarke, trainer, owner and proprietor of the Huntington Farm, is walking on crutches these days. His "trick knee," a relic of his long baseball career, broke down on him. He will not be "fired and turned out," however. The boys were arguing about what price the entry of Johnstown and Gilded Knight would be in the Preakness. One scribe suggested they would be one peanut to ten elephants.

BILL.

First race—Dark Rapture qualified as a pretty fair sort when she ran second to Sally Pass By last out. She should win in this maiden field. Kanalbert appears to be improving with every start. Minoroa is well-bred and speedy.

Second race—Distract displayed good speed to finish second to Tuttle curio last Friday and probably needed that conditioner. Sun Antioch whipped Apprehend on a slow track last start, is in form, but rates second best on a fast oval. Gold Knightess showed a good effort in the race with Sun Antioch and should go well.

Third race—Promoter met a good field in his first start of the season when he suffered a seven-length defeat by Sapelo. He is nicely placed today. Sailor's Knot was a hot favorite in his last, but fell. Angus beat cheap ones last week and moves up in class.

Fourth race—Scorch, off to a poor start, displayed good speed to get up for third place behind Ponemah. She figures slightly best over these fillies. Corsica dropped a nose decision to Sally Pass By last week and looks like the one to beat. Annie Alone, favorite in that race with Sally Pass By, can better a poor effort.

Fifth race—Chatabit gets the call in this affair by virtue of consistent in-the-money form with good company last year. He is the class and needs only to be fit to register today. Maroc didn't fancy the mud at Havre, but may prove hard to beat on a fast track. Of Course has shown flashes of speed in recent races and should show.

Sixth race—Gilded Knight and Sea Captain, comprising the Wheatley Stable entry, stand out as the best thing that has gone to the post this spring. Gilded Knight won the Chesapeake and beat El Chico in New York. Sea Captain is a hard-hitting stablemate. Day Off should better a poor performance in the Chesapeake. Sun Lover for show.

Seventh race—Evening Light, second to Greeny last week and a winner at Havre, gets high figure here. This filly is good and will be hard to beat. Banner Girl has shown disappointing efforts in recent races, but can do better. Chance in this field. Miss Fixit, third to Connie Plaut Thursday, should take care of the others.

Eighth race — Kinross finished gamely to earn third honors behind Brown Twig last outing and is apparently improving with racing. He is well-placed here and should get up. Miss Ponne will be the one to beat off her winning effort over Count Tetrarch at Havre. However, she is reported sore. Count Tetrareh figures next in line.

Best bet—Wheatley Stable entry.

Among those from here who will attend its courses are Daniel J. Callahan, jr., an assistant cashier of Riggs National Bank, and Vincent A. Sheehy, jr., an assistant trust officer of Washington Loan & Trust Co., both of whom will graduate this year.

Charles R. Fadeley, an assistant cashier, and Henry K. Dierkoph, an assistant trust officer of Riggs National Bank, and John M. Christie, of that institution, will be among next year's graduates. Kenneth O. Hulse, an assistant cashier of Hamilton National Bank; John E. Monk, manager of the credit department of the Bank of Commerce & Savings, and Paul J. Seltzer, as assistant treasurer of American Security & Trust Co., will enter the school this season. During their two weeks' course of resident work at the university they will be addressed by some of the ablest financiers in the United States, at the general assemblies.

Bankers to Hear Brown

Constantine Brown, foreign news commentator, will be a speaker at the annual convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association at Hot Springs, Va., June 8-11, it is announced by President Hilleary G. Hoskinson, of that organization. Mr. Brown's subject will be "Whither the World?"

First speaker to be announced for this year's convention program, Mr. Brown is a native of Iowa and has spent a great part of his life in Europe and Asia as a newspaper correspondent. He reported the second Balkan War and the World War and was abroad almost constantly from 1920 to 1930, being at Smyrna at the time of the destruction of that city by fire. He toured Europe recently to make a fresh study of economic and political conditions.

Maryland Bankers

At the recent forty-fourth annual convention of the Maryland Bankers Association at Atlantic City, W. H. B. Anders, of Union Bridge, was elected president to succeed John J. Ghingher, of Baltimore. T. Rowland Chaffinch, of Denton, was elected vice president of the association; Eugene G. Grady, of Baltimore, treasurer; Matthias F. Reese, Baltimore, secretary, and William Marriott, of Baltimore, secretary emeritus.

Girl's Essay Wins $1,000

Mary A. Hopkins, 18, of Port Deposit, was awarded the $1,000 scholarship offered by the association for the best essay on banking. She was among 160 Maryland high school seniors who competed for the scholarship, which provides a four-year course in any standard college. Sara Brown, Snow Hill, was selected as alternate to receive the scholarship. Runners-up who won $25 prizes included Hazel Metz, of Barton; Eileen Mudd, of Berwyn; William Rittenhouse, of Easton, and J. Carroll Feeley, of Baltimore.

Investors whose savings in thrift and home-financing institutions are insured up to $5,000 by the Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation increased in number by nearly one-third durng the last 12 months, Nugent Fallon, general manager, announces. Reports of the corporation now show that 2,240,000 savers have protection of their savings by the $118,000,000 Government instrumentality, as compared with 1,699,000 who were thus safeguarded a year ago.

On April 22 there were 2,127 insured institutions, including 1,369 Federal Savings and Loan associations and 758 institutions under State charter, their combined assets totaling $2,196,418,000. "Big Board" Elects 7 New Governors

New York, May 8 (AP).—Members of the New York Stock Exchange replaced seven of their governors today in a non-controversial annual election. The new governors are expected to continue the liberal policy begun with the election battle of two years ago which resulted, last year, in the employment of William McG. Martin, jr., as president and the election of Edward E. Bartlett, jr., as chairman of the board of governors. Bartlett was re-elected today. Martin continues as president indefinitely "at the pleasure of the board."

The new governors, all brokers, are: Robert J. Hamershlag, George E. Kantzler, Harry H. Moore, John Rutherfurd, J. Gould Remick, all of New York, and W. W. Lanahan, Baltimore, and Malcolm W. Greenough, Boston. Re-elected governors are Howard B. Dean, John M. Hancock, Richard Pigeon and H. Allen Wardle, all of New York.

Total sales to dealers in the United States and Canada, plus overseas shipments, in April were 158,969, compared with 182,632 in March and 109,650 in April last year.

Sales to consumers in the first four months of the year amounted to 446,790 cars and trucks, compared with 329,456 in the comparable period last year.

Sales to dealers in the United States in the first four months stood at 501,872, against 275,376 a year ago. Total sales to dealers in the United States and Canada, together with overseas shipments, were 648,253 against 407,930 in the like 1938 period.

Stockholders' Meeting Adjourns in Disorder

Philadelphia, May 8 (AP).—The annual meeting of the Philadelphia & Reading Coal & Iron Co., now under reorganization proceedings, broke up in disorder today when it was adjourned because of the lack of a quorum without fixing a new date. The commotion came when Archibald Palmer, New York attorney representing a small group of debenture holders, opposed the motion for adjournment by Martin P. McDermott, vice president, presiding in the absence in New York of President Ralph E. Taggart. McDermott said less than a 700,001 majority of the stock was represented. Palmer demanded that proxies be shown.

There was more turmoil during which Mary G. McDonough, of Springfield, Mass., who said she owned ten shares, also opposed adjournment. She said she had come all the way from New England to find out from the company why she had not been receiving dividends.

3 Brokers Indicted On Oil Fraud Charges

The Department of Justice and the Securities and Exchange Commission reported yesterday the indictment of George M. Saunders, alias Arthur G. Thurman, also known as George Thurman, of Brookline, Mass.; Jesse J. Levinson, alias R. McCartney, also of Brookline, and Joseph A. Lincoln of Needham, Mass., for violations of the fraud provisions of the securities act of 1933, in connection with the sale of oil royalties.

The 15-count indictment was returned in the Federal District Court at Boston, on January 19, 1939, and kept secret pending the location and apprehension of the defendants.

Producer Cuts Copper to 10 Cents

New York, May 8 (AP).—The price of copper was cut ¼ cent a pound to 10 cents today by a leading producer. Other copper producers, with one exception, continued their quotation at 10¼ cents. The exception, Phelps Dodge Corporation, was quoting 10½ cents a pound.

Today's cut was the first since April 21, when a bottom of 10 cents was reached. On April 26, prices were raised to 10¼ and 10½ cents.

Wheat Yields To Rains in Winter Belt

Early Declines Up to 1⅝ Cents Shaded By Later Rally

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 8.—A wet weather map recording rains in many sections of the winter wheat belt caused selling of wheat futures here today that depressed prices more than a cent a bushel early in the session.

However, late buying based on reports that precipitation had been light in many districts where most needed helped the market to rally, but July and September contracts recovered only about ½ cent from early declines of as much as 1⅝ cents. May wheat, representing the old crop, developed independent strength after the early break. No actual grain has been delivered as yet on these contracts.

Weather dominated the trade. The map showed precipitation ranging from showers to good rains in eastern sections of the hard winter wheat belt, western portions of the soft winter wheat belt, northwestern Kansas, central Nebraska and southwestern South Dakota. Scattered rainfall was reported elsewhere in the belt but the main area of precipitation apparently missed some important dry regions in southwestern Kansas and the Panhandle district. Furthermore, the forecast was for fair and warmer weather over most of the belt.

After dipping to 72⅜ and 72½, respectively, July and September contracts rallied slightly and the market closed ⅜-1⅛ lower than Saturday, with July and September quoted at 72¾-72⅞. Corn was unchanged to ⅜ off, July 50⅞, September 51⅜-51¾, oats ⅜-⅞ down, rye ½-⅝ down, lard 5 to 8 lower.

Security Issues In April Largest Since December

New York, May 8.—Corporate capital issues in April aggregating $258,809,392 were the largest of any month since last December and almost equaled the total brought out in the first three months of the current year, according to the Commercial and Financial Chronicle today. Of the total corporate issues, $77,060,042 was for new capital purposes and $181,749,350 for refunding. In April, 1938, corporate security flotations totaled only $78,433,361, of which no more that $11,683,361 was for new capital. The new capital figure for last month, which exceeded all previous months since September, 1938, included $28,699,230 Eastman Kodak Co. common stock and $40,000,000 Texas Corporation 3 per cent debentures due 1959.

Private placements of new securities dropped off sharply in April, amounting to only $3,180,000, or a little more than 1 per cent of total placements; 25 per cent of sales in the first quarter year were carried out privately.

The total of new issues of all kinds (other than direct obligations of the United States Government) in April totaled $355,940,511, compared with $352,212,019 in April, 1938, and $319,660,002 in April, 1937.

Steel Operations Continue to Fall

New York, May 8 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will decline 0.8 of one point to 47.0 per cent of capacity, compared with 47.8 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A week ago output was at the rate of 52.1 per cent of capacity while a year ago it was 30.4 per cent.

Prices Firm in Morning, Yield at Close; Lower Steel Rate, Copper Cut, Chills Traders; April Motor Sales Also Adverse Factor

New York, May 8.—An irregularly lower price trend was all the stock market could offer the breathless ten or a dozen investors who wandered into Wall Street today looking for an honest dollar. Prices were firm during the morning but gave ground during the afternoon and ended the painful session with an insignificant loss of 0.09 point after fluctuating within the narrow range of 0.41 point all day. Only 349,630 shares changed hands.

Explanations for the late softness included the poor tenor of the steel-operating rate for this week, another outbreak of weakening copper prices, a drop in April sales of General Motors as compared with March and rains in sections of the wheat belt which belied the futures of this staple for a loss.

After the few traders in the Street had tired of asking each other whether they thought prices would rise or fall, and ignored the answers, they turned their attention toward Washington. The sight was not a pleasing one—which scarcely comes under the heading of news when writing of Wall Street's reactions, but this particular glance appeared to the ranking heads of finance to be more than ordinarily rank.

Supreme Court Week-Ender

In the first place they didn't take kindly to the boat trip enjoyed over the week-end by the President, Harry Hopkins, and that formerly famous figure in the financial world, William O. Douglas, late of the SEC and now a member of the Supreme Court. And it wasn't because anyone begrudged any one of the three a pleasant cruise. It just seemed to us young and old mossbacks that a judge of the highest court should keep himself aloof from politics, as they have done pretty assiduously for a hundred and fifty years and more, and the bets are a million to one that politics grabbed a major share of the conversation in that trip on the Potomac.

When Mr. Hopkins, lately a WPA worker and now Secretary of Commerce, was piered off he hastened to a press conference and predicted a steady and moderate rise in business for the remainder of the year. The Secretary thought the recent convention of the United States Chamber of Commerce had been entirely too pessimistic and reiterated that he didn't belong to this school of thought. In fact, he thought the business recovery will continue. His own bureau last week said that the business recession had continued for the last month or more and would show a fall when the April figures are made public.

News Not Encouraging

Certainly today's statistical data contained little if anything to justify calling the present business trend a recovery. April's steel ingot output was reported to have been the lowest, on a weekly basis, since last September. The percentage rate of operations was down 12 per cent from March to a low since last September. Steel operations for this week were marked down to 47 per cent, which compares with 47.8 per cent the previous week and 52.1 last month. General Motors' sales for April were off 9,450 cars and trucks from the March total. Kennecott cut copper to 10 cents a pound, a reduction of ¼ cent, and Anaconda followed.

On the war front the Street, for a couple of weeks, had been feeling reassured that there would be no outbreak but this complacency was shaken today. First-hand observations, made by the head of one of the country's largest financial institutions, and a student of domestic and foreign affairs, were that war threatens more now than at the time of the Munich agreement.

Fractional changes, mostly on the downside, characterized the leading stocks today. Steel was the most active and edged down an eighth. General Electric, Chrysler and American Radiator were next in line and also lost moderately. One of the few changes of larger proportions, at least among the leaders, was a 2-point loss in Westinghouse, which was ex-dividend.

Treasury Bonds Strong

Listed bonds were cheerful in a quiet session today. United States Treasury obligations continued their long advance, which now is forcing even the longest bonds toward the 2¼ per cent yield level. Most speculative rails were better, but a few active bonds closed lower. Foreign dollar bonds did well on peace moves and the apparent readiness of the Administration to lend more taxpayers' money to Latin America. Dealings amounted only to $3,510,000, par value.

The further improvement in Treasury bonds was by far the most significant incident of the session. Gains ranged from smallest fraction to 18-32 point, in the formal dealings and this placed ten issues at record highs. In late counter trading the advance was continued. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations joined the upswing. Some of the leading corporate bonds likewise moved to record highs, and others remained at their historic tops.

Medium-priced railroad liens were mostly up by small fractions, and only a few issues here and there took the contrary course. Borderline and default rails were irregular. Alleghany Corporation bonds still were unmoved by the recent stock transfers. Utility holding bonds and convertibles in general were dull. Local traction bonds advanced on further indications that unification plans are being pushed.

German and Italian bonds were steady, despite the week-end augmentation of the axis into a military pact. Polish obligations held at former levels. Scandinavians remained in demand, and some sizable gains were recorded in Australian and Canadian bonds. Chilean bonds led the Latin American group to better levels on the indications of loan negotiations which possibly will be extended to cover all of South America.

The largest employment increase was in the maintenance of way and structures group.

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that banks in 101 leading cities decreased their commercial, industrial and agricultural loans $3,000,000 to $3,841,000,000 in the week ended May 3.

It was the second week of decrease after six consecutive weeks in which similar loans increased at the same banks.

Life Insurance Here Rises to 658 Millions

1938 Gain 3.7% Over 1937 While National Advance Is 1.3%

Hartford, Conn., May 8.—A total of $658,216,000 ordinary life insurance was in force in District of Columbia at the end of 1938, an increase of approximately $23,485,000 or 3.7 per cent over 1937, according to the estimated annual figures released today by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau. These figures are exclusive of group and industrial insurance.

Ordinary life insurance in the country as a whole increased approximately $1,000,000,000 or 1.3 per cent in 1938, bringing the aggregate to $75,595,209,000, exclusive of group insurance. Continuing the steady uptrend since the depression low, the current volume marks an increase of approximately $5,600,000,000 or 8 per cent since 1934.

A total of 34,064,418 individual ordinary policies were in force at the end of 1938, or more than one for every family in the Nation, exclusive of industrial and group policies.

Every section of the country registered gains in 1938, with the West South Central section comprising the States of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas leading with a rise of 4.3 per cent over 1937. The Pacific Coast was runner-up with a gain of 2.6 per cent and the South Atlantic States were third with 2.4 per cent.

Texas led the individual States with a jump of 6.8 per cent in ordinary insurance in force, followed by Florida with a gain of 4.5 per cent and Arizona with 4.1 per cent.

Motor Industry Uses One-Sixth Of Steel Output

Cleveland, May 8.—Release of Steel magazine's annual tabulation of steel consumption in the United States reveals that the automotive industry again leads in consumption of that commodity, taking 16.88 per cent of all production for its use.

This is the seventh consecutive year that the automotive industry has led all others in its demand on American steel makers. Tonnage amounted to 3,155,906 gross tons against total consumption of 18,692,957 tons.

Other leading consumers included the following in order: Building and construction, 2,762,334 tons or 14.77 per cent; containers, 1,854,900 tons, or 9.92 per cent; exports, 1,406,067 tons or 7.52 per cent; railroads, 1,215,384 tons or 6.51 per cent; oil, gas and water industries, 941,641 tons, or 5.04 per cent, and machinery, 663,041 tons or 3.55 per cent.

The 18,692,957 gross tons comprising the total production shown in the Steel survey represented 90 per cent of the total tonnage of finished steel rolled in 1938.

Chicago, May 8.—For the second consecutive week, the volume of display advertising placed by retailers in the newspapers of 80 leading cities was greater than that used during the corresponding week of last year. Advertising Age reports for the week ended April 29.

The gain was not sensational—an increase of 3.9 per cent—but gives additional indication that retail advertising volume, and retail business volume, will exceed last year for the first six months. During the week, the total retail advertising volume placed in all of the newspapers in 80 reporting cities was 20,993,698 lines, compared with 20,199,796 in the same cities last year.

Cotton Futures 40 Cents Lower To 35 Higher

New York, May 8 (AP).—Old-crop cotton deliveries received the bulk of support in today's market while forward months wilted. The closing range was 7 points higher to 8 lower.

Difficulty of obtaining the staple for spot delivery, brokers said, was behind the firm price position of the near months. Trade shorts, nervous over possibility of further advances, were forced to bid up prices to obtain contracts. At the same time differences between old and new months continued to widen. The spread between May and December at the close was 109 points. Bombay actively replaced July holdings with more distant deliveries.

Nazi Influence Is Declining, Brazilians Say

80 Tourists Here Predict Big Gains For American Trade

This warning was voiced last night by a group of 80 Brazilians here at the Lafayette Hotel on a Nation-wide tour of America.

Citing recent swift steps by their government to check Nazi political and economic inroads, they pointed out that Americans have suddenly come to Brazil with better commercial offers and a vastly increased interest in improving trading relations. They attribute this to the sudden realization by this country of the extent of German commercial and political penetration.

According to Dr. Omer O'Grady, Brazilian-born, American-educated engineer, Germans enjoyed extensive trade with his country largely because they offered easy credit, low prices and many services which lead to good commercial relations.

"I want to emphasize the point," he said, "that this is the only reason German commercial relations grew to such an extent. Otherwise, the Brazilians would have much rather bought American goods, from friendly, personal reasons."

Another American-educated Brazilian, Fernando Eduard Lee, said that as a result of America's new interest, he expects to see a notable rise in American sales in Brazil.

According to Francisco de Paulo Pinto, a Brazilian hardware merchant, Brazilian dissatisfaction with the Nazi barter system has turned the traders to markets in this hemisphere.

Hamilton Denies Foreign War Fear Hinders Recovery

Troy, N. Y., May 8 (AP).—John Hamilton, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said tonight "the record disproves that New Deal alibi" that European war threats cause "our lagging economic recovery."

"This is a political depression, not an economic one. It has its roots in the political actions of the New Deal," Hamilton declared in a speech prepared for delivery at a rally of the Rensselaer County Republican Committee.

He quoted figures showing the average price of industrial stocks declined 3.2 points from January 1 to April 29, 1939, in Great Britain, as compared with a drop of 26.37 points for a similar list in New York.

Citizens Choose Nominating Group

The Montgomery County Civic Association last night appointed a nominating committee, headed by Stephen James, to draw up a slate to be presented at the next regular meeting.

Other committee members are: Mrs. John C. Shaw, Frederick P. Lee, Richard B. Barker, Carey E. Quinn, Richard Akers and Washington I. Cleveland. It was announced that the annual banquet will be held June 15 in the Manor Club.

Judge Newman To Answer Paper's Attack

Jurist Charged With Shirking His Work In Police Court

Charges published yesterday that Police Judge Hobart Newman shirked his work brought from Judge Newman's home a promise of a public statement when the series of articles which made the charges was concluded.

Judge Newman has been absent from Police Court and reported ill for several days. He was said at his home yesterday to be running a high fever, following serious bronchitis, and unable to come to telephone to answer questions about the charges against him.

Judge Newman was declared, in the first of a series of articles by Lester J. Finnegan in the Washington Daily News, to be the target of a recent flood of criticism against the Police Court.

The News article said that of 240 cases assigned Newman for jury trial, at the beginning of April, he impaneled juries for only three.

The official report of the Police Court was quoted as showing that last year Newman handled only half as many jury cases as any other judge.

New Dealers Reported Planning Western Boom

Seattle, May 8 (AP).—Howard Costigan, secretary of the Washington Commonwealth Federation, said tonight New Deal advocates were considering a conference, probably at Salt Lake City, to mobilize Western support for a Liberal Democratic candidate at the party's 1940 national convention.

Costigan reported he recently conferred with President Roosevelt, but added he "didn't assume from the discussion that the President was interested in a third term."

Newswriters to Go Horsey At Press Club 'County Fair'

Mule Handicap to Be Feature Event Of Frolic at Charles Town; Hatfields And McCoys Also to Lock Horns

The men who write the Washington news and the men who help make it, together with a half dozen Presidential candidates, will join in a session of speeches and sports at the Charles Town (W. Va.) Jockey Club Saturday for the National Press Club's annual "county fair."

And—with a limited number of exceptions—the picnic is strictly stag.

Mule Handicap

The gentlemen of the press are scheduled to participate in the "Gentlemen Riders' Handicap." Each rider will have a handicap, i. e., a mule, with four furlongs to go, and no time limit.

Meanwhile, top-flight jockeys astride thoroughbreds, will battle down the stretch in a single, no-photo-finish race.

A bit of pomp and pageantry will supplant speed for the moment when a full regiment of Kentucky Colonels and the National Press Club Post of the American Legion compete in a flashy drill.

A Congressmen-correspondents' feud will enter its third year when the lawmaking Hatfields take the field against the newspaper McCoys in what is described as a baseball game. Twice the opposing nines have met, with honors even and the scores slightly odd.

Mrs. Whitney to Ride

Society equestriennes will include Mrs. John Hay Whitney, on Enthusiasm; Mrs. Helen Baker Horst, on Golden Key; Mrs. Edward Cashell, on Ratchett; Margaret Cotter, on Flashing Steel; Constance Moore, on Run Out; Ann Leith, on King Dominant, and June Brainerd, on Rocky Mount.

Then there'll be the Navy Band, the West Virginia American Legion Boys' Drum and Bugle Corps, golfing contests and horseshoe matches and a few rounds of pugilistics interspersed with some eloquent oratory. Prize chickens will be exhibited—on the dinner plates.

Rites Tomorrow For T. F. Langley, of Internal Revenue

He was a member of Mount Pleasant Lodge of Masons and the Kentucky State Society. His survivors are his wife, Mrs. Mary C. Langley; a daughter, Miss Mary Frances Langley of this city; and a son, Theodore C. Langley, New York.

Mrs. Loftus Rites Will Be Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Annie N. Loftus, wife of Frederick C. Loftus, who died yesterday at her home in the East Clifton Terrace Apartments, will be held at 11 a. m. today at the Hines funeral chapel, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, with burial in Glenwood Cemetery.

Besides her husband she leaves a daughter, Miss Mabel L. Loftus, of this city, and a brother, James Mayhew, of New York.

James S. J. Clark, Former Cement Man, Dies at 76

James S. J. Clark, 76, native of Montgomery County, Md., and for many years in the cement business in Washington, died yesterday at his home at White Oak, Md. He retired six months ago of ill health.

S. J. CLARK

He was a former director of the Washington Rotary Club and a member of the Vannsville Farmers Club of Prince Georges County. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Margaret E. Clark; two daughters, Mrs. R. Robertson of Baltimore, and Mrs. Margaret Wetherill, of Montgomery County; and five sons, Kenneth F., James E., George W., John R. and M. M. Clark, all of Montgomery County.

Funeral services will be at 3 p. m. tomorrow at St. Mark's Church, Fairland, Montgomery County, with burial in the church cemetery.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

One bridge tournament that is genuinely international is the annual World Bridge Olympic, originated by Ely Culbertson and played last week under the sponsorship of the American Contract Bridge League.

Hand number 17, shown in today's box, was not bid exactly according to the experts by Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Banfield when they played it during the Olympic game run by his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Banfield, of New York, but it was cleverly bid just the same. The only unfortunate part was that after Mr. Banfield had made the psychic spade bid for a lead the opponents reached another contract, but fortunately not the right one. They were set one trick.

Had Mr. Banfield's double of six clubs been allowed to stand, his wife would have opened a spade, and the ruff plus the ace of trumps, would have set the contract. A diamond lead would also set the club slam.

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ♡	2 ◇	3 ♣
Pass	3 ♠	Pass	5 ♠
Pass	6 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Declarer has a problem of playing against five trumps. He can succeed by establishing a cross ruff.

Here is the analysis:

South opens the diamond king. East wins and leads a small trump to dummy. When the bad trump break shows up, he must not continue trumps. West leads club king and East discards diamond six. South wins and probably leads a diamond. East accepts this force, then puts West in with heart ace to lead clubs. If North ruffs the fourth round of clubs, East overruffs, and then has to risk cashing heart king, as East still has three hearts and West has only two trumps. When this trick gets by and also in all other variations of play declarer finishes out the hand with a straight cross-ruff.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

Long a sore point with Government employes, five-year-old rule prohibiting a worker from seeking a transfer to another agency without first getting permission from the head of his own agency has at last been rescinded.

A recent memorandum to heads of Government agencies and departments from Budget Director Smith killed the ruling of February 19, 1934, which, it has long been believed, was issued at the instigation of Secretary Ickes. In effect, it stopped an employe from fishing for another job in another office without first serving notice to his present boss that he had ideas of moving. Honored more in the breach than the observance, it nonetheless was bitterly resented as an unfair deterrent to an employe's freedom of action.

President Stengle of the A. F. G. E. wrote Acting Budget Director Bell about the matter some weeks ago. The question was referred to Personnel Council Chairman Davenport who recommended quick repeal, thus voicing a feeling held by the majority of forward-looking personnel directors in the Government.

Patent Office employes are invited to tour the Group Health Association Clinic, at 1328 I street northwest, Thursday evening. The medical staff will be present and explain the services and equipment. The first tour will begin at 8:30 p. m. and others will start at 10 minute intervals until 10 p. m. Employes are asked to choose any time that suits their convenience.

Further information may be obtained from Patent Office floor leaders Thomas B. Hudson, Joel Resnek, Clifford Hultin, Alfred B. Goodall, Peter H. Firshtig and Arthur E. Donnelly.

Agriculture Local No. 2, U. F. W. A. reports that a special committee set up by the Personnel Office has recommended "an extensive revamping of the rating procedures within the Government service," with special bearing on the Farm Security Administration.

The committee found that F. S. A. ratings were below the general department level, but ascribed the trouble mainly to the rating system itself. The report pointed to the difficulties which might face F. S. A. employes seeking tranfers.

The smartest college boys pass the best civil service examinations, the Civil Service Commission implies in a recent report on 500 college graduates who came off with the highest ratings in the 1938 junior engineer examination. Writing back to their colleges for information about them, the commission found that more than 60 per cent stood in the top quarter of their class and 83 per cent were in the upper half.

Another conclusion the commission draws from the study is that the best qualified university students don't necessarily gravitate to private employment. At least in a depression they don't.

U. F. W. A. Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Nelson has recently toured the Veterans Administration Central Office "dungeons," major grievance of Local 15, the Federal Record announces. Conditions, it appears, would strike terror into the heart of Osa Johnson or Bring 'Em Back Alive Buck. Three floors below street level, clerks work in rat-infested rooms "where the daylight never penetrates" and where rat poison only complicates affairs, since "frequently dead rats lie around two or three days." Miss Nelson emerged safely, a quick check at U. F. W. A. headquarters reveals.

Bob Burns Says—

This sure would be a wonderful world if everybody could pick and choose just exactly what they wanted. It's cryin' shame that things ain't progressed that far yet, but I guess it'll take 10 or 12 more years before the politicians give us everythin' we want.

Every tooth in Uncle Hod's head ached him somethin' awful. And it sure was a comfort to know that there was a painless dentist in the neighborhood. But he hadn't been in that dentist's office more than five minutes before he came stormin' out of the door, sayin' mean things about that dentist. Grandpa Snazzy stopped him and says, "What's wrong, Hod? Did he hurt you?"

Hod says, "No, it ain't that. He insulted me! Imagine that dentist offerin' me GAS—when he knows darn well I'm a director in the electric light company!"

Woman Hurt in Fall

Marguerite Spurr, 39, of 154 V street northeast, suffered back injuries yesterday when she fell down the stairs from the second floor of the Department of Health Building, 515 D stret northwest.

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

Margaret (Peg) Patterson is from Old Virginia. Orphaned ward of a Washington broker, who is her godfather, and in whose office she is employed. He sends her to look over the antiques in a Washington residence which is being auctioned. She is musing about her love for Hewitt Gill, ambitious salesman in Otto Nelsons' brokerage office, who seemingly loves Peg—for a purpose.

Chapter II

Peg had seen the first day of her life in her great-great-grandmother's cradle; she had lived the whole of her 19 years in an ancestral home in Richmond facing the proud flowing sweep of the James. Last year, when her father and mother had died so tragically in an automobile accident, she had sacrificed everything to pay debts. Afterward nothing remained but $1,000 for her and another thousand for her brother, Duncan, who was an army lieutenant stationed at the Munitions Building, in Washington, to handle publicity for the Air Corps. She had come to Washington immediately to live with Aunt Mehalie Keith because it seemed there was nothing else she could do.

Not that there was anything wrong about that. Aunt Mehalie was a quaint, proud, diminutive little spinster who lived mostly in the past when the Keith home had been a bright Georgian dwelling, gay with dinners and cotillions and hansoms folling up to the wide fanned door.

Aunt Mehalie's home was still gay in an antiqueish sort of way, quite like Aunt Mehalie herself. Colonial dames met there and sipped tea from pink luster cups and sat, rather prim and stiff, on Empire chairs. Cave dwellers, those Washingtonians of ancient lineage who had once looked with disdain upon the political and diplomatic invaders, and even upon the White House itself, came and wondered what Washington was coming to, socially.

"There was a time when money didn't mean a blessed thing here," they said one to the other. "Indeed, when the change of an Administration affected real Washington society not at all." But it was all different now. They didn't approve; they were horrified. "There was too much social looseness everywhere, too many barriers down.

Prophecy Fulfilled

Suddenly Peg sat upright on the blue brocaded sofa, remembering. "Why, I'm actually in Washington," she thought. It seemed strange and completely amazing that she was. Not until this minute had she remembered that day at the Richmond carnival when she and a group of her girl friends had surged into a palmist's tent. The palmist had said in her fiery way, "You won't brood about anything I tell you, will you, Miss?" And she had assured her that she wasn't the brooding type.

The palmist had told her then that she would live in Washington. "You'll know great happiness there, Miss, and yet great misery. Danger, too. I see dark shadows across your palm . . ."

Afterward the girls had been excited. "Oh, Peg—just think! Washington!"

"Diplomats in gold braid! You'll probably marry a title."

"Champagne flowing and spies all around you!"

"Spies?" Peg had been incredulous. "How silly! We aren't at war."

"Why, Peg Patterson, don't tell me you don't know that Washington is just jammed with spies. Hundreds of 'em, snooping around, finding out things. Goodness, you can't read the papers and not know that Washington is a veritable web of spies."

Peg had laughed at them. "Phooey!" she had said. "You've all been reading Mr. Oppenheim's thrillers. And will you please tell me just how I shall live in Washington? Can you picture me leaving mother and dad and home?"

But she was in Washington, thought Peg with her heart thumping in her chest. Dark shadows? "Oh, dear God, could there ever be any darker shadows than the ones I have already known?" A truck swinging drunkenly into the road and a little sedan hurled backward over an embankment . . . mother and dad crushed and broken and lifeless beneath it . . .

A Stranger

Peg's thoughts cut off sharply. She looked up quickly at the young man who stood before her. He was tall and slim and charming. Bridegroomy in spats and cutaway adorned with the indigenous gardenia, with new silk hat in his right hand and new gray gloves and a walking stick in his left.

By way of replying without replying, Peg allowed her curly lashes to rest on her cheeks long enough for anyone who did not wish to stay to go. But the young man did not go. Peg glanced up again. He was regarding her solemnly, one brow cocked quizzically.

He said, indicating with a nod the do-not-touch sign: "Does that sign mean you or the blue brocaded affair you're sitting on?"

Spontaneously they smilled at each other and Peg thought what lovely teeth he had. She always noticed teeth and eyes and hair. His eyes were slate gray with little laugh crinkles in the corners; his hair was just the kind she liked—sandy with a not-too-damaging wave.

"Look here," he said, "I could say, 'Haven't we met before?' or 'Well, Mary Brown, fancy finding you here!' or something equally as trite. But I'm not a bit good at that sort of thing. I haven't even a smidgen of the smasher's blood in my veins."

"Not even a smidgen?" said Peg, and her smile was quite gone now. This young man, she thought, is trying to pick her up. She said, not very civilly: "Are you sure of that? Are you sure you didn't rig yourself up, definitely plush-horse, with the sole purpose of knocking some simple-minded, easily duped little girl into a tizzy?" She wanted to turn away, but somehow she couldn't. He held her with his eyes.

What seemed minutes later, he said: "This isn't my 'simple-minded-easily-duped-little-girls' costume. I wear a long red opera cape and a pair of blue galoshes on those occasions. I'm dressed up so snazzily today because I've been best man at a wedding."

Then he said: "Look here, I'm Anthony Covington and I'm rather a decent sort after I've had my coffee in the morning. I suppose I didn't have a right in the world to speak to you like this. . . ."

"You supposed quite corectly, Mr. Covington," said Peg, icily. She got up then and moved through the crowd to the Van Dyke portrait and began making notes for Mr. Nelson. She had been standing there precisely one minute when Anthony Covington came up behind her and stood looking over her shoulder at the painting. He said, scoffingly:

Plea for Friendship

"Imagine a guy being famous for making a style of beard popular!" When Peg neither laughed nor turned to look at him, he went on, evenly: "Listen, if you knew all about me you couldn't be so unfriendly. I—I haven't got but six months to live. You wouldn't want me to spend my—my last days—lonely and unhappy. . . ."

Peg swung around and faced him then, her face suddenly pale. She was looking straight into his gray eyes, her lips trembling a little. "How dreadful," she said, on a small broken note, and her fingers came out and touched his arm in the merest gesture of sympathy.

"It would be," said Anthony, grinning suddenly, "if it were true. But it isn't. You probably couldn't kill me with a cannon. And don't look so disappointed because I'm not going to die . . . at least, not as long as the sort of luck I've had in the last two years holds out. I spent them in Spain—then China. It seems I no sooner arrive in a country than the place begins to fall to pieces around me."

"Then, why," said Peg furiously, "don't you stay home!"

"You'll have to take that up with the State Department," he told her brightly. "They pay me $2,500 a year, which gives them the right to send me pretty damned near where they please."

Then he was grinning at Peg again, seeing the sudden soft light in her eyes. "Truce?" he said, quickly.

Peg smiled. There was something about this Anthony Covington that couldn't be resisted. There was something about his gray eyes and the quick white flash of his smile and his hands: he had clean, strong, perfectly shaped hands.

"Yes, truce," she said.

Almost without realizing it, they were sauntering through the big mansion together, talking—snatches of conversation that began just anywhere and stopped the same way.

"Look at that 1812 spinet over by the window. It would be the height of something or other to hear one of Benny Goodman's lads whooping up a jam number on it. Vieni, vieni, vieni, or something."

Childhood Secrets

"I sat in one of those stiff-backed Hitchcock chairs for four hours once. I had let the air out of every tire parked around one square block of Richmond. I was 8 and simply mad about a freckled party who worked Saturday afternoons at a garage. In my own meek little way I was drumming up business."

"I bet you were a cute little tire-letter-outer."

"I wasn't. I had pig-tails and braces on my teeth. Mother stayed awake nights over me. She could see me as a debutante, not really coming out. Sort of creeping out. A flop at dances, whipping off to a dressing room because I couldn't bear to be stuck. Definitely stag-line poison, you know. But she worried needlessly because I didn't come out . . . there wasn't even enough money when I was 17 for me to crawl out . . ."

37 Methodist Bishops Get Assignments

12 Prelates Reassigned By United Church; Judicial Body Named

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, May 8.—Thirty-seven bishops of the Methodist Church were given permanent assignments tonight by the uniting conference that sealed the plan of union for the three separate branches.

One provision of the design for merger was that bishops should be assigned to one jurisdiction, or section of the country, for life. They may be reassigned within the jurisdiction. Before the union, a bishop could be sent anywhere.

In the committee report adopted tonight, 12 bishops were reassigned.

Delegates elected the nine members of the judicial council of their new church today, then rejected a suggestion that they substitute the word "cup" for "wine" in their communion ritual.

Opposing the ritual substitution proposed by Chester A. Smith, New York lay delegate, Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, of Boston University, said "all the delegates feel as does Brother Smith about alcohol—they hate it" but the conference should not attempt "to edit" the ceremony on such short notice.

Elected to the judicial council were:

The Rev. Francis R. Bayley, of Baltimore; the Rev. J. Stewart French, Bristol, Tenn.; Martin E. Lawson, Liberty, Mo., layman; the Rev. George R. Brown, Liberty, N. C.; H. R. Van Deusen, Scranton, Pa., layman; Vincent Paul Clark, Winchester, Mass., layman; M. A. Childers, San Antonio, Tex., layman; the Rev. W. G. Henry, Atlanta, and the Rev. Walter C. Miss Shoemaker based her action on the charges made by Mrs. Stinson in her suit to cancel a $230,000 trust fund she set up for herself, which was to go to Stinson upon her death.

Mrs. Stinson is awaiting Justice Luhring's ruling on phases of her charges of "conspiracy" by which she may win annulment of her marriage to Stinson.
